POETRY.

THE DYING YEAR'S COUNSEL.

Now the year is dying fast,
Many hours he counted last,
Deathly chills are o'er me cast,

All his children stand around,
Uttering not a word or sound,
As with spells of magic bound.

Twelve there are, I dimly mark
All their figures in the dark,
Hovering near the patriarch;

Like the sons of Jacob old;
Waiting each one to be told
What the future shall unfold.

Though the father's race is done,
All his children, one by one,
Have fresh races to be run.

Lean down, I bend my ear
O'er the faint expiring year,
And these words I seem to hear:

January, let the weight
Of thy charities be great,
For the poor and desolate.

Let thy brother close behind,
Sheathe his sword of cutting wind,
When he doth the homeless find.

March, when days are getting long,
Let thy growing hours be strong
To set right some wintry wrong.

April, when ploughed-up earth,
Bid each scented shower give birth
To some seed of deathless worth.

Merry, music loving May,
Let thy life be not too gay
For unselfish work each day.

June, thy beauty is a snare,
To waste time in visions fair;
Of vain dreaming, oh, beware

July, as thy thunders roll,
Pierce each doubting mortal's soul,
With the truth of God's control.

August, in thy sultry heat,
Teach some lesson, pure and sweet,
To the reaper at thy feet.

Then, September, scatter wide,
With thy sheaves well satisfied,
Seed corn for heaven's harvest tide.

Sweet October, fill with praise,
Rich and glowing as thy days,
Every poet's heart that lays.

And November sad—a psalm,
Tender, trustful, full of balm,
Thou must breathe in spirits calm.

Then the youngest of them all,
Whom we "dark December" call,
Brightest light on thee shall fall.

Christmas logs blaze on the fires;
Christmas carols sing the choirs;
Christ's own love each heart inspires.

This is all I heard, for now,
Pressing the year's death cold brow,
I rise up with many a vow.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR'S DAY.

It was three weeks before Christmas, but the Widow Bertram's little cottage on the edge of a lonely forest, in the northern part of Maine, was fragrant with the spicy odor of pine, holly and hemlock, great branches of which were heaped upon the floor of the small kitchen, while Milly's little fingers were tired enough of breaking off the prickley twigs and making them into bunches for her mother and brother Jim, who deftly twained them into graceful garlands, wreathes and festoons; for soon there would be a call from the great cities for Christmas greens, with which to deck their homes and churches; and the Bertrams hoped, by supplying this need, to earn enough money to keep them comfortable through the long cold winter, for they were very poor, and sometimes had hard work to drive the wolf from the door; and Jack Frost comes early and stays late in that far Northern State.

So seven-year-old Milly had to help all she could and her hands were very skillful, and her bright eyes were quick in picking out just the right spray, or bunch of berries, and she worked away steadily, only stopping occasionally to hug Mrs. Araminta Cleopatra Fitz James, a curious little specimen of a doll, made of a corn-cob, and dressed in a bit of faded calico to which Milly had given so high-sounding a name as some compensation for other deficiencies, and which she loved with all her affectionate little heart.

"There, mother, isn't that a beauty?" said Jim, holding up a wreath he had just finished of rich, heavy evergreens, dotted with the bright scarlet holly berries.

"The prettiest one of all," said Milly. "I wonder who will buy it?"

"It don't matter so long as we get the money," said Mrs. Bertram, sighing. "I had hoped to give you children a little taste of Christmas this year, but it has been such a bad season, I am afraid there won't be anything for toys or candy; even if we can pay the rent."

"Oh, never mind us, mother," said Jim, cheerily. "Perhaps good luck will come with the New Year; and anyway, we've all we want, only I wish Milly could have a real nice doll instead of that scarecrow yonder."

"Don't call my dearest, sweetest Araminta Cleopatra names," cried Milly, catching up the corn-cob, and showering kisses upon its rather scrubby head.

"You ought just to see the dolls I saw in the toy store at E——," continued Jim, "with real hair, and cried when they were pinched, and natural as Mrs. Battle's baby. I tell you, they'd make you open your eyes. You'd never look at Araminta Cleopatra Fitz James again."

"Yes, I should," said Milly, loyally, "though I would like to have a real dolly; but I've never seen one."

Mrs. Bertram sighed again and softly wiped away a tear; but Jim exclaimed: "I've thought a splendid plan!"

"Oh! what?" asked Milly.

"You see this stunner of a wreath I've just made?"

"Yes."

"Well! I think I deserve something for the extra pains I've taken, so I'll write a note, telling whoever buys it about you, and asking them to send you a doll; and we'll tie it in among the greens, and who knows but some kind-hearted person may find it and do as we ask. Wouldn't it be jolly if they should?"

"Too lovely for anything!" exclaimed Milly, and she capered around the room at the very idea, ending her impromptu dance by embracing Araminta Cleopatra, and declaring that she should never love her any less even if she had a hundred china babies that cried just like Mrs. Battle's Tommy.

So that evening, when the pine knots that served both for fuel and lights were blazing merrily in the open fireplace, Jim hunted up an old inkstand and pen, that had not seen the light for many a day, earned a sheet of paper from a neighbor, by bringing her a pail of water, and together he and Milly composed the letter, badly written and queerly spelled, but filled with a sort of pathos that must find its way to any heart of the holy Christmas tide:

"Wil the one who gits this reeth please send a dol to my sister Milly. She never saw one 'cept Araminter Kleopatra Fitz James who is nothin but a corn cob, we are offul poor and make up greens to sel. Milly Bunches and mother and i tie. We [illegible] a Krismas or New Year's since a tree fell on father and killed him. please be so kind as to send the dol it would make us glad. Milly is seven and i am ten.
Yours truly, JIM BERTRAM.
"[illegible] Corners' B—— County Me."

This epistle Jim read aloud with a great deal of pride, and then he and Milly tied it securely in among the graceful hemlock branches, while the mother laughed at their foolishness, even though she hoped and prayed that they might not be disappointed; and two days later the "postman wreath," as the children called it, was packed with hundreds of others and shipped to New York, where it was brought by an uptown dealer and sold to an old gentleman, who carried it home to his daughter, and she pronounced it "exquisite," gave it the most conspicuous place on the parlor wall, without, however, discovering the little missive so snugly hidden away.

It was Christmas night, and Mr. Langdon's spacious house was brilliant with fire and gaslight, that shone resplendent and lit up the garlands and wreaths that bordered the costly paintings and decked the frescoed walls; while music resounded through the apartments, and in carol dance and game children and grand-children joined to celebrate the happy festal day. But in a low chair by the fire sat the youngest darling and pet of the household, Gracie Langdon, a fairy-like little creature, with soft blue eyes and golden curls clasping tightly in her tiny arms an immense waxen doll—a present that day from good old Santa Claus.

She sat very still, and slowly her blue eyes travelled around the room until they were finally raised to a picture of the Madonna and Child above the mantel over which hung the "postman" wreath made by the little children so far away in their lonely home.

"Oh, grandpa, come here!" called Gracie, suddenly. "What is it, Pussy?" asked Mr. Langdon, approaching the tiny rocking chair.

"There is something white sticking out from that pretty wreath," said Gracie, pointing with her wee forefinger.

"So there is. Here, Freddy, come and see what this dainty lady has discovered."

At the summons a stalwart young fellow left the group around the piano and approached.

It was but the work of an instant for him to take down the garland, dislodge the paper from its hiding-place, and hand it, with a low bow, to his little cousin.

"Why, it's a letter!" she exclaimed. "You read it, grandpa."

The whole company had now gathered round, and, putting on his eye glasses, grandpa read aloud Jim's note; and, as he finished, exclamations of wonder and pity sounded on all sides:

"What a strange letter-box!" "Poor children! something ought to be done for them;" while little Gracie, with her big eyes filled with tears, ran to her grandfather sobbing; "Oh, grandpa, I am so sorry for Milly! Here take my new dolly and send it to her for a New Year's gift."

"To be sure I will," said Mr. Langdon, catching the generous little maiden in his arms and giving her what she called a "bear's hug," while for some reason his glasses did not seem so clear as usual.

It was the first day of January, clear, crisp and cold; but it was hardly a happy New Year to the Bertram household, for the greens had not brought as much as they expected, and, after the rent of the small house and farm had been paid, there was little left for food and clothes, and the mother's heart was heavier than ever, and Jim had to whistle to keep up his spirits as he chopped away at the pile of wood in the yard.

Milly, too, was feeling rather disconsolate as she stood by the window making "peep holes" with a hot penny in the thick frost which completely covered the panes, while Araminta Cleopatra looked more forlorn than ever, perched on the sill by her side.

With her eyes at one of the "peep holes," Milly saw a wagon come lumbering slowly up the road and stop at the gate, and a man's voice was heard without inquiring if "Miss Milly Bertram lived there;" and immediately the door was burst open and in rushed Jim breathless with excitement, closely followed by a neighboring farmer bearing a large box.

"There, Miss Milly," he said. "I found that down at the 'Corners' for you, so I thought I'd bring it along. Guess somebody's been sending you a New Year's present. But I can't stay to see, for my horses won't stand this snapping weather; so good morning and many happy returns of the day."

"The same to you," cried Milly, "and thank you so much for bringing it up. Oh, Jim, do hurry and open the box!"

But her brother was already at work with his hatchet, and the cover was quickly removed and revealed the beautiful wax image, the loveliest thing Milly had ever beheld.

"Oh! is it alive?" she asked in an awe struck tone, clasping her hands; and it was some time before she ventured to touch the dainty doll dressed in satin and lace, who had such bright eyes that opened and shut, curls of real glossy hair, and when a spring was touched cried "Pa pa, mamma" in such a life-like manner. Indeed, she could hardly be persuaded that it was not a real living child.

Pinned to her skirts was a paper on which was written, "A New Year's gift for Milly Bertram from her new friend, little Gracie Langdon. Her name is Blanche Lillian White."

"Oh the dear, darling little girl!" cried Milly. "But look! there are more things in the box."

And, indeed, there were. And as package after package was drawn forth, and disclosed dresses and shawls for both Milly and her mother, clothes and an elegant pair of club skates labeled for "James Bertram, who thought only of his little sister," and lastly a purse filled with gold and silver, the joy and ecstacies of the children knew no bounds, while the mother wept from very gladness.

That was, indeed, a happy New Year's Day; and when in the evening they sat before the fire of pine knots, the mother, wrapped in the new shawl, and with the old careworn look quite banished from her face, Jim polishing his new skates, on which he had enjoyed a fine time in the afternoon, and Milly with Blanche Lillian White and Araminta Cleopatra Fitz-James side by side in her lap, Jim remarked: "It must be nice to make other people happy; and next Christmas Gracie Langdon shall have the very handsomest box of evergreens that goes into New York city, in return for Milly's New Year's gifts."

BY N. B.

"Now, Mary, dear, you're foolin'!"

The speaker was a tall, broad-shouldered young Irishman, with straight, clear features, frank, loving eyes and a well-shaped, intelligent forehead, from which his curly black hair was brushed carelessly.

The young girl addressed was, as may be supposed, of the same nationality as himself, but one might have gone a good way to find a prettier damsel than she, with her rosy cheeks, bright, sparkling eyes and wavy brown hair. Her white, plump arms, that many a ball-room belle might have envied, were thrown over her head, and her eyes were snapping with coquettish merriment.

"Now, Mary dear, you're foolin'!" and Tim's black eyes looked lovingly into her brown eyes.

"No, indeed, I'm not, Tim Murton. I mean what I say," retorted Mary, with a toss of her head; "so, do go along, and don't bother me!"

"Ah, now, Mary, jewel, just name the day, and then I'll go," persisted Tim coaxingly.

"No, I'll do nothing of the kind!" replied Mary, more mercilessly than ever. "I guess I'll have to break off our engagement, Tim. You're too bothersome altogether!" she added, after a little pause.

"Oh, Mary!" gasped poor Tim, receding a step or two, "break off the engagement, darlint, when I love you so? You can't mean it, sure?"

"Yes, I do mean it!" persisted this wayward damsel, who liked nothing better than to torture her lover, who was taking her coquettish words so dreadfully to heart. "I guess you needn't come any more, Tim!"

"Are you in earnest, Mary, honey?" asked Tim, lugubriously.

"To be sure I am; can't ye see that?" cried Mary, longing to laugh at his woebegone countenance; and, without bidding him good-by, she tripped gayly into the house.

As for poor Tim, he stood for a moment as if his last hope had deserted him, and then turned away with a melancholy step.

He was walking slowly along, still lamenting over the wilfulness of his capricious little sweetheart, when a step sounded near him, and a hand was laid familiarly on his shoulder, while a cheerful voice called in his ear:

"What's the matter, Tim, my boy? Why, considerin' the direction ye come from, ye oughtn't to look in that forlorn fashion."

"I'm in trouble, Mike," said poor Tim, in a mournful tone, as he laid his hand on that of his friend.

"Well, out with it, boy," cried Mike, as Tim paused without any further explanation; "let's know what it is, an' maybe I can help you. Is it any mischief of that little witch of a Mary's brewin'?"

"Yes; nothing else would have troubled me a bit," replied Tim; "but she's given me the mitten, Mike, an' I don't know what to do."

"Whist! Give ye the mitten, has she?" exclaimed Mike, scratching his pate, as if to bring any idea that might lodge therein to the surface. "That's hard! But I'll tell ye, Tim," he added, after a pause, "I've known Mary ever since she was a little thing, and then she used to plague the life out iv me. She only wants to bother you a little, that's all; for she'd as soon jump off the top iv the house as give you up, my boy. But she deserves a good scare for her naughtiness, an' I'll tell you how to bring her round."

"To be sure I do, lad," replied Mike, "and now I'll tell you how to get her back again."

"Ye will, Mike?" repeated Tim eagerly; "oh, an' you're a blessed lad if you'll do that same! Do tell me, quick!"

"Well, listen, then," and Mike proceeded to unfold his idea to Tim, who, at the conclusion of it hugged him like a bear.

"Faith, an' you're a jewel iv a boy, Mike!" he exclaimed, emphatically; "I hate to trate the purty creature so, but—"

"She deserves it, an' it's no more than fair," interrupted Mike, calmly.

The next day, as Tim was sauntering across the fields to his dinner, who should he see tripping along over the green, looking ten times prettier and more coquettish than ever, but this same capricious Mary, who had taken his susceptible heart so completely by storm. At the sight of her Tim's heart began to beat wildly, and he could hardly keep from rushing forward and catching her in his arms and kissing those tempting cherry lips; but a little saucy toss of her head as she came on, decided him, and he resolved to follow his friend's advice.

The fact was Miss Mary had felt a little uneasy as to what the issue of her last evening's coquetry and ill-treatment of poor Tim might be. She loved him dearly, and had done so long before the momentous question had been falteringly propounded by brave Tim, who hadn't been absolutely certain whether he stood on his head or on his heels for as much as two hours after; but she was such a wayward little sprite that she was bound to torment him to her heart's content, and let him see what a sprightly little will she had of her own, when she chose to exercise it.

She expected that he would step in and see her on her way to work that morning, as he had been wont to do; but, as the gentleman failed to make his appearance, Mary began to fear that he had taken her words in earnest, and so at dinner-time she threw on her bonnet and tripped across the fields to intercept him and bring him into allegiance again by one of her captivating smiles.

Accordingly she hurried forward to meet him, but, to her surprise, instead of waiting for her to overtake him, Tim walked leisurely and unconcernedly on, and when at last she reached him, all flushed and a little "spunky," he lifted his hat, and said, in a very polite, but cool tone:

"Good morning, Miss Mary."

"Miss Mary, indeed!" echoed our heroine, greatly surprised at this unexpected greeting, and shrugging her plump shoulders; "for how long have we been such great strangers, Master Tim?"

"I believe you have broken our engagement, so that is enough to make us strangers," replied Tim, coolly.

"Broken the engagement! fiddlesticks!" rejoined Mary, beginning to get a little alarmed at the cool, unconcerned manner of her usually impetuous lover, although she would not have shown it for the world; "what are you talking such nonsense as that for, Tim?"

"You told me so yourself, last night, ma'am," responded Tim, composedly. "I've been thinking the matter over, an' I don't know but what the plan would suit me as well, after all."

Had Tim spoken less coolly, or had his voice faltered any, Miss Mary would have walked off, sure that he would follow her before long; but matters really appeared so alarming, and Tim seemed so perfectly resigned to his lot, that she resolved to stay and coax him into good humor again.

"What plan do you mean?" she asked somewhat faintly, pulling to pieces a half-blown rose that she had held in her hand.

"Why, of our forgetting all about each other, and taking up with some one else," responded Tim, glibly; "I've been thinking who to choose, an' I guess I'll take Kate Somers; she's about the nicest girl I know."

"But, Tim——" began poor Mary.

"And she has quite a nice little sum of money, too, in her own right," pursued Tim, remorselessly, who, now that he was fairly in for it, began to enjoy paying his sweetheart back "in her own coin;" "and she's pretty, has got an excellent temper, and would make a very good wife. What do you think about it, Miss Mary?"

"I wish you joy of her!" exclaimed Mary, longing to get home to cry; and she turned from him, determined to let him go.

"Well, good-by," called Tim, cheerfully, although his heart sank; "I'll send you a piece of the wedding-cake."

And he, too, turned, without looking behind him, and the next moment Mary appeared again beside him.

Her pretty little eyes and nose looked suspiciously red, and her voice trembled a little as she said:

"How soon will you have the wedding, Tim?"

"As soon as Kate is ready," replied Tim; "and that reminds me to ask you; have you not got any other beau yet?"

"Yes," answered Mary, with an hysterical laugh, that with as much propriety might have been styled a sob.

"Would ye mind tellin' me?" pursued Tim.

"Oh, Tim!" cried Mary, as the last spark of resolution deserted her; "it's you, Tim! If you'll forgive me for treating you so bad!" and she threw herself impulsively into his arms and sobbed and laughed alternately.

"Whist, Mary, darling, don't cry!" cried Tim tenderly, as he drew her toward him; "we'll make it all up if ye'll promise me something."

"What is it?" asked Mary, wiping her eyes with one hand while she held tightly on to him with the other.

"Name the day, darlint!" and Tim bent his beaming face and snatched a kiss from the rosy cheek that was turned so temptingly toward him.

"You saucy fellow," cried Mary, with some of her old sprightliness; "I'll make you wait for that!"

"Then I'll go straight off to Kate Somers, by gracious!" returned Tim, attempting to disengage his hand.

"Indeed, you'll not!" retorted Mary. "Before you shall go to that old thing I'll say—whenever you like, Tim."

"An' that'll not be a long time comin'," cried Tim, rapturously; "and now, jewel, I'll see you home, an' then I'll go back to my work."

"But your dinner?" suggested Mary.

"Here it is," and taking her in his arms, he—but mercy!—if I should stop to relate all that he said and did on that joyous occasion, it would take up more time than I have to spare at present.

LAWYERS IN THE LEGISLATURE.

Out of the sixty members of the coming New Jersey Legislature just one-third will be lawyers. There will be seven lawyers in the Senate and fourteen in the House. The following are the Senator lawyers: William Brinkerhoff, of Hudson; Frederick S. Fish, of Essex; John W. Griggs, of Passaic; Abraham V. Schenck, of Middlesex; George G. Vanderbilt, of Mercer; Lewis Cochran, of Sussex, and James C. Youngblood, of Morris. Either Griggs or Schenck will be President of the Senate. In the House the lawyers will comprise Edward Ambler Armstrong, Richard Wayne Parker, Edward Q. Keasbey, Cornelius S. See, Isaac Romaine, John W. Heck, John C. Besson, Frederick Frambach, Jr., A. Judson Rue, Benjamin F. Chambers, Edward B. Savage, George W. Jenks, DeWitt Ballou and William H. Corbin. All three of the candidates for Speaker—Armstrong, Jenkins and Keasbey—are lawyers.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE STORY.

Horsemen generally will be interested in reading the following: Youatt says (and he is authority) as to the practice of clipping and shaving the horse, it occasions chilling of the frame, exhaustion of vital power and dangerous reaction of fever. Now, whence emanated this merciless practice? He answers, from a brain of a lazy, indolent groom or coachman, who, in order to escape the use of the currycomb and brush, persuades his master to have all the hair removed from his faithful servant's body. A horse thus shorn, as Mayhew says, is a deformity. The color is unnatural, the coat is dull and stubborn looking, most unlike that polished surface which is native to the beautiful horse. A famous veterinary surgeon of Kingston said, some time ago, that three fine horses had just died, to his knowledge, owing to clipping. Mr. A. A. Van Buren's horse fell dead a short time since in the streets of Rondout. A post mortem examination showed that the air cells in the lungs were filled with clotted blood, otherwise the animal was in perfect health. His horse was clipped a short time before, and was chilled to death. When will this estimable servant of mankind be free from the tortures of clipping and the cruel check rein?

ZACHARIAS & SMITH, Newark, N. J., are doing some of the most difficult repairing of bicycles and tricycles anywhere on the Atlantic coast, from Maine to Florida; they are also doing repairing and nickel plating for Western parties. All work warranted first-class and charges "moderate." Give them a call. They are also agents for all the principle manufacturers of both American and foreign make of bicycles and tricycles, and keep a full line of cycling goods.—Ex.

THE REV. C. J. O'REILLY, of Phillipsburg, died at his home in that place at an early hour Sunday Dec. 21st. Father O'Reilly was born in county Cavan, Ireland, and received his education in Dublin, coming to this country shortly after being ordained. He was connected with the Roman Catholic church, at Phillipsburg, for the past twenty-three years, and was the first pastor. He was a very hard worker, and, along with his duties at Phillipsburg, was assistant-pastor of a church in Newark and another in Jersey City.

"Here, waiter, take away these fried oysters. They are bad." "I know it, sir; but we have given you two more oysters than you called for to make up for it."

HOW MUCH THEY LOVED HIM.

BY MARGARET KENNEDY.

"You are quite sure, Vane?"

The question was lazily put, and some might have found a tone of ironical contempt in it; but to Clement Vane it was simply a question, no more.

"I'd stake my head on it, either of them will say yes the moment I ask her. I wish I wasn't so sure. There'd be something agreeable to a fellow of my temperament in regularly having to woo, you know, but I can't account for it. They all set their caps for me at the first meeting. It's a bore too, don't you know; a decided bore when one gets too much of it."

"Then why don't you tell them so? Or, better still—insert an article in one of the papers requesting the ladies to give you fewer attentions. Say frankly that they embarrass you; that they bore you, that you're tired of it, etc."

"Oh, but, don't you know that wouldn't do. There are times, you see, when—when——"

"Just so. When a fellow finds a fool among his acquaintances, and feels like pulling his nose, and restrains the impulse don't you know, of 'mimicking the other's drawl to perfection.' Yes, I know all about it; but the question is this: Those two girls are madly in love with you, over their pretty ears, you know, and you think you'll ask one of them to marry you; I am to help you decide which. Miss Lee is dark, beautiful, of good family, an heiress; Miss Holmes is fair, sunny, fascinating and an heiress also; you're not in love with either, but they, poor girls! are hopelessly in love with you; you will have to break one heart, choose as you may; you are inclined to try your fate to-night at the ball at De Vallon's; I say Miss Lee."

"Well, so be it. I'll ask Miss Lee. What a bore it will be! but a fellow must marry some time, and she's to my fancy. Yes—I'll do it. But I'm sorry for poor little Jessie Holmes; it will quite break her heart."

"Oh, beyond a doubt. But, I say, Vane, you can offer your hand to her, don't you know, when Miss Lee has—laughed at you."

"Oh, don't you know there is not the slightest danger. Ta, ta, Tom; you can congratulate me to-night, old boy."

"I'd like to kick you now, you insufferable fop," was Tom Leonard's inward comment, as he watched the other lounge affectedly from the club-room, in which the conversation had taken place.

* * * * * * *

Tom was a late arrival at the De Vallon's ball, and almost the first couple he ran across were Hortense Lee and Clement Vane. The young lady gave him a laughing glance, nodded to him gayly, and made a commonplace remark. Vane screwed his glass in his eye and vouchsafed him a languid greeting, and Tom watched them go slowly through the throng, a smile of real enjoyment on his lip.

An hour later he came upon Vane, standing alone and melancholy on the terrace.

"Scarcely the correct expression for a brave wooer, my friend," he said pleasantly; "but you are accepted, are you not? But of course you are. That gloom on your manly countenance is caused by your regret at giving Miss Holmes the pain you must; but I congratulate you most heartily; I'm not used to this sort of thing, but don't you know"—languidly —"I hope you'll be awfully happy."

But Vane was pulling the faint down on his upper lip, quite savagely for him, considering the care he usually bestowed upon it; besides, he looked slightly uncomfortable.

"Jove!—I wish you'd not mention it," he said petulantly; "any fellow can be mistaken, don't you know? I have been shamefully treated by Miss Lee. Do you know how she received the honor I did her?"

"Fell on her knees and thanked heaven, I dare say," Tom said, solemnly. "It was a strange thing to do, but then consider how delighted she must have been."

"You are quite mistaken," the exquisite said with dignity; "she actually took it all as a good joke; positively made fun of me, don't you know."

"You don't tell me!" with pretended astonishment. "But, now I think of it, she's engaged to young De Vallon. Shows her bad taste, now, doesn't she? He's not a pretty dancer at all, and never puts a flower in his coat. But what of Miss Holmes?"

"I'm to dance the next waltz with her. And I think, don't you know, she's more to my taste after all. I like fair girls best."

"So do I; there's the waltz; I'm not going in just yet; come back here when it's all over, and I'll congratulate you."

"I will. You're awfully kind, Tom, don't you know?" and he hurried off, while Tom burst into a low laugh, as he drew forth and lighted a cigar.

"I really think I am kind," he said. "I'm doing my best to let you find out what a—a donkey you are, you conceited imbecile."

He paced back and forth, enjoying his cigar. He finished that and had commenced another. A quadrille had followed the waltz and a waltz the quadrille before Vane made his appearance, and when he did his face was flushed and his eyes angry.

"Why didn't you tell me?" he asked, walking straight up to Tom, who paused in his walk and waited for him. "Here I have made a fool of myself twice to-night, and you might have prevented it. By Jove! I call you a pretty sort of friend!"

"What's the row?" Tom asked, calmly. "Has your good fortune turned your brain, my boy, or is it the champagne? You seem somewhat lacking in that repose which marks the cast of Vere de Vere.' What's amiss with our irresistible?"

"You ask that coolly, upon my word you do. Don't you know what a fool I've been making of myself to-night?"

"Now, don't blame yourself, Vane; censure Nature; she did it, my boy. You haven't done anything. What's the row?"

"I—I proposed to Miss Holmes," said Vane in a tone that was anything but lover-like.

"And——"

"And she told me she was engaged to you!"

"So she is; but I was willing to free her, seeing that she is so very much in love with you."

"Oh, you're sarcastic," Vane said angrily; "but you might have told me."

"You didn't ask; and, if Jessie loves you, as you have declared to me——"

But Vane had turned away with a muttered imprecation, and gone in, followed by a low laugh of thorough enjoyment, from Tom.

"They were both so very much in love with him, oh, yes!" he said cheerfully. "His highness has received a lesson. We will see how much it will do him."

A bride in Indiana, after the conclusion of the marriage ceremony stepped gracefully forward and requested the clergyman to give out the hymn: "This is the way I long have sought."

THE NEW YEAR.

The old year has passed into eternity. The new with vigorous form and buoyant step takes its place.

'Tis so ordained.

We hail with hope and joy 1885.

May it be a harbinger of peace, plenty and prosperity, of health and happiness.

May it witness the misfortunes and disappointments of life to fall lightly, and be transformed into messengers of good by turning many hearts unto that Almighty God who rules with mercy, justice and love, and scatters even blessings in disguise.

To all we send the greeting of a HAPPY HAPPY NEW YEAR.

OUR FLAG IS THERE.

The Iron Era, of Dover, New Jersey, is a respectable and well edited journal, with the exception, that on the tariff question, it is about as rabid as hydrophobia, especially when its pet product iron is a controverted theme. It would, under the guise of protection, virtually prohibit, in order that subsidized princes may riot in luxurious wealth at the expense of the general public good.

There we differ radically with the Era. We are in favor of honest and equitable protection. We would amply protect and encourage every species of American industry and labor, and all grades of capital invested in legitimate enterprises, but we are irrevocably opposed to any system that filches from the taxpayers annually a hundred million dollars more than the needs of government require, thereby converting surplus revenue into a corruption fund, a system which, artfully pretending to protect, really aims to create a moneyed nobility, a privileged class of heartless extortioners and monopolists, who value labor only at the very lowest attainable rate, even though it be down to starvation wages, and who scruple not, as they have been known to do, to import cheap operatives from abroad to take the place of worthy and intelligent workingmen at home.

A tariff after the Era's own heart would make the rich richer and arrogant and all other classes poor and dependent.

A Democratic tariff, such as we advocate, seeks to dignify and justly remunerate labor of all kinds, to protect without partiality, to keep wealth within the bounds of honesty and propriety, to afford small capitalists an opportunity to prosper fully equal with the largest, and to augment the profits of industry by extending its sphere of action.

On that platform we stand. It is neither free trade or prohibition. It is justice and common sense. It is protection disrobed of hypocrisy.

The Era takes rather ill-natured exception to our declaration that "during the administration of President Polk the business interests of the country were remarkably sound and prosperous," and charging us with ignorance of political history, ventures to assert that the tariff enacted during Mr. Polk's Presidency caused "the panic of 1847—the worst ever known in the history of the country, followed by a general collapse."

Along with other modest mortals we do not presume to know everything, but this much we do know, that the Era notwithstanding its assumed claim to superior intelligence, is by self conviction wandering through the swamp of political and historical obscurity.

There was no fearful panic in 1847; it happened ten years later, 1857, and was the result of inflation and wild speculation, as all panics are. The tariff had nothing more to do with it than import duties in Egypt.

We reassert as a fact that business was sound and prosperous during the Polk administration, and we challenge the Era to prove the contrary.

We could say much eulogistic of President Polk, but will leave that for another occasion. He had as official advisers the foremost statesmen of the age, including as Secretary of the Treasury Robert J. Walker, of Mississippi, one of the ablest financiers that ever lived, a reputation freely accorded him by both partisan friends and foes. It was Mr. Walker who framed the Polk tariff and founded it upon enlightened business judgment. The country prospered under that law, and had not war unfortunately arisen between the North and South, it would no doubt have remained a revenue measure to this day. Secretary Walker drafted a tariff with equal and exact justice to every interest, but totally devoid of favoritism to monopolists. It was for the benefit of the people, not to ennoble those would-be masters.

It is unreasonable to expect other than condemnation of such a law on the part of a modern Era, which sees no protection outside of squeezed wages for the poor laborer and plethoric profits for the millionaire employer.

Frank Patterson, against whom 42 bills of indictment for forgery were found at the last term of court at Asbury Park, and who was under heavy bonds, was on Saturday last surrendered by his bondsman, Capt. Samuel Ludlow. Patterson was lodged in Freehold Jail.

Basking Ridge, in Somerset county, will bring the election festivities to a close on the 4th of next March, when a bonfire in honor of the inauguration of Cleveland and Hendricks will be made out of the old wigwam, filled with brush and saturated with kerosene. The wigwam was put up by the late John Lyon, who said it should illuminate the inauguration of a Democratic President, and his words proved prophetic. It will be a right merry time when the blaze takes place.

BURN THIS ——!

[From the Newark Journal.]

Some of the Federal departments are credited with a desire to avoid trouble and spare expense—trouble for themselves and expense to the new Administration—by burning or otherwise destroying and damaging records that may have accumulated during the past twenty-four years. What better thing could be done? Thief after thief has been caught and—let go; robbers have been captured and—they rode away at their leisure; defaulters have been tried, convicted and decreed to pay, but they do nothing of the kind. The country already knows more of the rottenness that runs all through the various branches of the Federal service, and, as the money is lost beyond recovery, why wish to further dishonor a whole people by additional exposures of their public servants? Let the new Administration begin, if it must, with hollow safes, empty pigeon-holes and open desks rifled of their contents; the country is sick of corruption and is longing for the peace and quiet, the rest and the comfort that an honest administration of Federal affairs alone can assure.

BUTLER SHORT OF BOODLE.

The Washington Sunday Capitol says—"It seems almost incredible that Ben Butler is hard up, but such is believed by many people to be the fact. The recent transaction by which he placed a $90,000 mortgage on two of his Capitol Hill houses was quite astonishing to a multitude of people. It had been believed that Butler was always able to draw his check for at least $100,000. He has been reputed to earn that amount in the law every year, and fifteen years ago he was worth more than a $1,000,000. The common explanation of Butler's financial condition is that he has spent a great deal more money in politics this year than he can immediately command; that he had no property that he wished to sell or could sell, except at a sacrifice, and, therefore, was compelled to mortgage his houses. The money was raised by Mr. Cassell in Philadelphia. It is said that the General has spent over $200,000 in politics this year. Butler borrowed in all through Cassell $100,000. $30,000 was loaned to him for use in the campaign in which he was defeated for Governor of Massachusetts, and $70,000 was borrowed in September last. He gave his note for $10,000, payable in February next, and a mortgage on the two houses for the balance."

THE G. A. R. AND CATHOLICISM.

The Jersey City Journal says:—"Several times recently members of the Grand Army of the Republic, who were also members of the Roman Catholic Church, have died and were buried from their churches. In every case their surviving comrades arranged the burial exercises and took charge of the funerals, but in every case were unable to enter the church while in uniform. The Roman Church interdicts the entrance of secret societies into its sacred edifices. The last difficulty arose over the funeral of the late Detective Ryan, of Jersey City, when his comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic were refused admission to Saint Patrick's Church. Father Sheehan, who was in charge of the services, expressed regret for the situation, but as it was an inflexible rule of the Church he dared not disobey it. He subsequently wrote a letter to Bishop Wigger suggesting that the attention of the Plenary Council be called to the matter with a view to a modification of the rule in favor of the G. A. R. In the meantime Commander Wales, of Zabriskie Post, wrote a letter to Commander-in-Chief Kountz on the subject. At the instance of this chief officer of the G. A. R. a committee consisting of Gen. Rosecranz, General Mc Mahon and a Post Department Commander of Rhode Island, all Roman Catholics, was appointed to draft a memorial to the Plenary Council, urging that the G. A. R. is not a secret society in the ordinary acceptation of the term. Archbishop Wood, of Ohio, appended a postscript to the memorial endorsing the request of the petitioners to relieve the G. A. R. from the effect of the rule above mentioned. The action of the Council upon the matter will be made known in the forthcoming pastoral letter."

The letter of President Cleveland on Civil Service Reform, which we re-produce in another column, meets with the general approval of those who elected him.

The Senate, true to its natural instincts as a Republican organization, has long left unconsidered the bill sent to it from the House prohibiting the importation of foreign laborers under contract. This is the first practical step in the direction of protecting the interests of the laboring classes, and that is why the Senate halts.

A dreadful new monitor arrangement in the New York telephone main office, just introduced, prevents the girl clerks from flirting with the young men clerks a practice which has been not infrequent when business was slack. Now all these pretty nothings can be whispered into the ear of the grim superintendent, who is not partial to that sort of business.

The intolerance which impels some of the attendants of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Church to refuse to contribute to their church, but brings into prominence the heroism which enabled him to abandon his party rather than to aid in degrading the Presidency, and emphasizes the partisan prejudice of those who were willing to vote for dishonest and disreputable candidates, rather than to loose their hold upon the flesh pots.—True American.

Mrs. Elizabeth Emmons, of Bernards township, Somerset county, recently celebrated her 100th year. She has outlived two husbands and is still possessed of surprising physical vigor. Her home has always been among the hills of Morris county and that part of Somerset county adjoining.

Samuel Blakey and Daniel H. Carpenter, two election officers of Jersey City, have been convicted in the Special Sessions of refusing to register voters in accordance with the law. Sentence was deferred until next week. Blakey is the man who distinguished himself in sporting circles by allowing his wife to sue for the recovery of $200 he had bet and lost on Blaine, Mrs. Blakey contending that the money which he had staked belonged to her.

A Letter From Cleveland.

On Dec. 20 the Executive Committee of the National Civil-Service Reform League addressed the President-elect Cleveland a letter in which he was asked to state his intended attitude towards the Civil Service Reform act. This letter and the reply received in return is as follows:

NAT. CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM LEAGUE,
OFFICE 4 PINE STREET,
NEW YORK, Dec. 20, 1884.

The Hon. Grover Cleveland:

SIR:—We have the honor to address you on behalf of the National Civil-Service Reform League, an association composed of citizens of all parties, whose sole purpose is indicated by its name, and which takes no part whatever in party controversy.

The vast increase in the number of persons engaged in the civil service and the grave mischiefs and dangers arising from the general proscription in the service which for half a century has followed a change of party control of the national Administration, have produced so profound an impression upon the public mind that the first effective steps towards reform were taken with the co-operation of both parties in the passage of the Reform act of Jan. 16, 1883.

The abuses which that act seeks to correct, however, are so strongly intrenched in the traditions and usages of both parties that there is naturally widespread anxiety lest the party change in the National Executive effected by the late election should show them to be insuperable. But, believing as we do, that the reformed system cannot be held to be securely established until it has safely passed the ordeal of such a party change, and recalling with satisfaction and confidence your public expressions favorable to reform and your official acts as the Chief Executive of the State of New York, we confidently commend this cause to your patriotic care in the exercise of the great power with which the American people have intrusted you.

Respectfully yours,
GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, President,
WILLIAM POTTS, Secretary.
John Jay, Moorfield Story, J. Hall Pleasants, W. W. Montgomery, Everett P. Wheeler, Frederic Cromwell, Morrill Wyman, Jr., Carl Schurz, Silas W. Burt, A. R. MacDonough, Wm. Cary Sanger, William W. Aiken—Executive Committee.

PRESIDENT-ELECT CLEVELAND'S REPLY.

ALBANY, Dec. 25, 1884.

Hon. George William Curtis, President, &c.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication, dated Dec. 20, addressed to me on behalf of the National Civil-Service Reform League, has been received.

That a practical reform in the civil service is demanded is absolutely established by the fact that a statute, referred to in your communication, to secure such a result, has been passed in Congress with the assent of both political parties; and by the further fact that a sentiment is generally prevalent among patriotic people calling for the fair and honest enforcement of the law which has been thus enacted. I regard myself pledged to this because my conception of true Democratic faith and public duty requires that this and all other statutes should be in good faith and without evasion enforced, and in many utterances made prior to my election as President, approved by the party to which I belong and which I have no disposition to disclaim, I have in effect promised the people that this should be done.

I am not unmindful to the fact to which you refer, that many of our citizens fear that the recent party change in the national Executive may demonstrate that the abuses which have grown up in the civil service are ineradicable. I know that they are deeply rooted, and that the spoils system has been supposed to be intimately related to success in the maintenance of party organization, and I am not sure that all those who profess to be the friends of this reform will stand firmly among its advocates when they find it obstructing their way to patronage and place.

But fully appreciating the trust committed to my charge, no such consideration shall cause a relaxation on my part of an earnest effort to enforce this law.

There is a class of Government positions which are not within the letter of the civil-service statute, but which are so disconnected with the policy of an Administration that the removal therefrom of present incumbents, in my opinion, should not be made during the terms for which they were appointed solely on partisan grounds, and for the purpose of putting in their places those who are in political accord with the appointing power.

But many now holding such positions have forfeited all just claim to retention because they have used their places for party purposes in disregard of their duty to the people, and because, instead of being decent public servants, they have proved themselves offensive partisans and unscrupulous manipulators of local party management.

The lessons of the past should be unlearned and such officials, as well as their successors, should be taught that efficiency, fitness and devotion to public duty are the conditions of their continuance in public place, and that the quiet and unobtrusive exercise of individual political rights is the reasonable measure of their party service.

If I were addressing none but party friends, I should deem it entirely proper to remind them that though the coming Administration is to be Democratic, due regard for the people's interest does not permit faithful party work to be always rewarded by appointment to office, and to say to them that while Democrats may expect all proper consideration, selections for office not embraced within the civil-service rules will be based upon sufficient inquiry as to fitness, instituted by those charged with that duty, rather than upon persistent importunity or self-solicited recommendations on behalf of candidates for appointment.

Yours very truly,
GROVER CLEVELAND.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

John M. C. Marsh has presented to his many patrons some very fine insurance calendars for the ensuing year.

John Kane was arrested on Monday last for threats against his wife and family. He was taken before Justice Jaques, who held him to bail to keep the peace for the space of six months.

The concert given in behalf of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in the Presbyterian lecture room on last Monday evening was well attended, and proved a success financially to the treasury of the Union.

The death of Julia Elizabeth Ladd, aged 50 years, wife of E. H. Ladd, occurred on Monday last, after a lingering illness. Her funeral took place on Wednesday. The body was taken to Forrest Hill Cemetery, Boston, Mass., for interment. Mr. Ladd and family came to town over 10 years ago, and opened the school known as Ladd's Seminary, with Mrs. Ladd as principal, which she continued to keep until the past year.

The work done by the Public School for the World's Fair at New Orleans, were on exhibition at the school building on Wednesday evening, Dec. 24. There were many present. All departments of the school was well represented. There was finely executed work in map drawing and industrial drawing from memory; also comprehensive work in mathematics, the sciences, rhetoric, grammar, spelling, penmanship and primary work, representing the most modern methods of teaching.

The Sunday school connected with the Baptist church, assembled on Christmas morning at 10:30, in the audience room of the church, which was filled with the children of the school, their parents and friends. The exercises were of a very interesting character, consisting of singing, recitations, &c. After some beautiful presents to the officers and teachers of the school, the large Christmas tree loaded with boxes of candies, toys, &c., was stripped of the fruit and distributed to the children.

The Congregational Church Sunday school held their annual Christmas festivities on Wednesday evening, Dec. 24. There was a large and enthusiastic gathering. The interior of the church was very elaborately decorated with evergreens. A feature of the entertainment was a large Christmas tree, the gifts of which it was adorned being contributed by the scholars, and which were afterwards sent to the sick children's mission of N. Y. Appropriate addresses were made by the Rev. G. W. Smith, pastor of the M. E. church, Rev. H. Neill, and by the Superintendent, Mr. Henry Hosford.

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 30th, the Grace church Sunday school held their Christmas tree festival in the audience room of the church. Long before the time for the entertainment to commence, the church was well filled with parents and children and friends of the school. The programme consisted of singing of carols by the school, and a short address by the pastor, Rev. William Heakes, after which the mammoth Christmas tree was lit up, which showed most beautifully the artistic manner, in which the tree had been trimmed and decorated. Great credit is due to those having the matter in charge, for the manner in which the tree and the whole interior of the church was handsomely decorated. All the children received fine cornucopias of candy and oranges, and a beautiful book. The pastor was the recipient of two very valuable and useful presents. The numbers present shows an increasing interest in the Grace Church Sunday school.

The Presbyterian Sunday school met on Christmas Eve, and as usual had a most enjoyable entertainment. Although no display was attempted the church was decorated in good taste, and reflected credit upon the management. Two Christmas trees were loaded down with good things, and many valuable presents were found stored away beneath them. Instead of receiving candies, as in the past, two books were given to each scholar, one of which was Kittredge's New Year book of sermons and golden texts for 1885. Every pastor and superintendent should examine this little record, and place it in the hands of each scholar in the Sunday school. Another change in the usual programme was the introduction of a "dime offering" exercises, in which every scholar gave a dime at least, to help provide a home for a destitute child in New York city. Many teachers received presents from their classes. The bible class presented their teacher, Rev. Jos. Greaves, a Webster dictionary, and Dr. Shaff's new library of religious poetry. A feature of the evening was the address of Prof. Richard S. Holmes, of Plainfield, N. J., and his beautiful presentation of a magnificent gold watch, a rich gift from the congregation to their beloved pastor, Rev. Newton W. Cadwell.

On Christmas evening the Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal church held their Christmas entertainment, at six o'clock in the audience room of the church. The room was void of anything in the way of trimming with evergreens or a Christmas tree, owing to the fact, the room had lately been most beautifully and artistically painted and decorated throughout. The officers of the school being fearful if they attempted to trim the rooms with evergreens, it would mar the beauty of the paint. The programme of the evening was varied and of a very interesting character, which was fully appreciated by the large audience present. It consisted of singing, recitations, dialogues, piano and concert solos. The dialogue 'grandpa and grandma' by Eddie Morehouse and Mary Luckey was received with rapturous applause. The music on the violin with piano accompaniment by Messrs. Salteils and Haupt, was most grandly executed. The most interesting part of the entertainment to the children was the arrival of Santa Claus and his four little boys, which he brought with him this year, who assisted in delivering to all the children pails and cornucopias filled with choice candies, together with [illegible] for all. Many of the teachers and officers of the school received presents from their classes. One of the most important features of the entertainment was the pound offerings for the poor, which amounted to [illegible] pounds of flour, sugar, coffee, tea and many other articles which were presented by the Superintendent on behalf of the school to the Ladies' Relief Society of Westfield, for their distribution among the poor of our town, and which no doubt have been received ere this by many a needy one. The Christmas festivities of the M. E. Sunday school for the year 1884, will no doubt long be remembered by the officers and teachers of the school.

ATTENTION, DEMOCRATS!

The Annual Meeting of the Democratic Association of the city of Plainfield will be held at the headquarters on Front street, on Tuesday evening, January 6th, 1885, at 8 o'clock p. m. Members are requested to be present.

J. E. MARTINE, President.
L. F. WADSWORTH, Secretary.
Plainfield, December 31, 1884.

A HAPPY New Year.

THE Council of 1884 will close its work and adjourn sine die, this evening.

THE Yale Club will be entertained at the residence of Charles Hyde, Esq., during their visit to this city, next Monday.

THE girl who hasn't taken advantage of leap year to secure a husband, must now wait four years for another chance to "pop."

THURSDAY evening, the 15th inst, Burlington Hawkeye Burdette will lecture in the Music Hall, being the fourth of the Y. M. C. A. entertainments.

THE Council of 1885 meets to organize next Monday evening, and will probably elect its president, clerk and janitor—if the "deal" is fixed to suit the majority.

THIS is the first number of the 18th volume of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. A year's subscription to the paper would be a suitable New Year's present to a friend.

THE boys and girls had a good time at the "Big 3" Ball, Christmas Eve, but did not raffle the turkey. The owner of the bird had a prior claim, and took it home himself.

GAZELLE Engine Co., No. 1 had their swinging harness put in position last Wednesday by "Pop" Haulenbeck, engineer of Minnehaha Eng. Co., No. 1, of Newark, N. J.

WE speak for scores of subscribers (and ourselves) when we sincerely beg that the Vocal Society will give one concert entirely of glees, and other part songs of simple harmony.

THE only way to treat all alike where all were so deserving, is to remark in a general way that every church in the city was handsomely decorated in commemoration of Christmas.

A LARGE party of New York swells, picked from society's summits, will see the old year out at the Hotel Netherwood. They will be entertained with the best of everything.

NELLA BROWN, an elocutionist gifted with much talent and beauty, who has before gratified Plainfield audiences, will give an evening's reading in the Park avenue church, the 22d inst.

IN another column is advertised for sale or exchange one of the most desirably located and prosperous grocery stores in this city. Such an opportunity for a remunerative investment is seldom presented.

MESSRS. VANDERHOFF & DORLAND—the former a popular Morris county resident and the latter, recently, of this city—have leased the County House at Somerville. The new firm will take possession about April 1st.

PROVIDENCE took the matter in hand and accomplished what municipal authorities are so careless about—the cleaning of the sidewalks. A January thaw in December has melted the ice and snow thoroughly, and insured the safety of pedestrians.

MR. ANDREW SCHAFFER, father of Freeholder Charles Schaffer of Warren Township, died at his residence on Green Brook road, Saturday last, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. The deceased had been a resident of Somerset County, for the past thirty years.

SOME penny-a-line writer has again gulled the great New York dailies with an account of a terrible dynamite package being found along the railroad tracks between Fanwood and Westfield, which was worked up into an attempt to blow up some passing train. There is no truth in the article or report.

GENERAL FAY, our genial County Attorney, was "in town" Tuesday, and left with a check on the city's treasury for $2,300. This is a part of a judgment against us of about $2,600, the amount of a school warrant given the County by the City Collector in 1878 and which the County was some months ago obliged to return to the School's funds.

MR. H. M. HYMANS, the representative of Manager Henderson, is one of the most affable gentlemen in the profession. His efforts to present the Plainfield public with first-class theatrical entertainments, however, have not as yet been appreciated, but we feel sure that if he brings Boucicault and "The Shaughraun" here, "big business" awaits him.

THE P. & R. R., has made a cut in the pay of its track and section men, freight handlers, station employees and everybody excepting conductors and engineers. Those last might "strike" and block business very effectually. The reduction extends even to Mrs. Jones, who sweeps and dusts the Plainfield waiting rooms, and who has received a cut of eight per cent. as a Christmas present.

THE wood of the apple tree is said to contain 12 per cent. of potash while its fruit requires 34 per cent. There is a small trace of soda in the ash of the tree, but the fruit contains 23 per cent. Salt should, therefore, be applied to bearing trees and not to those in luxuriant growth. The fruit requires 15 per cent. of phosphorous, while the wood contains only one-third as much, indicating that you should apply ground bone or superphosphate to the bearing trees and not to those that are growing.—Southern Cultivator.

TO make room for sleeping apartments in Gazelle engine company, No. 1 house, where those having the horses in charge will sleep, it became necessary to remove from a room adjoining the parlors, the old relic, "Gazelle" hand engine, which was placed there for ornament and safe keeping a year or two since. The company have resolved to loan it to a Scotch Plains Excelsior Hook & Ladder company, No. 1, who will at once put it in repair and use it when occasion requires. Having worked on the "brakes" of old "Gazelle" many a time, we hope she will do as effective duty in the future as she has in the past, when called into active duty and manned by the willing hands of Excelsior's members.

He Hath a Level Head.

It is said that before Governor Abbett commissioned Hon. Miles Ross as riparian commissioner he satisfied himself that the appointment would stand fire when the Senate came to bombard it.—Elizabeth Herald.

New Officers.

At a semi-annual meeting of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, I. O. O. F., held Monday evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: N. G.—John T. Odam; V. G.—Frank Whitney; R. S.—Fred. M. Slater; P. S.—E. C. Morse; Treas.—T. J. Young.

Close of the Game Season.

The "open season" for hunting and killing ruffed grouse, quail and rabbit, closed on Wednesday, Dec. 31st. The penalty for killing, taking, destroying or having unlawfully in possession any of the above mentioned game before Nov. 1st, 1885, is $15 in each case.

Saved By a Cat.

As the wife of Mr. Wm. Messersmith of Washington street, stooped down to feed her cat, Christmas morning, a bullet that broke through the window pane, passed just over her and in the range of where she stood an instant before. Striking the opposite wall the missile dropped to the floor. Mrs. Messersmith's kind care for pussy, probably saved her life.

It Isn't The Principal's Fault.

The school children over-the-brook and their teachers, have our deepest sympathy. There is no reason for their being called together to-day. They should be left to finish the week wherever they may be spending the holidays, and not have three days of needed rest and recreation broken up by a half-dozen hours of careless study—for, under the circumstances, it will be careless study.

To Reduce The Pay.

The Philadelphia and Reading Rail road company will, on the first of January, reduce all their employees' salaries eight per cent. and will discharge every man not actually needed. If this reduction is made the company will save annually a very large sum. The road is not now nor has it been making any money, and this cut is made to save itself.—Elizabeth Herald.

Masked Hugging.

The latest novelty at church fairs is masked hugging. Besides being remunerative, it affords lots of fun. By paying fifteen cents a man is allowed to hug a girl, but he is first blindfolded. "It makes a man awful mad," says an exchange that seems to know all about it, "to find, on removing the bandage from his eyes, that he had been hugging his own wife; fifteen cents for nothing."

I. O. O. F. Funeral.

During Tuesday last, Mr. Thomas Cox, of this city, died at his residence on Lake street. The funeral services will be held in the First Presbyterian church, next Monday morning at 11 o'clock, under the auspices of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F. Members of the Lodge are requested to meet at their rooms, Sunday, at 4 p. m. The deceased belonged to Protection Lodge of Newark.

A Medicinal Diet.

A young child of His Honor, George W. Rockfellow, Mayor-elect, was recently caught in the act of feeding itself bountifully from a bottle of morphine pills it had climbed up to and reached down from a closet shelf. The best of medical attendance was secured at once, but for some time great danger of the child's death existed. We are happy to say it is now as well as ever, if not better.

The G. A. R. Lecture.

The Vocal Society's rehearsal, the Home's Xmas entertainment and other attractions competed for patronage with the first lecture of the G. A. R. Course, Tuesday evening. But in spite of all that and the fact that Mr. Palmer's lecture was a "repeated one," an audience gathered that promised greater success for the following entertainments in particular and the Course as a whole. The address was intensely interesting and intently listened to.

Journalistic.

The La Croix Federale, a French-Swiss organ, published in New York by Saltzman & Co., No. 23 Dey street, celebrated the commencement of its fourth year of existence, on New Year's Day, by an increase of size from four to eight pages. The holiday number is printed on rose tinted paper. Its advertising columns show evidence of prosperity, while its reading columns are ably edited. We wish "Gus" and his journalistic enterprise a Happy New Year.

Friends' Christmas.

Among all the Sabbath School Christmas entertainments there has not been a happier one than that of the Friends, in the ancient Peace street meeting house on Christmas afternoon. The customary routine of well selected and delivered recitations was observed, and after brief remarks by Superintendent Harper and Aaron M. Powell, abundant refreshments were handed forth, followed by gifts. The school was fully represented, and a large and interested company of visitors manifested their pleasure. Everything passed off to mutual satisfaction.

A New Use For Frogs.

Frog skin as a substitute for the ordinary human cuticle is among the most recent developments of surgical science. Although wounds when they are "granulating," as it is technically termed, are very much assisted toward recovery by grafting a piece of skin upon the spot, surgeons have found great reluctance on the part of men and women to contribute even the smallest portions of the cuticle, from one part of the body to help along the healing of another part. Now that the skin of a frog will answer, there will be no longer a necessity to rob Peter to pay Paul in the premises.

Shooting Matches.

There was a large attendance at the pigeon shooting at Campbell's Club House on Christmas Day. But little shooting was indulged in, however, on account of the bitter cold, and the innumerable side shooters who congregating in the vicinity and despite the remonstrances of the proprietor, judges and spectators, made it unsafe in the vicinity with their fusilade from "scatter guns." Mr. Campbell is determined that the practice shall be broken up in the future. On New Year's day there will be an important and interesting match between two crack shots, besides other sweepstake matches. Plenty of good birds are always provided.

Railroad Accident.

Hon. Ferdinand Blancke has a very large dairy in Linden township from which he obtains his milk supply for his large restaurant in New York city. The milk is conveyed from the farm to the depot in wagons, and at five o'clock Monday morning one of the teams, while crossing the track near the Linden station, was struck by the newspaper train. The wagon was drawn by a valuable team of mules. The locomotive struck the mules, snapped off the pole, whirled the wagon around and spilled several hundred quarts of milk into the snow. Both of the mules were instantly killed but the driver escaped injury. There was a very thick fog at the time and the driver could not see the approaching train.

He Rescued The Perishing.

One very cold and stormy night of last week, a young man passing found a little lad crouched in the doorway of the temperance billiard rooms vainly seeking warmth and shelter. The boy's father, he said, had turned him out, so feeling pity for the lad his discoverer took him home and shared a warm bed with him. So far the story reads like a Sunday-School book, but alas we are compelled to relate the sequel. The next morning the rescued one left early with the last dollar possessed by his deliverer.

The Loyal Ladies.

At the annual meeting of Garfield League No. 22, Loyal Ladies League, held Dec. 29th, 1884, the following ladies were elected officers of League for the year:

President—Mrs. Edward J. Olsson.
Senior Vice Pres—Mrs. E. B. Titsworth.
Junior—Miss Laura C. Brady.
Treasurer—Mrs. Henry C. Drake.
Chaplain—Mrs. Thos. M. MacDonald.
Conductress—Mrs. Emily A. Clarkson.
Guard—Mrs. John L. Brady.
Delegate to Conv.—Mrs. H. S. Barnes.
Alternate—Mrs. Henry C. Drake.

Mrs. Henry S. Barnes was appointed Secretary.

Charities and Corrections.

The state board of charities and corrections appointed by the last legislature, and who, in company with the governor, began their work by inspecting the Lunatic asylum, have sent out thousand of blanks to all of the charitable and correctional institutions in the state, requiring statistics as to inmates. The answers when received and collated, will form a mass of novel and valuable matter. Besides gathering these statistics, it is the duty of the board to inspect the State reformatory and other institutions, and advise upon any reforms or changes that may be needed.

"Storm Beaten."

For the first time in many weeks, we, in our last issue, felt called upon to say a word in praise of a coming theatrical entertainment in the Music Hall. Consequently, for the first time in many weeks, the public filled the house. "Storm Beaten" was given by Brook & Collier's company in a very acceptable manner, with scenic surroundings and effects quite elaborate—for Plainfield. The principal parts were satisfactorily interpreted, with the possible exception of Richard Orchardson. "The survivors of the Greely expedition" made a faint and fleeting appearance.

Temperance.

Owing to the inclement weather last Sunday night, the temperance meeting in Reform Club Hall was not as largely attended as usual, yet a lively interest was manifested in the cause. The opening prayer was offered by Mr. Lanphere, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mr. Honeyman. Short addresses were made by Mr. James R. Pettit, Mr. George Belcher, Mayor Maxson, Judge Harper and President Frazee. Choice music, rendered by a choir consisting of Messrs. Vanderbeek, Utter and Runyon, with Mrs. Pope ably presiding at the organ, was a pleasing incident of the occasion.

Of Course They Would.

Preparations are making at Washington for a military review at the inauguration of President Cleveland. A whole division of the Pennsylvania National Guard will participate; with also the New York Seventh, a Chicago regiment, the Boston Lancers, Philadelphia Fencibles, Old Guard of New York; regiments from New Orleans, Georgia, Virginia, and other southern cities and states, Albany Burgess corps, West Point and Annapolis cadets, and numerous other military organizations, including, without much doubt, a provisional battalion from New Jersey, which would, of course "take the cake."—Elizabeth Herald.

They Understand Him.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in a little plain talk to his congregation last Sunday evening, among other things said:

"If a majority or an important minority of the members feel that they can no longer receive sustenance and benefit from my preaching and do not go away I will relieve them. In the spirit of true Christian manhood I will go. But if the great majority of the church wish me to say I will die with you and nothing will drive me away from you. I can live on a good deal less than I am now living on. If you want me you can have me, but you have got to receive me not on a pitchfork, but on the palms of your hands. I never laid a pipe in my life."

The Game Laws.

We notice among our exchanges suggestions as to making amendments to the Game Laws at the coming Legislature. While there are some radical changes necessary in these laws, we doubt if it is wise to attempt their alteration, without a conference of delegates from the various Game and Fish Protective Societies in Convention assembled. A better ventilation of ideas of sportsmen from all parts of the State on the proposed amendments would thus be obtained, and less opposition to the passage of a good bill that would suit all sections. "The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society," whose headquarters are in Plainfield, are ready for such a Convention. Who next?

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Boys Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will hold their Xmas entertainment on Saturday evening, Jan. 3, at 7:30 o'clock. Prof. A. G. Waring of Brooklyn, will occupy considerable time during the evening, with a slight of hand performance, &c. There will also be humorous recitations by C. E. Tyler, and singing of college songs by a male quartette. After these exercises are over, refreshments in the shape of ice cream and cake will be served by the ladies of the Boys Work and Temperance Committees. Nothing has been spared to make this a very enjoyable and amusing entertainment, and the Branch are looking forward to the best entertainment they have ever had. The parents of the boys are invited to be present at the entertainment.

The License Granted.

Considerable interest was manifested among North Plainfield residents Wednesday of last week, in the matter of whether the widow of the late John W. Hughes, should be given a license to continue her late husband's business at the Somerset House, North Plainfield, or not. The Somerset Courts had been presented with a remonstrance signed by numerous temperance and prohibition citizens, which set forth that the place was a saloon, and not an inn and tavern, and therefore not necessary for the convenience of the public in that part of the township. About thirty witnesses, many of them prominent and life-long residents of the township testified in behalf of Mrs. Hughes that the house was a necessity, well-kept and orderly. The matter was argued before Judges Thompson, Garretson and Jamison, who concurred in granting the license. Several persons who signed the remonstrance have since expressed themselves as ignorant of the contents of the remonstrance at the time of signing. Wm. R. Maxson and S. St. John McCutcheon appeared for the complainants and John D. Bartine for Mrs. Hughes.

LAST Monday evening's "German" at the residence of Mr. James Leonard, was both a terpsichorial and social success. Mr. L. Timpson lead with Miss Waring, and to Miss Jean Murray was awarded the prize favor.

Fried Cabbage.

Cut the cabbage very fine on a slaw cutter, if possible; salt and pepper, stir well and let stand five minutes. Have an iron kettle smoking hot, drop one tablespoonful of lard into it, then the cabbage, stirring briskly until quite tender; send to table immediately. An agreeable change is to put one-half a cup of sweet cream and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar—the vinegar added after the cream has been well stirred—into the cabbage and after taken from the stove. When properly done an invalid can eat it without injury, and there is no offensive odor from cooking.

An Optical Puzzle.

Between the Morris Plains and Morristown stations, on the right hand side of the railroad going east, the train passes quite close to a high board fence. The boards, which are nailed on vertically, are about six inches wide, but there is a space of about half an inch between each board. When the train is moving slowly scarcely anything is visible through the fence. But when the train moves at a high rate of speed the fence, as far as the vision is concerned, entirely disappears, except leaving the appearance of a very thin black veil passing rapidly before the eyes, every object in the field beyond being plainly visible, even to the smallest trees and grass. Can anyone explain the philosophy of this?—Iron Era.

Amateur Opera.

During Monday and Tuesday evenings in St. Mary's Hall, the young ladies of Father Smyth's parish presented as a most attractive Christmas entertainment the operetta of "Laila." The cast of characters included Miss May Flannigan as "Laila" and Miss Alice Keely as the Queen of the Fairies. The mountain girls were the Misses Kate O'Connor, Kate Kearney, Kate Reed, Mary Keefe, Winifred Kelly, Bina Kelly, Alice Quinn, Sallie Schuck, Norah Casey, Mary Vanderweg, Mary Higgins. The fairies were Misses Josie Miner, Kate Mullen, Fannie Rafferty, Celia Kelly, Kate Calishan, Mary Newman.

The entertainment closed with the laughable operetta entitled "My New Maid," which Miss Kate O'Connor and Miss Julia Hyland rendered in a most satisfactory manner.

Personalia.

Mr. John Schorb, Jr., of this city, has invented a carriage nut that has no thread, but fastens with a spring bolt which can be locked. This attachment gives also a handsome finish to the hub.

Among the many out-of-town residents who attended the performance at the Music Hall last Monday evening, we noticed the smiling countenance of Somerville's popular merchant, Mr. Alpheus L. Mundy, Esq., accompanied by his wife.

Edmund Canfield, a brother to ex-Senator A. A. Canfield, of Morris county, died on Friday last at the residence of his mother at Ferro Monte. Mr. Canfield was highly respected throughout the State for his many excellent qualities and attainments. For years past he has been a prominent member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers. His remains were interred at Succasunna Plains on Monday last.

Rahway's Excise Laws.

At the meeting of the common council of Rahway, held Tuesday night last, a supplement to the ordinance relative to inns and taverns, was passed. The supplement so amends the original ordinance that the fine for violation of its provisions as to sale of liquor or beer shall be $20 instead of $50, thus doing away with the expense of jury trials of cases that may be tried. It also reduces the penalty from $50 to $10 for falsely signing applications, that is, representing that the signer is a freeholder and resident of the ward, which application is made for saloon or hotel to be located, when such person is not a resident therein. Another feature of the supplement is that "each application shall contain the signatures of twelve electors, six of whom shall be freeholders." This does away with allowing women to sign applications for license. It is also provided that the fee for all classes of license shall be $175, instead of $150 for license to sell beer, etc., and $250 for spirituous and other liquors, and all applications must be made at least two weeks before the expiration of old license, and the fee ($175) must be paid when the application is made.

Considerable care has been taken in the preparation of the supplement as passed, and the ordinance as amended is conceded to be a very fair and practicable law.—Rahway Advocate.

Freeholders Aroused.

At recent meetings of Boards of Chosen Freeholders throughout the State the members have been astonished and terrified at the presentation of bills for services rendered by Fish Wardens the past year, according to the provisions of the following law passed at the last session of the Legislature:

CHAPTER CXIV.

An Act to empower fish wardens to enforce game laws.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the fish wardens of this State, now or hereafter to be appointed, as provided for in section three of a supplement to "An act to regulate fisheries," approved March fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, shall, in addition to the duties now imposed upon them, be and they are hereby severally empowered and required, on view or information to enforce the game or gunning laws on the Sabbath day, commonly called Sunday, within their respective counties during the months of July, August, September, October and November in each and every year, by arresting and prosecuting the offender or offenders with all the power and assistance they are now vested with in enforcing the fishing laws; they shall make an annual report, duly authenticated, to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of their respective counties, and shall receive three dollars per diem for each day they are occupied in their special service as game wardens, to be paid by the County Treasurer, on the order of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved April 14, 1884.

Fish Wardens Patrick Gallagher and John McCormick, of Camden county, no doubt appreciating the importance of the new duties assigned them, concluded after the expiration of their five months arduous service, that it was worth in the neighborhood of $600 to them, although had they rendered a bill individually for services for each Sunday in the 5 months it would have amounted to $66 each, but they thought it necessary to employ assistants to aid them in traversing the neighborhood where game was wont to lurk and shooters visit, and charged for their arduous duties accordingly. The astonished Freeholders referred the bills to their solicitor, who decided that the Wardens could only legally charge for their own services, but not their assistants. It is not stated whether a single arrest was made during the five months by these valiant Wardens for violation of the Sunday gunning laws. Per contra, individual members of the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society" made arrests of four persons, during the past season, for violating the same Sunday law, within a radius of ten miles of this city, said persons being fined to the full extent of the law. A good law can be sometimes abused, and that seems to have been the case in this instance. The result will undoubtedly be its repeal at the coming session of the Legislature. Union County's Board of Chosen Freeholders paid Warden Ohl Sixty-six Dollars for services which they justly thought had been rendered.

The Yale Glee Club Concert.

The first appearance in this city of the Yale Glee Club will be made in Music Hall, next Monday evening, and undoubtedly a large and fashionable audience from out the extended music circles of Plainfield, will attend. From the New Haven Register, we extract the following deserved praise:

"The present club is in many respects the best glee club Yale College has had in many years, surpassing even the club of 1880, which was generally acknowledged to be a superior article. The voices are admirably balanced and of similar volume, the result being a splendid effect in chorus work. The club have attained a proficiency in shading their work and in uniformity of spirit, which speaks in eloquent terms of the genuine musical ability of the individual members. Though the programme is a varied one, each number receives the same careful treatment, and the same effective result is reached."

The soloists will be Mr. J. L. Adler, tenor, who will do the warbling, Mr. Jones, tenor, who will whistle an obligato to a 'Fatinitza' selection, and Messrs. Strong and Tourtellot, bassos. The programme is composed of sixteen numbers that include twenty-one selections. The music is all of the highest artistic character, and most enjoyable.

Reduced Rates to the World's Exposition.

The success of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition is now assured, and in the vastness of its extent, the variety of the interests involved, and the wide field from which its features are drawn, it exceeds in magnitude anything of its kind ever held in this country. Besides a full representation of the limitless industries and the unbounded resources of every State of the Union, every country in the world displays something of its resources, its art, or its handiwork. The collection of international exhibits is complete, and that, in connection with all the richness of America, forms an epitome of the advance of civilization as perfect as it is unique.

Its location at one of the foremost commercial cities of the South, as well as one of the most attractive, fitted in every way for the entertainment of a great gathering of people, lends added interest to the enterprise. The winter season at New Orleans is the most delightful portion of the year, and the inhabitant of the severer climate of the North would find a most grateful change in the geniality of Southern winter. Accommodations will be ample, ranging in expense from the comfortable room of the visitor of limited means to the luxurious apartments of the wealthy. It will be a winter vacation, where one may find not only health and pleasure, but profit and instruction.

For the benefit of the large number of visitors who will be attracted thither, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has placed on sale at all the principal stations of its system excursion tickets to New Orleans, good to return until May 31st, 1885. In consideration of the reduced rate at which the tickets are sold they are subject to certain conditions as to limitation of trips going and returning. These conditions are simple and will be explained in detail by agents. The tickets are of two classes: Those covering the same route in both directions, and those covering one route going and a different route returning. The round-trip rate of tickets going and returning the same route from Elizabeth to New Orleans is $45, and going by one route and returning another, $54, except where the trip is made in one direction via Atlantic Coast Line, when the rate is $63.

Rink Riplets.

In the matter of applause, a Rink audience can drown the efforts of unskated crowds a hundred times greater.

If the "Club" should meet, some evening, before instead of "after the Rink," the public might be favored with a score of new steps and acrobatic feats.

We will call it thoughtlessness (though we think it imbecility) that permits a skater to sit down and oil his (and her) skates from a "private can," and drip the oil on the skating surface.

Rapidity doesn't evidence experiences in skating, nor does it add elegance. There are those that get-over-the ground like runaway colts, yet they couldn't cast a shadow of grace over their accomplishment of the simplest outside-edge.

Everybody is praising the Band and its progress, and the Band is deserving everybody's praise. Most of it's members are engaged during the day at other trades, and get no practice except when playing the programme. The new selections are all played at sight.

There is one fact, which we know to be a fact, that may not have come to the knowledge of all others. None but those known or supposed by the management to be acceptable to the best class of their patrons, will be admitted to the Rink or furnished with skates.

Christmas day the Rink was called upon to compete against another attraction in Plainfield that offered "a present to every child," and the Rink came out ahead. Over 600 pairs of skates were rented at one time, and a large audience was entertained by the skating of Prof. Raymond Mayer.

Mr. J. Raymond Mayer was for many reasons the most accomplished skater that has exhibited in this city. His whirling was wonderful, and many of his toe steps remarkably difficult and exceedingly well done. The applause that the Christmas audiences favored him with, was unusually enthusiastic.

Among the many expert and beautiful skaters that have visited the Plainfield Rink during the holidays were, Miss Holmes of Boston, Miss LeFevre of Kingston, Miss Furman of Cranford, Miss Southwick of Jersey City, Miss Yeager of Asbury Park and Messrs. Calhoun of the Cosmopolitan Rink, New York, and Thompson of Temple Rink, Elizabeth.

Tuesday evening, M. F. Winslow again favored an audience—which was a large one for a mid-week gathering—with an exhibition of his grace in rolling. Winslow is not so pretentious as some others of the "profesh," but the ease and smoothness with which he accomplishes the many "fancis" and difficult steps of his art, equals the achievements of those who rank themselves above him.

Friday evening of next week, Denman's Majestic Combination will give at the Rink an entertainment most varied and pleasing. The proprietor of the organization, Mr. Chris Denman, is well known to the Casino's patrons as one of the most affable and obliging of attendants; while Mr. C. L. Skinner, the Manager of the scheme, is probably the most popular of the many courteous officials the public has come in contact with since the opening of the Rink. In return for their services and favors of the past, the Plainfield rollers will undoubtedly accord these gentlemen a big financial success, apart from that which the show deserves by its own merits and excellence. The programme will include bicycle riding, fancy and burlesque rolling and other pleasing features.

The November Century is on the press for the fourth time. The first edition of the February number containing General Grant's "Shiloh," will be 175,000.

THE vagary of fashion which has been brought into general use by ladies of worsted hoods is one of the few instances in which the mode means common sense and comfort.

A Former Plainfielder Honored.

From the Washington, D. C., Critic, we clip the following relating to a former resident of Plainfield, whose many friends will no doubt be pleased to learn of honors bestowed:

"Mr. A. M. Laing, of the Specification Room, Government Printing Office, is growing old. He was three half-score and two years on Christmas day. A few friends who had learned of this agreed to administer a surprise, and in this way made the old boy feel young again. On Thursday evening they called at his residence, No. 68 I street northeast. There they found him with wife and little Eva and Grandma and Grandpa Babbit enjoying their comfortable fireside. Mr. W. H. Miller and lady, W. H. Lowdermilk and lady, Theo. Hodes and lady, Wm. H. Fisher and lady, W. F. Reed and lady, Wm. M. Lloyd and lady, E. S. Lawrence and lady, Col. J. C. Lee and Mr. Ward made the company. A most delightful time was passed. The literary part was received with much gusto. The amusing songs and duets by Messrs. Reed and Ward were well enjoyed. Altogether it was a merry Christmas evening. After refreshments were served and a good strong cup of unadulterated coffee, prepared under the direction of Grandma Babbitt, was partaken of, they were prepared to venture out in the cold, after bidding adieu to friends and wishing the compliments of the season and another year's lease of life to their agreeable host."

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

Powerful Medicine in Baking Powder.
This certifies that I have examined samples of [illegible] and the Royal Baking Powder purchased of grocers in Burlington. [illegible] The use of Ammonia compounds in such a preparation I regard as injurious, as they are powerful medicines and do not serve as food in any way. The Royal, contrary to the representation of the manufacturers, contains Tartrate of Lime. I find, moreover, that Horsford's Baking Powder is of considerably greater strength than the Royal, both samples being equally fresh.

A HOME DRUGGIST
TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS READINGS.

MRS. SPOOPENDYKE IS STAGE-STRUCK.

She And Her Husband Have a Private Rehearsal.

"My dear," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, contemplating herself in the glass as she removed her hat and gloves. "My dear, wasn't the theatre just too sweet for anything! Do you know, I think I would like to go on the stage!"

"Like to drive, perhaps," suggested Mr. Spoopendyke.

"I mean act," replied his wife. "I think I could do it as well as any of those women to-night. Do you know much about the theatres? Is it hard?"

"No," grunted Mr. Spoopendyke, tugging at his boot. "It would be very easy for you. All you have to do is to stand around and talk, and you won't need any rehearsal for that."

"But I would have to practice twisting around so as to fall into that man's arms like she did," mused Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I don't think I could do it as gracefully as she did without trying several times."

"That's the part you want to play, is it?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke, with a shade of green in his eye. "You let me see you fall on any man's shoulders like that, and you'll find no trouble in getting twisted around a few times. What's your idea in going on the stage? Have you got a stomach full of devotion to art like the rest of the women of this generation? Got a sort of notion that you can go on the boards and show the old stagers how it's done, haven't ye? Feel the fires of histrionic genius climbing up your spine, don't ye? Well, you don't! It's nothing but your measly vanity."

"Don't you think I would know how to act?" she asked, pulling her crimps over her forehead, assuming a stern expression of visage, and stretching her arms down rigidly at her sides. "This is the way I would foil the villain."

"Is that what you call it?" inquired Mr. Spoopendyke, nursing his knee and glowering upon her. "It looks more as if you were bidding against another woman for a second-hand hair-cloth sofa at auction. If that sort of thing is calculated to foil the villain he must be pretty light in the waist."

"I don't know," smiled Mrs. Spoopendyke, rubbing her chin. "In all the plays I have ever seen they always drive the bad man off with a haughty look. Say, dear, isn't this the way to welcome a husband after a long absence?" and she parted her lips, gazed eagerly into space, and extended her arms.

"That's the way to hail a street car!" grunted Mr. Spoopendyke. "If you want to make the welcome of the husband perfectly natural you ought to have a smell of onions in the hall and your back hair in your mouth. That's the kind of a welcome I always get."

"No, you don't, either!" protested Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I always run right up to you and kiss you."

"Well, there's a smell of onions about it somewhere," persisted Mr. Spoopendyke. "What makes you stick your arms out like and-irons?" he demanded. "You look as if you were trying to keep off a dog."

"Anyhow, that's the way they do it," argued Mrs. Spoopendyke, a trifle abashed. "Then, when they get the letters telling them that their uncle has speculated away all their property, they do like this," and Mrs. Spoopendyke threw her hand to her forehead, staggered back, and caught hold of a chair.

"Which does like that, the uncle or the property?" asked Mr. Spoopendyke, eyeing the performance with high disdain. "It looks something like the property at the tail end of the speculation, but it resembles more accurately the uncle buying a lower berth for Canada."

"I meant for the orphan, who had been despoiled," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, straightening up and looking rather downcast. "How would you do it, this way?" and she sank into the chair, covered her face with her hands, and sobbed violently.

"If I wanted to give the impression of a tight boot and corn, I should do it just that way," growled Mr. Spoopendyke.

"Should I throw my arms forward listlessly, and let my head fall so?" she inquired, suiting the gesture to the question.

"That's more like it," assented Mr. Spoopendyke with a grin. "People who hadn't seen the play before might think you were counting the pieces for the washerwoman, but the orchestra would understand it."

"I don't care," remonstrated Mrs. Spoopendyke; "I know I could act if I had the chance. Now see me scorn my lover when I find out that he loves me not, and has been paying his addresses to the heiress," and she threw her head back, stretched out one arm, and covered her face with a pale cast of loathing.

"That might do," said Mr. Spoopendyke slowly. "It looks to me like an attempt to borrow $2.50. Stick out the other hand and make it $5. I don't know, though," he continued, "both arms would look like 'bring me back my child!' I guess you'd better stick to the original amount. You'd be more apt to collect."

"Perhaps you think I'd do better in comedy," faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke, her spirits dashed by adverse criticism. "Now, we will suppose that I am the cook and boiled the watermelon, and you, as the master of the house, are enraged with me. How will this do for the cook's attitude of bewilderment and patience?" She struck a comical attitude and gazed at him aghast.

"Don't-Don't!" exclaimed Spoopendyke, burying his face in his hands and pretending to be overcome with emotion. "It is beautiful, but it reminds me so much of mother's death! Please let up! I can't bear it!" and Mr. Spoopendyke sobbed aloud.

"I didn't intend it that way, dear," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke, embracing him tenderly. "Forgive me, but I thought I was acting funny."

"That's all right," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, recovering himself with a jerk. "You talk about acting! Look here, now; I'll just give you one passage, and let that be the end of this whole business."

Mr. Spoopendyke arose, thrust one hand into the breast of his coat, set his teeth tight, and growled. Then he rolled his eyes around and roared, "Aha!" Advancing one foot with the stamp of an elephant, he swung his arm around, and—crash! The mantel ornaments lay in a confused heap on the floor.

"Oh, dear!" murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, trembling from head to foot.

"Got enough?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, surveying the wreck with distended eyes. "Want the rest of this scene, or will you have the play withdrawn on account of sickness in the family? Want to act some more, don't ye?" he howled, his gorge rising. "Got some kind of a notion fastened to your head with hairpins that the whole dramatic business depends on you, and that you only want a wig and a curtain to be a whole theatre with speculators out in front and a bar next door! Oh, go right on and act!" he yelled, and then striking a high falsetto, he squeaked, "Henrico, me own Henrico—ah!—pardon these tears! Oh, God! How can I tell him? Concealment is useless! Henrico!—ah—me own Henrico! The carriage waits!" and Mr. Spoopendyke fell over backwards on the bed and fired his feet up in the air. "On with the dance!" he roared, springing to a perpendicular again. "Bring on the ballet!" and spinning around like a top in the excitement of his wrath, he lost his balance, came down hard on the smashed china, and then went speechless to his couch.

"I don't care," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, brushing away the debris so she could safely sit on the floor to take off her shoes. "I think I could act as well as most of them, though of course I couldn't play villain parts as well as he can, and I don't think I could smash as many things. When he gives me another lesson, I think I'll take him out in the field where he can't break anything but his back."

And with this thrifty resolution, Mrs. Spoopendyke fell upon a microscopic hole in the heel of her sock, and lost sight of the stage in the interest that abrasion excited.

Dr. Boynton recently related that, wishing to explain to a little girl the manner in which a lobster casts his shell when he has outgrown it, he said: "What do you do when you have outgrown your clothes? You throw them aside, don't you?" "Oh, no!" replied the little one, "we let out the tucks!" The Doctor confessed she had the advantage of him there.

A strange story comes from Brunswick, where it is asserted that the Crown insignia, carried in customary form behind the coffin of the late Duke, had been anything but real, having been borrowed from the "paraphernalia" of the Brunswick Court Theatre, in order to disguise the fact of their having long been appropriated and carried off by the Diamond Duke.

Over hill and darksome dingle,
The crackling snow will creak
And grind.
Nestling in the downy pingle,
Laughing at the winter's tingle,
Softest words two fools will mingle,
Ne'er dreaming there's a small boy
"On behind."

LITERARY NOTES.

The Art Interchange of December 4, 1884, has, as a double page supplement, in color entitled the "Late Player." Besides there is a study of golden rod for pencil decoration, and another study of the cardinal flower. An embroidery band is a novel pattern. The background is composed of disks resembling a succession of small wheels, and on this is a leaf and nut design. A design of a head for brass work, a simple arrangement of daisies for bon-bon cover; some geometric designs for tiling or for mosaic floor decoration, a novel design for nut plate and two strong reproductions of etchings, are among the other illustrations. A notable article is on Church Embroidery. The Notes, Queries and Answers department contains information about painting in water colors. This very full and interesting copy of the Art Interchange can be had by enclosing 15 cents in stamps to William Whitlock, Publisher, 140 Nassau street, New York.

ST. NICHOLAS
FOR
ATTRACTIONS FOR 1884-5.

No printed periodical can take the place of parent, pastor, or school-teacher; but a good magazine can supplement their work and influence to a wonderful degree. In view of this, it is not extravagant to say that—instead of "Can we afford to take St. Nicholas?"—the question of every earnest household in English-speaking countries, to-day, should be "Can we afford NOT to take St. Nicholas?"

The magazine, during its eleven happy years of existence, under the editorial charge of MARY MAPES DODGE, has grown familiar to hundreds of thousands of young readers, and their interest and intelligent enjoyment have constantly inspired the editor and publishers to fresh effort. To-day its strength is in the wholesome growth, its sympathy with young life, its hearty recognition of the movement of events, and its steadily increasing literary and pictorial resources. The following are some of the good things already secured for future numbers of St. Nicholas:

"Historic Girls," a companion series to "Historic Boys." By E. S. Brooks.

"Ready for Business"; suggestions to boys about to choose an occupation,—based on personal interviews with prominent representatives of various trades and professions. By G. J. Manson.

"Driven Back to Eden," a serial. By E. P. Roe.

"Talks for Young Folks," a series of papers, by H. H. (Helen Jackson).

"Among the Law-makers"; recollections of a boy-page in the U. S. Senate,—containing much political information, both instructive and amusing. By Edmund Alton.

"Davy and the Goblin," a very funny serial story by a new writer, Chas. Carryl.

Short stories by Louisa M. Alcott.

"The Progress of Invention"; "From Palanquin to Parlor-car," "From Cross-bow to 100-ton Gun," etc. Descriptive papers, by Chas. E. Bolton.

"Art Work for Young Folks"; papers on decorative handicraft, by Chas. G. Leland.

"Sheep or Silver?" a story of Texas life. By the late Rev. William M. Baker.

"A Garden of Girls," being six short stories for girls, by Six Leading Writers.

"Tales of Two Continents"; stories of adventure, by H. H. Boyesen.

Special Papers by chosen writers, including Mary Hallock Foote, Joaquin Miller, Alice Wellington Rollins, G. B. Bartlett, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Rev. Washington Gladden, Julia Schayer, Anna Lea Merritt, W. O. Stoddard, D. Ker, Ernest Ingersoll, Clara E. Clement, Lieutenant Schwatka.

The Illustrations will be the work of the very best artists and engravers,—and there will be plenty of them. In the November and December numbers are beautiful COLORED FRONTISPIECES.

Buy the November number for the children. It costs only 25 cents, and all book and news dealers sell it. The subscription price is $3 a year, and now is just the time to subscribe.

A free specimen copy of St. Nicholas will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

Fuss and Feathers!

Many housekeepers have fuss and trouble with feathers because they are not
CLEAN AND ODORLESS.
We have made arrangements with the Cold Blast Feather Company, of Chicago, for the sale of their goods in this section. The system controlled by this Company for deodorizing feathers has effected a complete revolution in this branch of industry. We can now furnish feathers in perfect condition.

NO ODOR! NO DUST! NO QUILLS! NO GREASE!
Absolutely Clean, Pure and Sweet, and 12 per cent. more bulky than feathers treated by the old-fashioned steaming process.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HEADACHES
Are generally induced by Indigestion, Foul Stomach, Costiveness, Deficient Circulation, or some Derangement of the Liver and Digestive System. Sufferers will find relief by the use of
Ayer's Pills
to stimulate the stomach and produce a regular daily movement of the bowels. By their action on these organs, AYER'S PILLS divert the blood from the brain, and relieve and cure all forms of Congestive and Nervous Headache, Bilious Headache, and Sick Headache; and by keeping the bowels free, and preserving the system in a healthful condition, they insure immunity from future attacks. Try
Ayer's Pills.

POETRY

NAKED TRUTH.

Little drops of printers' ink,
A little type "displayed,"
Make our merchants princes
With all their big parade.

Little bits of stinginess—
Discarding printers' ink—
"Busts" the man of business,
And sees his credit sink.

Help the 'cycler so forlorn.

II.
A month of calm,
To mend an arm,
His nurse that charming dame,
Gay Cupid's dart,
Pierced 'cycler's heart,
And kindled love's bright flame.

III.
A little kiss—
Ah! that was bliss—
A little blush and "Yes."
A little ring,
To bind the thing,
A clergyman and dress.

IV.
A little cot,
Where strife is not,
Nor bickering nor fuss,
A whistling toy,
For baby boy,
A tricycle for us.

DIDN'T SETTLE MR. LINDSAY.

BY MARY N. PRESCOTT.

Mr. Lindsay was preaching in the Lennox parish on probation; that is, he had been engaged for the year. After that time, if he suited Miss Rich, who had the parish in charge, so to speak, who canvassed for money to paint the church, looked up poor children for christening and Sunday school, exhorted the young people to join the confirmation class, mapped out work for the sewing society, planted the church Christmas tree, and made the parish her hobby—if he suited Miss Rich, if he was High Church enough for Mr. Grimm and Low enough for Mrs. Phelps, if he believed with Dr. Slow in the doctrine of election—why, then they were sure to settle him.

"What a capital wife Lucretia Shaw would make Mr. Lindsay," vouchsafed Miss Rich, shortly after he adorned the Lennox pulpit. "She's just the person for a parson's wife—bustling, and——"

"I'm afraid she'd take the parish off your hands, Miss Rich," answered Mrs. Phelps, who, having no desire to do the hard work which her neighbors loved, yet grudged her the credit of it.

"Well, there's work enough for two of us in the parish, Mrs. Phelps. I wouldn't be a bit afraid but I'd git my share."

"To be sure," pursued Mrs. Phelps, "Lucretia's smart, and I don't believe in a pastor with a doll of a wife who can't darn the children's clothes, and is too feeble to get along without 'help.'"

"Yes," put in old Mrs. Smith; "she'd be no end of a stepmother to Mr. Lindsay's boy, and if ever a boy needed a stepmother it's him. Lucretia's powerful smart, as you say, and she'd make him walk Spanish."

"Yes," added Miss Rich, "a widower somehow needs a wife more'n anybody, to sympathize with him in his loss. I shouldn't wonder if Lucretia would bring the boy up to the ministry if she had her way."

"Between you and me," said Mrs. Phelps, "I think that the parson goes to the Shaws rather more than is necessary for the salvation of their souls."

"You can't tell. Perhaps Lucretia has doubts."

"I've engaged Lucretia to embroider a new alter cloth," explained Miss Rich; "I raised the money for it last month—I tell you it's like pulling teeth to get money out of this parish—and I suppose the parson has to advise her about the proper designs and things. Lucretia ain't well drilled in symbols and such, you know."

In fact, everybody in Lennox had decided that Mr. Lindsay should marry Lucretia, and perhaps Lucretia had decided so too, for she was an everlasting time over that altar-cloth, and needed no end of advice and instruction; her ignorance and interest were quite touching. And Mr. Lindsay seemed quite willing to spend his leisure under the Shaw's roof, and watch the sacred symbols growing under the white and shapely hands of Miss Lucretia.

"That hand of Lucretia's will be sure to do the business," somebody had said. "Mr. Lindsay's a man of taste, if he is a clergyman"—as if the two were not usually found combined—"and I heard him say it was fit for a duchess."

Miss Lucretia' hand was, indeed, her loveliest feature, so to speak—white as snow, with the prettiest taper fingers, pink at the ends. Once when Mr. Lindsay had mentioned them flatteringly, Miss Susan, who was doing the week's mending near by, drew her own hands under her work, he noticed. Nobody ever took the trouble to flatter Miss Susan. Lucretia sang in the choir, although her voice was thin as muslin, and she had no ear; nobody dreamed or cared if Susan sang like a seraph; she sat in Lucretia's shadow, and people almost forgot she was there, till they needed her help. Mr. Lindsay had taught the choir himself, and after the altar-cloth could no longer be made a pretext to cover a multitude of calls, there were the chants and fugues to practice. One morning, as he drilled Lucretia for half an hour ineffectually, he suddenly turned to Susan.

"Come," he said, "try this chant with us, Miss Susan;" and Susan opened her mouth and chanted as nobody in the choir had ever chanted before.

"Bravo!" he cried. "When did you learn it?"

"Why, I have heard it all my life; why shouldn't I know it? I couldn't help it."

"We must have you in the choir," he said.

"Susan Shaw in the choir!" gasped everybody on the way out of church. "Mr. Lindsay is bringing her out."

"[illegible] Lucretia's shadow, you know," explained Miss Rich.

"And her voice rather drowns Lucretia's," said Dr. Slow.

Mr. Lindsay was giving great satisfaction. The parishioners talked of remodeling the old rectory, adding a wing and a bay window, and even spoke of taking in an adjoining field, so that "Lucretia might have a flower garden." They even meditated an increase of salary as soon as he should be settled in the parish, and Mr. Grimm thought he should add a codicil to his will in favor of the new pastor and Lucretia's husband.

"When they're married," reckoned Miss Rich, with unchristian thrift, "we shall have all our church trappings embroidered for nothing, I suppose."

"Do you think Susan will live with 'em?" asked Mrs. Phelps. "P'r'aps he won't care about marrying the whole family."

"He's powerful kind to Susan, though."

"He takes a sight of notice of her."

It was surely plain that Mr. Lindsay took pleasure in the society at the Shaw homestead. At picnic, at prayer meetings or choir meetings he was always at hand to take Lucretia and Susan home; he lent them his books and directed their reading; he brought them flowers from town when he happened to go up.

"I shall be so glad to give up the Presidency of the Bethel Society and the Dakota League to Lucretia," said Miss Rich. "It's only proper for the clergyman's wife to be at the head of them."

"You'll feel sorter lost without 'em?" asked Mrs. Phelps.

"The parish is a large field. I think I can spare them to Lucretia. Do you know, the other night as I was going to watch with Miss Hart when she had inflammation of the lungs, I came across Lucretia and Susan and Mr. Lindsay. I must say I should think Susan would have more taste than to follow 'em everywhere. Why don't she keep herself in the background?"

"She's been pretty much in the background all her life," said Dr. Slow. "Perhaps she's tired of the situation."

"But she ought to have more consideration. P'r'aps the lovers don't mind her. There they were, all three of 'em watching the comet and studying the heavens."

"A proper study for a clergyman," said Dr. Slow.

"And he was pointing out all the constellations, and it seemed to me they was looking at him instead of the stars," pursued Miss Rich.

"It would be a complication," suggested Mrs. Phelps, "if, while he's courting Lucretia, Susan should get in love with him."

"It wouldn't be no use," said Mrs. Grimm. "Lucretia's that smart she'd make him believe it was her he was 'dying for.'"

"But what's the use of talking about Susan? Who ever expects him to marry Susan Shaw! People usually do what's expected of 'em, and the parish expects Mr. Lindsay to marry Lucretia."

"They want to settle Lucretia, eh?" asked Dr. Slow.

The Shaws had enough to keep the wolf from the door, but nothing to spare; they owned their house, but kept no servant. "Help would be dreadfully in their way," Miss Rich declared. "I wonder they don't feel glad they can't afford any."

Susan always wore the simplest garments, which she designed and executed herself, while Lucretia—"Well, if there's anything that unfits Lucretia for her future position at the head of the parish," confessed Mrs. Phelps, "it's her love of finery."

Lucretia always blossomed out in a pretty bonnet—while her last year's one answer—and a smart new suit made in the latest wrinkle.

"It's natural," Miss Rich explained; "a girl likes to make the most of herself. Susan looks as well in her old things as she would in Indy cashmere; besides, Lucretia earns her ribbons and laces. Ain't she embroidering day and night?"

"Except when she's off skylarking with the parson," said Dr. Slow.

"I'm sure she's always chaperoned by Susan," returned Mrs. Grimm.

"Yes; there ain't been no occasion of Susan's going about with 'em," added Miss Rich. "She don't seem to have the smallest idea she ain't wanted. She ain't used to lovers, you see."

"But if Lucretia embroiders night and day," said Mrs. Grimm's sister-in-law—who was only in Lennox on a visit, and had no earthly concern with parish affairs, Mrs. Grimm thought—"who keeps house, and does the house-cleaning and the dusting and sweeping, cooks and mends, I'd like to know?"

"Of course Susan does them little things," confessed Miss Rich. "Anybody can do 'em; there's nothing else she knows how to do. Wouldn't it be a pity for Lucretia to waste her time, now, washing dishes, keeping the lodgers' rooms in pimlico, spoiling them white hands of hers—pretty enough for a parish to be proud of—when she can make such lovely ferns and flowers as she does?"

"Who made all the evergreen trimmings for the church last Christmas?" asked Dr. Slow. "Was it those pretty hands of Lucretia's?"

"Well, she's Lucretia's sister; and that give her a taste for decorations, I suppose," said Mrs. Phelps.

"Mr. Lindsay took Susan out in his boat t'other day," said Mrs. Grimm, a few weeks later. "Lucretia had one of her 'sick headaches.' That's what I call real saintly in him. It must have been such a bore. It's a pity Lucretia's troubled with them headaches, if she's going to be at the head of the parish."

"Oh, was that Susan?" asked Mrs. Phelps. "I thought of course it was Lucretia. I saw them come ashore after dusk, and they stood at the gate and talked till all was blue."

"I suppose they was talking about Lucretia," persisted Miss Rich; "a man always likes to talk about his sweetheart, you know."

"They must have had lots to say. He'd seemed as interested as when he's expounding Scripture. They looked mighty affectionate, too. I don't believe Lucretia'd have liked the look of it."

"There ain't nothing jealous about Lucretia; a parson's wife oughtn't to set her face agin such a thing."

It was about this time that the parish picnic occurred—an institution which everybody believed in. Hadn't there been more matches made at the last than during all the year besides? And wasn't it a fine chance to test Mrs. Phelps' recipes, Miss Rich's cream pies, and Mrs. Dr. Slow's tarts? Of course Lucretia went, and Mr. Lindsay with her. Susan happened to be making preserves and pickles that day, and the berries wouldn't keep, and so she staid at home. At about the middle of the afternoon, when they had had dinner and cleared away, and things were a little slow, and they wanted somebody to start some music, Mr. Lindsay was nowhere to be found.

"Oh, he's gone off with Lucretia somewhere," said Miss Rich, who felt it her duty to account for him.

"No; there's Lucretia now, talking about free will with Dr. Slow."

"P'r'aps he's gone home to write his sermon," suggested somebody else, the picnic grove being only a half mile from town.

"Or he's finding 'tongues in trees and sermons' out here."

But at sunset Mr. Lindsay strolled back, with Susan on his arm, in time to join them at tea, and he and Susan made the coffee, and pitched the tunes they sang before the day ended.

"Now wasn't that real thoughtful in Mr. Lindsay to go after Susan? That's what I call real Christian, and a brother-in-law worth having," commented one old lady.

But when Mrs. Bishop, who had staid at home with a teething baby, reported that Mr. Lindsay had not gone home to write his sermon, but had walked straight into Susan's kitchen and had helped her seal up the preserve jars and set them away, and had sat in the front porch an hour or two afterward with her—when he might have been with Lucretia—reading secular poetry, and not Dr. Watts or Charles Wesley either, the parish rose in its wrath to a woman. This would never do; Lucretia must not be trifled with. Mr. Lindsay had inspired hope in her gentle heart; he must marry Lucretia or leave the parish.

"You see," explained Mr. Phelps, "we want to settle you, Mr. Lindsay. You suit us to a T, but it kinder seems as if you ought to propose to Lucretia Shaw, you've been so attentive."

"Propose to Lucretia Shaw!" repeated the young man, with a startled air. "What has that to do with settling me? Is every clergyman who comes to Lennox obliged to propose to Lucretia Shaw as a preliminary preparation?"

"Well, no, not exactly," laughed Mr. Phelps, "not unless he's give the parish reason to expect it. You know we don't want the credit of settling a philandering parson who makes love right and left. I'd no idea the thought would be new to you, but the parish has set its heart on the match, you see, and we wouldn't like to settle a man, if he was eloquent in prayer, who trifled with the affections of one of the flock, you know."

"But, my dear sir," said Mr. Lindsay. "I'm not in love with Lucretia Shaw. You wouldn't have me perjure myself?"

"Not in love with Lucretia! The parish won't believe its own eyes agin, I reckon."

"Well, said Mr. Grimm severely, "we couldn't think of settling a preacher that hadn't no more principle than to throw over Lucretia Shaw after taking tea so much at her house, and raising her hopes, as it were."

"Perhaps," said Mr. Lindsay, after a pause—"perhaps you will be able to forgive me for not proposing to Lucretia when I tell you that I have already proposed to Susan. You see, it would complicate matters a little if I were to accede to your wishes. However, I have lately received a call from a Western parish, and should feel obliged to decline the Lennox parish, even if you had thought me worthy of it, as this other furnishes a wider field of usefulness——"

"And larger salary, I suppose," added Mr. Grimm.

"And larger salary," allowed Mr. Lindsay. "Double, in fact."

"I suppose," persisted Miss Rich, after the wedding—"I suppose Lucretia must have refused him first."

REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA.

Numbers of children are suffering from diphtheria, and the skill of the best physicians frequently proves useless against the attack of the dread disease. It often happens that a simple remedy is of more value in some cases than the most skillful treatment, and just at this time all suggestions which bear the evidence of worth are interesting and valuable. A communication to the Post-Dispatch gives a remedy which the writer declares was tried with success in the case of the son of one of the city letter-carriers, and which is believed to be very effective. It is at least harmless, and there can be no ill results from a test of its efficacy. The recipe is as follows: Place black oxide to the depth of half an inch in an ordinary tumbler and put in enough muriatic acid to form a paste. This mixture should be placed on the floor of the room or, what is even better, under the bed occupied by the patient. The fumes of the mixture will rise and will be breathed by the sufferer; in this way the germs of the disease will be killed and relief will be afforded in a few hours' time.

LITERARY NOTES.

For many years the name of James Vick has been familiar to the people of this country. He was among the first of those who have built up here an extensive business as seedsman and florist. The reputation of the firm for prompt and honest dealing was soon established, and all over the land it was soon held to be safe to invest money in the articles offered by James Vick. A few years ago the business was extended, so as to include flowering plants, shrubs, bulbs, etc. All varieties of flower and vegetable seeds are sent out, as usual, by mail, and express, all warranted to be as good as can be produced, and now orders for plants and bulbs are filled with the same certainty that the purchasers will receive what they order. The new catalogue for this year is very attractive. It describes every variety of plant and flower one would wish to cultivate in garden or house. The prices are reasonable. The price of the Floral Guide is 10 cents, which will be remitted to those who give an order for seeds or plants. Address James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.—Gospel Banner.

The January Magazine of American History is interesting in all its varied features. The frontispiece is a fine portrait of Count De Vergennes, illustrating an exceptionally well-considered paper by Hon. John Jay, on the life and character of the great French statesman. The "Manor of Gardiner's Island" is an illustrated paper by the Editor. "Puritanism in New York," by Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D. D., traces the origin and growth of this religious force until the middle of the XVIIIth century. The "Building of the Monitor," by Rev. Francis B. Wheeler, D.D., of Poughkeepsie, is another paper presenting new facts of special historic value. A notable contribution to the number is the illustrated "Diary of Dr. John Jeffries," the first aeronaut who crossed the English channel in a balloon. He was an American, and the centennial of the event is to be celebrated in Boston on January 7, 1885. Original Documents contains seven unpublished letters from prominent men of the Revolution. Charles Ledyard Norton furnishes the second chapter of "Political Americanisms"; and Minor Topics, Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and the other departments are even more highly entertaining than usual. Price, $5 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Would it not be as appropriate to tell a shoemaker to heel himself as to make that remark to a physician?

THE ATTACHMENT.

"Bax!"

Baxter Jones, called "Bax," for short, was Squire Syphax's office clerk.

"Yes, sir," answered Bax.

"Fill me out a writ of attachment," said the squire. "I'll stand no more of this nonsense."

"Yes, sir—what name, sir?"

"You'll find it there," said the squire, writing on a card and tossing it over to Bax, who picked it up and set about his work. The document was speedily finished and presented to the squire, who affixed his signature.

"Give it to Constable Darby and tell him to serve it without delay," added the squire.

"Yes, sir."

"And when he brings in his prisoner, report to me."

"Yes, sir."

Squire Syphax, magisterially, was the sternest of men; individually he was one of the most soft-hearted and yielding.

For the moment he was filled with official indignation toward a delinquent, on whom, for some contemptuous disregard of the law's behests, he was determined to visit his weightiest penalty. He was still feeble from a recent and severe attack of illness, and while waiting the return of the warrant, he retired to seek a little rest, meanwhile forgetting the cares of office in a delicious revery, of which the charms of a certain lovely creature were the central feature. In this occupation let us leave him for the present, merely premising that he was a bachelor, both diffident and susceptible.

Bob Darby was a constabulary model. He did his duty to the letter and expended few words about it.

When the servant came in answer to his ring of Widow Goodheart's door-bell.

"Is your mistress at home?" Bob inquired.

"She is," was the response.

"Tell her I must see her," said Bob.

"She's very busy," replied the maid, "and unless the business is very particular——"

"It is werry particular," interrupted Bob, brushing past and entering without ceremony. "I'm werry sorry to inconwenience you, mum," he said, when Mrs. Goodheart had made her appearance; "but I've got to take you over to the squire's right away."

The widow turned pale and trembled.

"Has the dear man—has he had a relapse?" she asked in a tremulous tone.

"Couldn't say, mum," answered Bob; "all I know is, it's a case of 'tachment."

"A case of attachment!" exclaimed the widow, the color mounting to her handsome face.

"I shall be ready in a moment," cried the widow and so indeed she was.

"There's a kerridge at the door, mum," said Bob, and when he had handed the lady in nothing more was said till they reached the squire's door.

That functionary, like many country magistrates, kept his office at his house, and into the apartment so appropriated the widow was at once ushered.

Bob Darby, having duly signed the return upon the writ, handed it over to the squire's clerk, who proceeded straightway to notify his honor.

As the latter entered he started with surprise. Instead of the contemptuous culprit, Dick Slote, at whose guilty head he was prepared to hurl the law's anathemas, it was the lovely Widow Goodheart, the angel of his dreams, whom he saw before him! In the name of all the Dromios, what diabolical error was this?

Catching up the returned warrant, to his horror he read:

"To any constable, greeting: You are hereby commanded to take the body of Dorothy Goodheart and bring the same forthwith before me, etc., etc.

CALEB SYPHAX, J. P."

Darting a look of wrath at the clerk and the constable, he ordered them to withdraw.

"My dear Mrs. Goodheart," began the squire blushing to the tips of his ears, "how can I atone for this annoyance?"

"Oh, it's no annoyance, I assure you," simpered the widow. "I'm so glad to find you are not ill."

"But—but this unfortunate attachment," stammered the squire, dashing aside the ill-starred document.

"I—I have long returned it," naively murmured the widow, turning as red as himself.

A gleam of gladness flashed over the squire's countenance. Could it be she was ignorant of the indignity she had suffered? And then, to find the ice so happily broken! He clasped her hand, pressed it to his lips, and poured out the tale of his pent-up love with an ardor and eloquence which fairly astonished himself. The widow's pretty head drooped on his shoulder as, with alternate smiles and tears she listened rapturously to what she had so long been waiting to hear.

The squire came back a happy man from escorting the widow home that evening. But the sight of Bax. Jones aroused his fury.

"How dare you play me such a trick?" he thundered.

"What trick?" inquired Bax. innocently.

"What trick?—why, putting Mrs. Goodheart's name in that attachment?"

"I put in the name you gave me," answered Bax.

"It's false!" roared the squire.

"Here's the card," rejoined the clerk.

The squire glanced at it. It was one of Mrs. Goodheart's cards, left with some delicacy when she had sent during his late illness. On the blank side he had unwittingly written the name to be inserted in the writ. Whether the clerk had copied from the wrong side by mistake, or had played off a practical joke, was not quite clear to the squire's mind, for Bax., in point of gravity, fell short of his distinguished namesake, the author of "Saints' Rest."

However, in view of the happy issue and Bax.'s earnest professions of innocence, he was finally let off; but with a caution both to him and Bob Darby never to mention the affair under the pain of the squire's hot displeasure.

BREAKING HIM IN.

BY H. E. W.

Mr. Eusebius Podgett determined to get married.

He had arrived at such a determination perhaps a dozen times already in the course of his eventful life, but now there were weightier reasons than ever why he should delay no longer.

The first of these reasons was that he had reached an age when any further delay appeared dangerous.

The second was that he discovered almost all of his bachelor friends were either exchanging single blessedness for the charms of Hymen or dying off.

And the third reason consisted in the fact that the Widow Penryn, whose "dear departed" had left her a handsome estate, was coming to Ryeville to reside, having finished her period of mourning.

Mr. Podgett was somewhat mercenary in his views, and the knowledge that the widow, who was neither fat, though probably 40, was possessed of a goodly share of this world's chattels, went a great way in his estimation toward making up for the lack of personal attractions.

To tell the unvarnished truth, he was about the stingiest specimen of the genus homo of which the village of Ryeville, whose citizens were not generally famed for their liberality, could boast, and already his fingers itched to obtain control of the fine property, which he feared would be recklessly squandered.

The widow, on her part, met his advances in a spirit he thought eminently proper, and soon gave him to understand that his visits were welcome; and when he asked the momentous question, very quickly rejoiced his expectant heart by a low and gentle—"Yes."

By mutual consent an early marriage was agreed upon, and it was not long before the solemn words were spoken which, he flattered himself, gave him at once a loving wife and considerable money.

He waited until the fourth morning after the ceremony, however, before he broached the momentary subject, and then, after giving her all manner of hints, to which she was apparently blind, he cleared his throat and said:

"My dear, is not the management of so much property a great burden to you?"

"Well, yes, love, it has been rather a burden," replied his wife, smilingly; "but I do not expect to be troubled with such cares a great while longer."

"No!" he eagerly exclaimed. "Of course, you may safely intrust all financial matters to the care of your husband?"

"Certainly."

"Any time," he went on to say, "that it meets your convenience, I should be happy to assume the control of your estate. I doubt not, my dear, that you would find in me a faithful steward."

"Thank you," was her reply; "but I fear it is a little too early to trust it you now—by and by we will come to an understanding."

And feeling that the subject was dismissed for the present, he gracefully retired from the field, though inwardly fuming at the delay.

About a week later he chanced to return from his daily business pursuits earlier than usual, and hearing voices in earnest conversation, in the library, paused a moment to listen.

"And didn't your husband leave you a cent of his money?" said a voice he recognized as that of 'Squire Blackstone, the village lawyer.

"No. As I told you, when I got married again it all reverted to his first wife's children," replied a voice which sounded marvelously like Mrs. Podgett's.

"The mischief!" cried Mr. Podgett, as, boiling over with wrath, he rushed into the room, excitedly.

His wife looked up serenely.

"But what do I care for those few paltry dollars," said she, "now that I have the love of a true heart? And Mr. Podgett is wealthy enough to support me comfortably. Aren't you, my dear?"

"Is it true that you have lost all your property by marriage?" he cried, not deigning to notice her question.

"Yes, love; but I did not suppose that would make any difference with you," she replied.

"By Jupiter, madam, you may think as you choose, but I am not going to put up with all this!" yelled Mr. Eusebius Podgett, livid with passion.

"Not going to put up with what, dearest?" inquired the still smiling wife.

"With your inveigling me into such a trap! Yes, you may snicker and smirk, but it wont be of any use, I promise you! You deceived me!——"

"I didn't!"

"You did!"

"You tell a falsehood, Mr. Podgett!"

"Well, any way, I was deceived. People said you owned a handsome property."

"I did, until I married you. I gave it up for your sake."

"My sake be——blessed!" said Mr. Podgett, remembering that he belonged to Elder Poundext's church. "Why, in the name of patience, didn't you tell me how it was? Then I shouldn't have married you."

The sleeping tigress was aroused.

"Do you mean," cried Mrs. Podgett, with blazing eyes, "that you only married me for my money."

"Well," replied Mr. Podgett, "what else could I have married you for? You're as homely as a——"

But just then something struck his head with a dull thud, and several millions of stars corruscated before his astonished vision. Then he thought he would lie down. His next experience made him think that there had been an eruption of Indians in Ryeville, and that one of the savages was attempting to remove his scalp, one lock at a time, and without the aid of a knife. After that he remembered nothing distinctly.

When he came to, he found himself on the sofa, while his wife sat reading by the window.

"Madam," said he, "leave my house!"

"I won't!" said madam.

"Then I'll sell out and go where you can never find me."

She dropped her book and came slowly to his side.

"Eusebius Podgett," she said, solemnly, "we must understand each other. You have taken me for better or worse. Now answer me once and for all, which shall it be—better or worse?"

Mr. Podgett gave one glance at the flaming eyes looking down upon him—put his hand to his aching head—and then his colors were struck.

"It shall be for better," he groaned.

It happily proved so. The first storm having been effectual in clearing the domestic atmosphere, no other infelicities of any moment ever disturbed the home of Mr. Podgett. And to-day he does not hesitate to claim that Mrs. Podgett is the smartest, most amiable and best wife in Ryeville; while she admits that, as a husband, he is nearly faultless.

"But," she says, "I was obliged to use all my power of eloquence at first—after that we had no further trouble."

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

HONESTY.

"Public office is a public trust."

That is the declared motto of the Democratic President-elect Grover Cleveland, and a grander sentiment in the interest of good government no man can utter.

It is of especial value at this time, because the contrary has long been a stigma and prominent trait in official life.

With President Cleveland fidelity will not remain an empty saying, but under his administration, to the widest possible extent, will it find positive and practical observance.

Men in office qualified to discharge duty aright, and honest enough to do so for lawful pay and not a dollar extra, is the great reform now needed.

Institute that, and the day for officials becoming very rich on salaries of a few thousand dollars per annum will have passed away.

Honesty in office will make office a public trust.

PEACE.

The New Year beams upon the States of the American Union at peace among themselves and with all the world.

Nowhere throughout the immense expanse of our national domain is heard the angry voice of war.

Discord is stilled. The challenge of armed hosts has given way to the music of productive industry, and rivalry for martial renown to the far higher glory of peaceful emulation.

So should it be and so may it forever remain.

No people ever possessed such a bountiful inheritance as those clothed with the proud title of American citizens, and no consideration can possibly equal the patriotic duty of preserving and enhancing it for the honor of free government and the welfare of mankind.

Swayed by laws intelligently framed and faithfully executed on behalf of the just rights of all the people, for the development of natural resources, the proper encouragement of every legitimate enterprise and pursuit, and with unwavering devotion to the Constitution, both as regards its letter and its spirit, human calculation cannot limit the future moral influence and material richness of this country.

The duty of the hour is PATRIOTISM.

ROYAL BLOOD.

We detest aristocracy of every name and kind. It is rank disloyalty to the principles of a Republic fought for and established to honor and reward worth of character, regardless of worldly class or condition, or the absurd idea of superiority of blood.

A disposition to ape foreign aristocrats and keep alive in this country their contemptible glitter and exclusiveness is very apparent, as the following special telegram to a New York journal, bearing date Philadelphia, Dec. 31st., plainly shows:

"A great ball was given here tonight by the Cadwalader family, which claims descent from the royal blood of England. St. George's Hall, where the ball was held, was decorated with a portrait of Queen Victoria and the Cadwalader arms. John Cadwalader, who is said to bear a personal resemblance to Napoleon Bonaparte, led in the German which was danced at midnight. All the aristocratic old Philadelphia families were represented by the Binneys, Rawles, Biddles, Rushes, Shippens, Willings, Markoes, Adamses and many more. Everything was on a scale of great magnificence. Mrs. James P. Scott, wife of the son of the late Thomas A. Scott, who inherits most of his fortune, wore three diamond necklaces valued at $100,000. The old New York families, the Livingstons, and many more were represented."

People calling themselves Americans, and enjoying the blessings of free government, glorying in claimed descent from the "royal blood of England."

Why do they not pack up and ship themselves to the congenial clime of monarchy?

They are aliens to the spirit of American Independence and ought to be aliens from its soil.

The Revolution was designed to make all American citizens free and equal, and to crown with deserving honor personal integrity and ability, not pride of birth, wealth or position.

And then, amid "great magnificence," the wife of a scion of a Railroad King flashing on her person diamonds to the value of $100,000, when thousands of poor laborers are digging and delving from morning to night for the starvation pay of ninety cents a day or less.

Away with such things! We detest them from the bottom of our hearts, and cannot avoid expressing it.

WATTERSON'S IDEA OF IT.

The great Louisville Courier-Journal (Dem.) puts in a nutshell the causes of Democratic success:

"The Lord of Hosts gave us Blaine, and threw in Burchard, and raised up St. John, and sent down the rain on election day—the divil contributed Gould and inspired Conkling—and so, among all hands, Good Lord, good divil, we pulled through somehow, and here we are."

GOVERNOR CLEVELAND RETIRES.

Governor Cleveland retired to private life at one o'clock on Tuesday last, and Lieutenant-Governor Hill was installed Governor of New York in his stead. Governor Cleveland's message on the occasion was the briefest on record. It was as follows:

STATE OF NEW YORK,
EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Jan. 6, 1885.

To the Honorable the Legislature:

GROVER CLEVELAND.

February 10th will be "Jersey Day" at New Orleans.

New Jersey's exhibit at New Orleans does the State great credit.

There are said to be over [illegible]0,000 roller skating rinks in the country.

There were 674 prisoners in the county jail during last year, an increase of 132 over 1883.

The New Jersey Legislature will open on Tuesday, Jan. 13th. Both branches being Republican there will be a complete change in the various offices. For Speaker of the Assembly E. A. Armstrong, of Camden, is conceded to have the best prospects now, but as it is a three cornered fight, a compromise may defeat him. John J. Gardner will probably be President of the Senate again.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

FRIDAY EVENING, Jan. 2d.

The Council of 1884 met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Gardner, Livingston, Love, Marsh, Simpson, Wadsworth and West—10

Absent—Mr. Ross—1.

The minutes of regular meeting of Dec. 1st, and adjourned meeting of the 5th, were approved as read.

Mr. Hugh McDonnell presented a petition for a hack license. Ref'd.

City Physician Fritts requested the Council to pay the Corporation Counsel Marsh a fee of $20 for his services in the case of Gillette vs Fritts, a matter growing out of a suit of the former to recover the amount of back taxes against him paid to the city by the latter.

The Corporation Counsel, who was present, stated that he had not appeared for Mr. Fritts as the City's Counsel, but as his lawyer, and that Mr. Fritts had agreed to the fee and had promised to pay it.

Communication referred to Laws Com.

The following claims were presented and referred to the proper committees: G. W. Dodd, $38.34; G. W. Grant, $50; P. J. Flanagan, $50; T. McCue, $50; N. Kelly, $50; J. Noel, $8.75; F. B. Pruden, $54; Muhlenberg Hospital, $5.71; J. O. Nedyne, $14; D. Hand, $252.98.

The quarterly report of the Overseer of the Poor, the monthly report of the Collector, and the Treasurer's report were read and placed on file, and the last ordered printed as it appears in another column.

The Street Commissioner reviewed the condition and costs of the streets of the city, in a communication as below:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 2, 1885.
To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—During the past year the Street Commissioner has endeavored to keep the roadway of Plainfield in as good repair as the funds appropriated would allow. The streets most constantly used are in better condition at this date than in any previous year, because larger expenditures have been made. The total amount spent upon the road-beds of the City streets from February 1, 1884, to Dec. 31, 1884, has been approximately $7,000, including $900 for cleaning out sewer basins and railroad culverts. Itemized, this sum has been expended as follows: For cracked stone, $2,919.50 (all of which has been used except about $50 worth recently delivered for spreading upon West Front street), for work in spreading stone on the streets provided for by ordinance, viz: Central avenue, Peace street and Broadway, Fifth street and Second street, $1,300. For work on street repairs, other than spreading stone about $2,800, divided as follows: Expended on the streets in first ward, $200; in second ward, $400; in third ward, $750, in fourth ward, $850; for general street improvements $400 and the $200 referred to for cleaning the New street sewer-basins and railroad culverts. Of this total expenditure of $7,000, about $2,400 have been used for work and material in spreading crushed stone on 10,000 lineal feet of above mentioned roadways, sixteen feet wide; the improvement on Park avenue, macadamizing that thoroughfare from Front street to Second street and from North avenue to the railroad; and from Fifth to Sixth street cost about $1,000. The balance of the appropriation was expended as narrated—on the streets in the different wards.

Respectfully submitted,
G. M. ANGLEMAN, St. Com'r.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Com. on Rooms—Recommended that the early attention of the new Council be called to the matter of securing new rooms for the use of itself and its committees.

Alms Com—As correct the claims in hand. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Finance Com—Submitting a statement of the expenses and disbursements of the city during 1884 as printed below. Rec'd and filed. Also as correct the claims of the Collector. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield. The Finance Committee respectfully report the following:

The warrants of the year 1883, which have been paid by the Treasurer during the year, amount to $2,112.69. The warrants of 1884 unpaid amount to $2,500 [estimated]. Taking into consideration the difference in these amounts, the expenses of the city that are chargeable to the general fund have been for the year past $21,000 in round numbers. This amount of course includes the extra $5,000, authorized to be raised and spent on the streets.

The Collector of taxes reports the collection of $77,033.52. This amount includes costs and interest and is the total of all moneys received by him during the past year. We find he has vouchers for the same as follows: City Treasurer for $57,524.13; Board of Education, $17,056.71, and judgments $2,300, leaving a balance in judgment account of $152.68, which he still holds. The amount of taxes for the year 1883 collected in that year was 74 per cent. of the total. The percentage for the past year was 77 per cent. This is a very favorable feature considering the great depression in business during the year 1884.

Your committee have also examined the vouchers and books of the City Treasurer, and find his accounts correct. The State and County tax of $38,052.51 was promptly paid, as also the bills which the city has had to pay, during the year. The condition of the finances is very satisfactory, and your successors will start with a cash balance of $10,435.25 against which there are notes of $5,000, and unpaid bills of say $2,500. This is an improvement over the 1st of January 1884 of $1,300.

We repeat the recommendation of our predecessors in regard to the procuring of assessment maps and we believe the collection of taxes as well as their assessment would be greatly facilitated by them. The cost would be about $1,600, and as it would take some time to complete the set, the payments would be only partial ones and not be felt at the time.

We would call your attention, in the figures below, to the comparitively small amounts of delinquent taxes for the years 1881 and 1882. In 1882 a delinquent tax collector forced the payment of many taxes by making levies, and this with advertising and sale of real estate for those years, produced this favorable result.

Of the total amount of delinquent taxes about $10,000 belongs to the Board of Education.

Lamps Com—As correct the claims of N. Y. & N. J., and Plainfield Gas Light Co's. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

Laws Com—Reporting on the Clark matter, and recommending that the case be pushed to a settlement. Rec'd and filed. Also that the School Board was ready to accept its responsibility for any just claim for the services of the city's Assessor and Collector in its behalf; and Clerk was directed to present an itemized account of such claim. The bill of Dr. Fritts was returned as not a valid claim against the city. Sundry unfinished business in the Committee's hands was returned to the table.

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

The Committee to whom was referred matter of claim of City against late Collector Lewis E. Clark, and late Township Treasurer J. B. Coward; beg leave to submit their final report. As before reported part of the claim against Clark has been satisfactorily adjusted, but there still remains certain open accounts which should in some way be provided for. The matter that presents the greatest difficulty to the Committee is the question of responsibility on two certain payments claimed to have been made by each Mr. Clark and Mr. Coward and deducted by each in their accounts whereby the City as successor to the Township finds itself short the amount paid payments by reason of both parties claiming to have paid over the amount, which certainly was only received once—and both parties retaining that amount in their alleged settlements. That matter once adjusted the Committee think there will be but little difficulty in getting an adjustment of the balance of the deficiency that now seems to exist. Your Committee think the matter should be followed up until all questions involved shall be settled. The success thus far achieved in the premises certainly will warrant the City in pushing the matter to the end and will make a final adjustment of the whole case more easy. A resort to the courts may be the only resource left, and your Committee think it clearly the duty of the Council to adopt that way, if necessary to solve the problem of responsibility and think that it should receive the early attention of the incoming Council. As no further progress can be made by the Committee than reported on they beg to be discharged from further consideration of the case.

The Salaries Committee, under a suspension of the rules, submitted the following from the Mayor in relation to the matter in its hands of fixing such officer's compensation for the past two years' services:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 29, 1884.
ANDREW LOVE, Esq., Chairman of the Com. on Salaries and Elections:

DEAR SIR:—It is impossible to give the exact amount of expenses attending the Mayor's office for the past two years, such incidentals as postage, postal cards, carriage hire and special errands not being counted. A clerk at three dollars per week, made necessary by the keeping of a Mayor's office open in the centre of the business portion of the City accessible at all times to the citizens and actually paid by me amounts to $212. The additional time of the Mayor occupied by the citizens because he has been at all times accessible. The duty imposed by the charter on the Mayor of holding the City Court during the absence or inability of the City Judge amounting in the past two years to at least three months, are matters to be fairly considered in according such compensation as the charter contemplates, not exceeding three hundred dollars per annum. With the growth of our City the duties of the Mayor has became more onorous and whoever doing business in Plainfield holds the office and attends to its duties will find much of his time occupied to the prejudice of his private affairs.

Respectfully,
WM. B. MAYSON, Mayor.

Rec'd and filed, unanimously.

The bonds of new city officers—Constables Kelly and Moffett, Treasurer Van Winkle and Collector Johnson—were referred to Laws Com., and subsequently returned with its approval of the bonds of Moffett and Johnson. The bonds of Messrs. Van Winkle and Kelly were found deficient.

The Aud. Com. reported on the claims referred during the meeting, for which warrants were ordered drawn.

Warrants were ordered drawn to satisfy the judgments of A. Gibbens and Mulford Cole, included in last levy.

Thanks for the past courtesies of the President were unanimously adopted, and also for the services of the clerk. The Council of 1884 then adjourned.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 5th.

The Council of 1885 met for organization.

Present—Councilman Beguelin, Coriell, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Livingston, Love, Marsh, Simpson, Wadsworth, West—11.

Absent—none.

Clerk Leonard of the past Council, called the members to order.

Mr. Marsh nominated Mr. B. F. Coriell and Mr. Love nominated Mr. T. A. Beguelin for permanent President.

Messrs. West and Love were appointed tellers, and the ballot resulted as follows: Coriell, 6; Beguelin, 4; blank, 1.

Mr. Dumont nominated Mr. O. B. Leonard and Mr. Beguelin nominated Mr. W. L. Hetfield for Clerk.

The same tellers acted in such capacity and Mr. Leonard was re elected by the following vote:

Leonard, 6; Hetfield, 5.

Mr. Wm. V. Munday was unanimously elected janitor.

THE MESSAGE.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN; In assuming the duties of the office of Mayor I shall endeavor to bring to their discharge those principles and methods which are essential to success in private business.

HARMONY OF COMPONENT PARTS.

One of the first of these is that, in any undertaking, there should prevail among the various members and departments acting together the fullest confidence and harmony. As custom has sanctioned the presentation of annual and special messages by the Mayor to the Common Council, so I invite, on the part of the Council, the same freedom of suggestion respecting the functions of the mayoralty.

Not attempting to instruct your honorable body concerning your duties, nor to enlighten you respecting the general affairs of the city, about which your honorable body, by reason of former service, are more familiar than myself, I respectfully suggest as appropriate fields for special action the following:

TAXES.

The revenue derived from direct taxation of our citizens and owners of property furnishes the main source of means for the general expense and material improvement; and both to augment the available funds and to secure a uniformity of contribution on the part of all, we recognize the importance of the rigorous enforcement of the tax laws. The delinquent roll is vastly too large. The books of the collector show that there are delinquencies amounting in the aggregate for the years 1879 to 1884, both inclusive, to $48,065.94; and prior thereto, from the incorporation of the city, to upwards of $20,000 more.

Under the system of enforcement of of taxes by levy and sale of the personal property of delinquents, excellent results were accomplished until progress was checked by the determined opposition of one delinquent, who appealed to the Supreme Court, and there attacked the methods adopted by the city and the constitutionality of the laws. The victory in the courts was won by the city, and was complete, and there appears to be no reason why, relying upon this adjudication, we should not go forward with increased confidence and success.

The method of the sale of real estate for taxes, recently inaugurated, is likewise a marked advance over anything formerly attempted here in this direction, and has resulted in a large diminution in the amount of unpaid real estate taxes, besides preserving the lien of the city on the real estate upon which taxes remain uncollected.

It is in your power in this connection to adopt a system of official numbers for the houses and lots of the city, and thereby not only facilitate tax collections, but likewise modernize the city in an important sense, and supply a convenience the advantages of which are manifest.

When necessary, tenants of leased property upon which taxes have become delinquent should be compelled to pay the taxes to the city. The law provides that tenants may in turn deduct such payment from the rent, or compel repayment by their landlords. This method has been successfully invoked in several instances already, but should be more generally adopted.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

Another important advance successfully inaugurated by the last Council consists in the macadamizing of streets by the owners of property adjacent thereto, under such legal procedure as, it is believed, for the first time in the history of the city will enable the authorities to enforce payment on the part of the property owners of assessments for benefits.

The system of permanent improvement of road beds by the use of broken stone or otherwise at the general expense of the city, which was rendered possible by recent legislation, if used with discretion and equitably applied, can not fail to bring lasting benefit. In the use of public money for this purpose great caution is necessary, to the end that the public and not individuals shall reap the benefit of such expenditure.

The vote to increase the usual amount levied for the uses of the city by $5,000 will afford the means wherewith to greatly improve the condition of the streets, and I recommend that, wherever practicable, the plan adopted during the past year of assisting out of the special fund the owners of property who propose to macadamize mainly at their own expense be followed, as least open to objection and best calculated to secure the largest permanent gain.

In the five important reforms above briefly pointed out—of enforcement of taxes by levy and sale of the personal property of delinquents; of holding tenants to their statutory liability respecting taxes assessed on leased property; of sales of real estate for taxes; of the macadamizing of streets and enforcing collection of assessments for benefits; and of the permanent improvement of road-beds at the general expense—several of the members of your honorable body and their legal adviser, who have guided the work thus far, are still in office, and the year before us should witness the successful consummation of their and your united efforts.

I recommend, as of vital importance to the rapid growth and material prosperity of the city, the vigorous prosecution of the plans so carefully devised, and in so far as it may be within the power of the executive department to lend its aid, it will be my effort heartily to coöperate.

SANITARY.

Of the highest importance is the faithful discharge of the duties imposed by the charter and ordinances upon the Council, the Mayor and the Board of Health, respecting the sanitary condition of the City. Unusual precautions and exceptional rigor are required in this direction, in view of the threatened importation from Europe of cholera during the present year. The State authorities have already taken the initiative looking to the rigid enforcement of the laws of health and cleanliness. It remains for us to second their efforts in this municipality. I submit as a matter worthy of the special and immediate attention of your Honorable Body the question whether the City can be better protected in this matter of health by continuing to act under the powers conferred by the City Charter, or by availing of the general statutes below cited. These statutes confer extraordinary powers and have the approval of the State Board of Health, and upon investigation, your Honorable Body may deem it wise to adopt ordinances for the formation of a Board of Health in pursuance of the special statutory provisions. The statutes referred to are the following, viz: Pamphlet Laws 1880, chapter 155; pamphlet laws 1881, chapter 135; pamphlet laws 1882, chapter 155; pamphlet laws 1883, chapter 105; pamphlet laws 1884, chapter 160. Whether it be deemed the better plan to continue under the charter system, or to organize a health board under the statutes referred to, I recommend the appointment of an officer whose duty it shall be personally to investigate all sources of nuisance or of peril to the public health, and to report the same for action by the proper authorities. Much more time and attention should be devoted to the performance of these duties than any competent physician could spare from his practice. It will not answer in these times of peril to the public health to wait for complaints from citizens who may be willing to report their neighbors' neglect. The City should take the matter in hand in the first instance, and see to it that no source of contamination to the public health, open or hidden, is permitted within its jurisdiction anywhere to exist.

LICENSES.

A not insignificant source of revenue consists of the fees paid for the various licenses granted by the City. Alike because license laws once made should be enforced, and because those who pay for a privilege granted by the City should be protected in the enjoyment of it. All license laws call for special care in their enactment and in their execution. With your own body lies the sole discretion respecting the granting or withholding of all licenses, except those for shows and exhibitions upon which, by ordinance, the Mayor alone decides. Should it be deemed advisable, the revenue of the City from licenses may be increased and certain occupations regulated under recent laws by the adoption of proper ordinances. See pamphlet laws 1881, chapter 230; do 1882, chapter 39; do 1882, chapter 74; do 1882, chapter 161.

REVENUE OF THE CITY.

For the ensuing year, the sources of revenue above separately referred to should prove amply sufficient. Having in view the future well-being of the City, it is needful that we should, by timely action, prepare to meet such contingencies as may arise, especially when the danger to be apprehended, appears to be imminent. Such a duty is before us respecting the City finances. The sources of more than three fourths of the funds applicable during the present year, to the current general expenses of the City, may partially or wholly fail next year, or the year following. The delinquent tax collections cannot long furnish any considerable source of annual income; the delinquent taxes should indeed be reduced to a minimum during the present year; the majority of one, by which alone the special money election of last month was carried, as well as the history of other similar elections, shows clearly that reliance cannot be placed on such means as a source of yearly receipts; in the present state of the public mind, divided as it is respecting the policy of licensing hotels and saloons, it is equally apparent that another large contribution to municipal expenses of the past may in the future be diminished, or entirely cut off as a source of annual revenue. These considerations show that among the contingencies likely to arise, is this one, that with the increased needs of an enlarged City, the sole reliance for the general expense may be the sum (assessed and not all collected) of ten thousand dollars, plus the poor fund, as originally provided by the charter incorporating the City in 1869. That this sum would be grossly inadequate, will be readily conceded. To provide against what would amount to a calamity I recommend that the counsel to the corporation be instructed to draft a bill with a suitable memorial for presentation to the next legislature, providing some equitable means of adjusting the amount of money to be raised by direct taxation in cities, for general purposes to the number of inhabitants, or to the assessed valuation of property, said bill to provide that any city desiring its benefit shall first evince such desire by a popular vote, before the law shall take effect in said City. Such a law should not increase the burden of taxation beyond the present rate, and should confer upon the Common Council reasonable discretion within prescribed limits. When the charter was adopted, the people and the legislature contemplated amending the instrument from time to time, to meet the changing requirements of the growing city, and in 1872, 1873 and 1874, numerous amendments were made. By the amended constitution of the State which went into effect September 28th, 1875, further special legislation, however sorely it may be needed, is rendered impossible; so that the only relief practicable now, would seem to lie in the direction above indicated.

THE POOR.

Under the charter, it is competent for your Honorable Body to establish and maintain an alms-house or work-house. The experience of other cities, as well as the reason of the thing demonstrates the superiority of the system which collects under one roof all paupers who are a charge upon the City Treasury. Those worthy citizens who may need temporary relief, and who might prefer to suffer rather than seek the aid of the City under the system herein advocated, are properly subjects for the many excellent charitable institutions and associations of a private or quasi public character that exist among us to the pride and honor of Plainfield. Considerations of health and morality, proper discipline and economy, all point to the necessity for a speedy reform in our system of municipal maintenance of the poor. Since it is competent for the City to purchase and hold land for the purpose of establishing and maintaining alms-houses, I recommend that your Honorable Body adopt measures looking to the purchase of a house, if one can be found adapted to the purpose; otherwise that the City purchase land eligibly located upon which to erect the required building. Holding myself in readiness to execute to the best of my ability the duties devolving upon the executive, as one of the coordinate branches of our municipal government; and soliciting on your part, as I now proffer on my own, co-operation in all things requiring concurrent action, or likely to profit the City thereby, I have the honor to be

Your Obedient Servant,
GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW.

Dated January 5th, 1885.

Received and placed on file.

The President stated his intention of announcing the membership of the standing committees of 1885, at the next meeting.

An invitation from the Yale Glee Club to the Council to be present at its concert of this evening, was read and unanimously accepted by the vote of those present.

Triplets were born to Robert Hinson, a colored man living in Gordon's alley, in Trenton, by his wife recently. Two of the infants were males and the other was a female. The children weighed seven pounds each at birth. The mother is doing well.

-:-OUR -:- HOLIDAY -:- GOODS-:-
We will this season display a larger assortment than ever before of useful and ornamental articles suitable for Holiday Presents, comprising Chinaware, Earthenware, Dolls, Vases, Games, Albums, and in fact everything in the line of Toys and Fancy Articles. We have these goods displayed on our lower floor where we have more room and better facilities for showing them. We have also decided during the Holidays to mark down our immense stock of Cloaks, Dolmans, Russian Circulars, Newmarkets etc., so as to place them within the reach of all. We have the best assortment in this line of goods as we are our own manufacturers. In our Millinery Department we have also made great reductions in prices. Any lady in need of anything in the Millinery line will do well to give us a call.
Respectfully,
D. BOEHM & BRO.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

REGULAR monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield fire department, next Tuesday evening.

NEXT Thursday is the date set for the [illegible] daughter of Plainfield's venerable Councilman.

BURDETTE'S lecture on the "Pilgrimage of the Funny Man", at the Music Hall, next Thursday evening, will attract a pleased audience.

DR. UTTER is selecting the voices for another Cantata, to be given in the Music Hall at some future date, for the benefit of the Reform Club.

THE First National Bank of Plainfield, in spite of the election of a Democratic President, has declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent.

THE Union Club will hold a reception at its Club House, next Tuesday evening, beginning at eight o'clock, to which members may invite their adult friends.

THE Central Times musical critic is "catching it" for telling the truth about the Vocal Society's Concert. But what else can a reporter expect if he tells the truth.

SOME of the Councilmen are resisting an attempt to force their payment of eight dollars each for having their handsome faces distorted and spread all over a two-cent circular.

THE Council's meetings, the Mayor's message and reports of the City's finances, crowd our columns this week, and local news of greater interest we are compelled to "boil down."

NEXT Thursday evening in the Music Hall you will have an opportunity of hearing Burdette, the Burlington Hawkeye humorist. It is the fourth entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. Course.

THE marriage of a LaGrande avenue heir was celebrated at the residence of his parents, last Tuesday evening; and after spending a brief honeymoon at The Netherwood, the happy couple left for a short trip.

MR. THOMAS WALSH, a tailor, having a shop at No. 18 Park avenue, while walking on the track near the Scott Machine Works, Friday evening of last week, was struck by a train and instantly killed. The body was terribly cut and mangled.

A DELEGATION from Somerville engine company No. 1, visited the members of Gazelle engine company No. 1, in this city on New Year's day. "Gazelle" was taken out for a trial and the guests entertained in a hospitable manner.

THE old hand engine "Gazelle" has not lost all prestige yet, judging from accounts received. The "Excelsiors" of Scotch Plains, after putting the apparatus in order gave it a test recently, and succeeded in throwing water over the fur falls at the Plains. Good enough!

OVER the new copper wire that connects Plainfield with Trenton, we had the pleasure, Monday morning, of talking with Editor Mott of the Trenton Times. The "line" worked perfectly and is undoubtedly a great addition to the facilities of the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Co.

THE senior, junior and local editors of this paper join in thanking Mr. Thomas H. Keller for the New Year's remembrance he left for each. The fragrant havanas have been thoroughly enjoyed, and in their wreaths of smoke have ascended prayers of long life and prosperity for Tom.

DUVALL, the colored lad, who used his ministerial brother as a target on Somerset street, one bright morning long ago, has withdrawn his former plea in the Somerset court, and now says he is guilty of assault with intent to kill. He'll get the toughest kind of a sentence in a day or so.

A RECENT change that has been made in the editorial management of The American Queen, New York's great society journal, places Mr. George Wotherspoon, Jr., formerly of Plainfield, at the head of its staff. Mr. Wotherspoon's intimate acquaintance with the social events of the great city, and his journalistic experience, admirably fit him for his new position. Associated with him is Mr. James B. Townsend.

New Officers.

The annual election of Anchor Lodge of the Masonic fraternity was held on Monday evening with the following result:

Worshipful Master—H. D. Burlingham.
Senior Warden—F. O. Herring.
Junior Warden—W. E. Lowe.
Treasurer—James S. Nason.
Secretary—James Lyon.
Trustee—Charles Tweedy, O. T. Waring, J. B. Dumont.

Incendiaries Again.

Early Wednesday morning the neighborhood of Duer street and Park place, North Plainfield, was illuminated by the burning barn of Mr. Charles Day, residing at that corner. Steamers No. 1 and 2 were soon working at the new well on Linden avenue, but were somewhat delayed on account of the well's depth. By the time water was obtained, however, the barn was entirely consumed. Besides the building, its contents, a sleigh and a bicycle, were lost.

Saturday Night Meeting.

A union prayer and testimony meeting will be held next Saturday evening in Reform Club Hall, commencing at seven and a half o'clock, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Good speakers will be present to deliver brief opening addresses which will be followed by volunteer testimonial talks of five minutes each. Christian workers of all denominations are requested to aid in the exercises. An appeal will be made to unconverted persons to change their course of life in regard to spiritual things. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Past Master's Assemblage.

New Year's night was celebrated by the Past Masters of our city, in conferring the Past Masters degree upon Worshipful Brother, John L. Ulrich, the newly elected Master of Jerusalem Lodge No. 26, F. and A. M. Worshipful Brother Burlingham and Past Masters Wm. A. Freeman, W. R. Cock and Wm. L. Gavitt of Anchor Lodge were present and assisted the Past Masters of Jerusalem Lodge in the ceremonies of this degree. Past Master Sebring conferred the degree and Past Master W. B. Maxson acted as Marshal. The occasion will be remembered by the participants as being one of the pleasantest and most "effective" to be had on such an occasion.

State Board of Agriculture.

The annual meeting of the State Board of Agriculture will be held in the State house, Trenton, on the 3d and 4th of February.

Personalia.

County Collector Sheridan is confined to his house by illness.

Senator R. L. Livingston and Assemblyman Jacob Kirkner, Plainfield's representatives to the State Legislature, will make their home at the Trenton House during the session.

Brought Home for Burial.

Mr. Thomas Cox died in Plainfield last week. He was well known in this city, and when young was with Mr. Isaac Faulks at his butcher shop on Elizabeth avenue. He was one of the conductors on the former New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company. This morning funeral services took place from the First Presbyterian church in Plainfield, and the remains were brought to this city at one o'clock in charge of Noah's Dove Encampment of that city, in very large numbers. He was a member of Protection Lodge of Odd Fellows of Newark. Interment took place in Evergreen Cemetery.—Elizabeth Journal, 5th.

Bound Brook Reform Club.

At the annual meeting of the Bound Brook Reform Club on Tuesday evening last the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—William Hagan.
1st Vice—W. H. Whiting.
2d Vice—Frank Vreeland.
3d Vice—C. E. Dunham.
Secretary—Oscar Bush.
Financial Secretary—Isaac E. Giles.
Treasurer—John P. Laire.
Steward—John Smalley, Jr.
1st Marshal—John McGaw.
2d Marshal—Wm. S. Curry.
Sergeant-at-Arms—Jos. Swick.
Organist—George W. Davies.

Plainfield Democratic Association.

The annual meeting of "The Plainfield Democratic Association," was held in the rooms of the association last Tuesday evening. The following officers were unanimously re-elected to serve the ensuing year:

President—James E. Martine.
Vice Presidents—John Simpson, Robert L. Livingston, James Clark, Nathan Harper.
Treasurer—James S. Vossaller.
Recording Secretary—Louis F. Wadsworth.
Corresponding Secretary—Louis M. Stover.
Judge of Election—R. M. Stover.
Inspector of Election—S. A. Davis, L. M. Stover.
Clerk of Election—Vincent L. Frazee.

Somerset Courts.

The case of Reuben Duvall (colored), indicted for assault with intent to kill his brother in North Plainfield, came up for trial on Tuesday last. He retracted his former plea and pleaded guilty, presenting the following strong appeal for mercy:

Kind Judges, your honors, sir,
Some laugh at my face and some at my figure,
Some call me black and some a nigger
And they treated me with contempt and scorn
It would have been better, dear Judges, if I never was born.
They said my brother's blood I sought to spill,
It is not so
I am not guilty of the crime although
I committed great sin in time
Yet I am not guilty of this crime
And dear Judges, if you all will let me go
That I may roam this world so large once more,
I will pray
That God may bless you all both night and day.
Now, Judges and jury all, good by
I hope these feeble words you all will hear
And pardon my soul which is so dear.
REUBEN DUVALL.

The case of John Cass, indicted on a charge of firing buildings in Raritan, will come up for trial on Monday next.

The Hotel Netherwood.

Seasons come and go, and other summer resorts close with the beginning of winter, but The Netherwood retains its popularity the year round. About fifty guests are now wintering in that comfortable hotel, enjoying its conveniences, the courtesy and care of its proprietor, and the satisfaction of its tempting cuisine. An elaborate dinner was served New Year's eve to a large party of New York's highest society, that saw the old year out in the midst of varied festivities. Fine music accompanied them, and entire gratification with the perfect management of the hotel and the completeness of every detail and department was expressed by all. During one evening of each week, a professional dancing master is engaged by Mr. Woodruff to instruct the young folks, and music for the entertainment of all the guests, follows. The reading room that has formerly been used as a winter dining room, but is now too small for the number of guests, has been made a ladies' billiard parlor and proves quite an addition to the Hotel's attractions.

The Yale Concert.

The Yale Glee Club was accorded an enthusiastic reception at the Music Hall, Monday evening—a reception loud enough to seem flattering but too indiscriminate to be deemed a sincere endorsement of the musical efforts and effects of the Club's voices. The audience was an unusually high and mighty one—radiant in dress, modest in jewels, but extravagant in applause. Almost everyone present was either personally acquainted with members of the Club, indirectly connected with students of the College, or a promiscuous lover of anything that smacked of old Yale. As a result of all this a too lengthy programme was lengthened, and all variety was destroyed by repetition. The Club rendered much that was enjoyable, very little that was too familiar, and some selections that were, musically, far above the average of Glee Club attempts. Mr. Jones as a whistler was quite a feature, and there is a faint promise that in time Mr. Adler as a warbler will be a feature, too. The choruses were all pleasantly shaded, and the voices (seldom off) blended with more or less harmony.

To Examine Physicians.

Physicians in the northern part of the state have been busy for several weeks past preparing a bill to be presented to the next legislature that will propose to lessen the growth of quackery, and the lessening of unqualified physicians. The bill, as drawn, is said to be satisfactory to both schools of medicine. It is in nineteen sections and provides for the appointment by the governor of a state board of examiners and licenses.

"It is our purpose," said a physician, "to subject every graduate or applicant for a diploma to a rigid examination, which will be based mainly upon the fundamental principles of the profession. This plan will, we think, afford better protection to the community, and in time will do away with the bulk of quack practitioner."

The board to be appointed by the governor will consist of nine members, who must be graduates of a medical college, and with not less than five years' practice in medicine or surgery. Seven members are to be chosen from a list submitted by the Allopathic State Medical Society, and the other two from a list submitted by the Homœopathic State Medical Society. Two sets of questions will be prepared, each set respectively by the allopathic and homœopathic societies, and the examination will be in anatomy, physiology, history, general chemistry, pathology, principles and practices of medicine, surgery and obstetrics.

The State Historical Society.

The next meeting of the New Jersey Historical Society will be held on Thursday, the 15th inst., at 11 a. m., in the Supreme Court-room, at the State House. The annual election of officers will take place, and much other business of interest and importance is expected to come before the meeting.

Christmas at St. Mary's.

At St. Mary's church last week, through efforts of Mrs. Wm. Preston and the Sunday school teachers, a large and well ladened Christmas tree gladdened the hearts of the children. Father Smyth congratulated the ladies on their success, and promised the children something even better next year if they proved themselves worthy by their conduct, and later on when he learned that his stocking had been filled with five elegantly bound volumes from the children, added that he would try to be much better himself as an example for them.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the choir girls, under the direction of Mrs. Preston, performed the operetta "Laila" before well filled houses in St. Mary's Hall. All did remarkably well, but the rendition of the lost girl by May Flannigan, with her soft sweet voice, was so unanimously commended that special mention of her should be made. Miss O'Connor recited "The Auction of Bachelors" in capital style, and Miss Hyland was warmly applauded after the songs of "Don't go Molly," and "Erin, my country." Both these young misses closed the evening's entertainment by the happy presentation of "My New Maid." St. Mary's Hall has recently been furnished with new chairs, and preparations are being made for a course of lectures to be delivered there.

Installation of Officers of Jerusalem Lodge.

Past Grand Master Pembrook, whose absence in the South deterred him from installing the newly elected and appointed officers of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M. was not present at the installation Tuesday evening, as was expected, and P. M. B. F. Coriell, the retiring Worshipful Master, installed the officers, assisted by P. M. W. H. Sebring as Marshal. Although the evening was stormy, yet a goodly attendance of members and visiting brethren assembled at Masonic Hall to witness the ceremony.—At the conclusion of the services, the brethren spent the receding hours of the day in the Banquet Hall, to partake of the plenteous eatables, which were so bountifully spread by Brother Compton, and all left for their respective homes, feeling that the moral and physical man were well fed. The following are the names of the elective and appointed officers who were properly installed:

Worshipful Master—John Ulrich.
Senior Warden—J. C. Pope.
Junior Warden—T. Newell.
Treasurer—J. G. Miller.
Secretary—Ed. Nelson.
Marshal—B. F. Coriell, P. M.
Chaplain—T. J. Lerned.
Senior Deacon—J. Shepherd.
Junior Deacon—T. O. Doane.
S. M. of Ceremonies—D. Weaver.
J. M. of Ceremonies—T. Young.
S. Stewart—F. H. Miller.
J. Stewart—I. T. Fritts.
Organist—H. Woodland.
Tyler—C. H. Westphal.

Finance Committee—Bros. Chandler, Woodland and Alex. Titsworth.

Committee on History—Past Masters W. B. Maxson, W. H. Sebring, E. C. Mulford.

Ex-Mayor Randolph Vindicated.

In the Union County Courts Wednesday morning the suit of L. V. F. Randolph, ex-Mayor of Plainfield, vs. Ernest O. Chamberlin, editor of the late Plainfield Bulletin, for libel, $20,000 damages, was tried. Mr. Kimball of Plainfield, and Mr. R. V. Lindabury of Elizabeth, appeared as counsel for the plaintiff. Mr. Wm. R. Maxson was the counsel on record for the defendant, but neither the defendant nor his counsel were in attendance. The libel was laid upon certain articles in the Bulletin, published in 1882, and reflecting severely on Mr. Randolph. Among the witnesses produced by plaintiff were O. B. Leonard, H. R. Munger, Alex. Gilbert, Rev. Dr. Yerkes, M. W. Tyler and J. B. Tracey, of this city, and the plaintiff himself. The latter pronounced all the charges made against him by the Bulletin to be false. The case was conducted as thoroughly as though a defense had been made, and the articles from the Bulletin were read one by one. They were written during the election season of the year above stated when the complainant was candidate for Mayor of Plainfield. Pending this election and on the second day of December a series of articles were published in the Bulletin, in which the plaintiff alleged there was an inference that he had a corruption fund of $1,000 in his hands which, upon the draft of another, he was to pay out to fraudulently secure his re-election. Mr. Lindabury in summing up the case dwelt at length upon the abuse of privilege which some papers indulge in, and said of the defendant that he was a cur who came out of the dark to stab and then went back again. Judge VanSyckel delivered a short charge in which he said publications are libelous that hold a man up to public ridicule, contempt or disgrace, or are calculated to injure or destroy his good name in the common estimation of his fellows. These articles had been read to the jury, and it was for them to determine this question. The case was given to the jury about one o'clock, who brought in a verdict of six cents damages, which throws the cost of Court on the plaintiff.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Literary and Debating Society was held in the Hall of the Association, on Saturday evening, Dec. 28th, and was the most interesting meeting the Society have ever held. A very fine essay was read by Mr. C. M. Goddard, on "The Taking of Usury." The debate for the evening was taken up, "Resolved that Protective Tariff Should Prevail." Messrs. Knauft, Smith and Goddard on the affirmative, Judge Good, Messrs. Coddington and Suffern on the negative, and after a very warm and interesting debate, the question was decided in favor of the affirmative. The following named gentlemen were elected officers of the Society for the coming two months:

President—C. M. Goddard.
Vice President—W. M. Smith.
Secretary—E. T. Farguhar.
Treasurer—W. Raymond.

The exercises for the next meeting, Jan. 17th, are as follows:—W. D. Murray, orator; F. N. Horn, reader; E. Knauft, critic. Subject for debate "Resolved that the Prohibition of Chinese Immigration is Justifiable." Messrs. Ulrich and Farguhar on the affirmative and Messrs. Suffern and Brown on the negative.

The Latest Rinkles.

It was the perfection of time, but—so on. And few will regret that "My Queen" has, at last, been omitted from the programme of music.

At last we have discovered a profession similar to our own in one respect. As it is with editing a newspaper, everybody thinks they can run a rink.

A polo league is being formed in New Jersey for the purpose of contesting for State medals at the different rinks. Plainfield should be represented.

The Columbias of Jersey City did not appear on Saturday last, and their match at polo with the Casinos of this city was postponed until to-morrow evening.

As we go to press the greatest of all attractions is given. Canary has no equal as a bicyclist, and Miss Gilmore and Mr. Livesey have no superiors on the rollers.

The Elizabeth Journal would be perfectly welcome to the "Rinkles" it copies from us if it would only publish a few interchange "Rinklets" for our accommodation.

Miss Bertie Mann, a phenomenal skater of tender years, appeared on the floor during New Year's afternoon and evening, and was more or less admired by large audiences.

This evening the free list will be entirely suspended, and complimentary tickets and passes will not be recognized. This rule is a just one, and should be oftener enforced when the management is at an increased expense for special attractions.

The old year was skated out by a large but orderly crowd in a very energetic manner. Just before the beginning of 1885, Prof. Hermann's band played a dirge of death to 1884; and as the new year dawned the musicians struck up an inspiring galop.

Two new kinds of rollers are now being made to take the place of the ordinary boxwood rollers. One is a steel roller with brass box and a heavy rubber tire, and the other is a boxwood wheel, bound with rawhide. They are practically noiseless, and do not slip.

The match between the "Casino" and "Plainfield" polo teams of this city, Wednesday evening of last week, resulted in a victory for the former by a score of three to two. The winners, however, did not play so strong a game as when they defeated the "Jaffrays."

Elizabeth carried off the honors in the mile race go-as-you-please at the Rink on New Year's afternoon. There were four competitors, but Master Fred. S. Dunn, son of L. A. Dunn, news dealer, Elizabeth, distanced them all, coming in two laps ahead of the second skater.

The demand upon the skate room for space and attention by the owners of "clubs," has compelled the management to fix a nominal charge of 15 cents a week for the care of each pair of private skates. Those who appreciate the service, will most willingly pay so small an amount in return.

The other day in one of the primary rooms of a public school, the teacher asked: "For what is North Plainfield noted?" A little fellow arose very confidently and answered: "For its skating rink." The teacher replied by awarding the lad five checks, and they were not checks for skates either.

The following is a rule issued in a Colorado rink: "Parents are hereby warned that their daughters, if hereafter found attending the rink, rolling around the arena or enjoying the performance from the auditorium, will be regarded only as ladies, and treated as courteously as if they were in their own homes."

Undoubtedly the most pleasing and entertaining exhibition since the opening of the Rink, was that of little Edna and Ethel Tabor, the "Midgets." Both were so prettily dressed and so graceful in their motions, as to win the approval of all; while the younger was so cute and the elder so expert, that the admiration of the audience was complete.

Six months ago but few in this city except by hearsay, could describe a roller skate or know anything of the art. Now the situation is reversed and it is no unusual thing to see the wee toddler and the staid parent vying with the youth and maiden in graceful figures on the tricky rollers, or hotly arguing the merits of the various kinds of skates.

The polo match with the Newark team, Wednesday evening, was not completed. The Casinos won the third goal and the visitors the first and second. The Newark boys formed an exceptionally strong team, while the Plainfielders were short the abilities of Captain Fox and W. F. Bass. In spite of the strong opposition, the Casinos made a gallant struggle.

Bishop McIntyre, in a recent letter to the Christian Advocate says: "Allow me to commend to you and your readers the roller skating. It can, it should substitute dancing as an exercise and amusement for the young people of both sexes. It furnishes indoor, graceful, lively exercise, both muscular and nervous excitement, and leaves no excuse for dancing."

Do not fail to be present this evening when Denman's Majestic Combination under the management of Mr. C. L. Skinner, will exhibit its attractive features of entertainment. Miss Parrott and Mr. Schneider are the skatorial wonders, Messrs. Hanna and Blakeley the bicycle experts and Major Heath and Sg't. Latto the celebrated exponents of military tactics.

We have been "given a tip" (whatever that is) to the effect that the medal put up for the fireman's race is to be won successively by the representatives of the different companies, and thus create a false impression regarding the closeness of the competition. The public, however, want none of that, the management would not permit it and we do not believe that the competitors are men who would agree to such a scheme.

An advance agent—The pawnbroker's clerk.

"An English actor, named Chimney, is said not to draw well. He is going to be fired."

"I say you are nothing but a—pig!" "Well, don't you forget, Jane, that you are one of my ribs!"

A boy who once kissed the schoolmarm is now the mayor of a Western city. When one enters upon a career of crime, there's no knowing where he may end.

The January Term of Courts.

The January term of the Union County Courts was opened Tuesday morning, Judge VanSyckel presiding, with Judges McCormick, Harper and Hyer, associates. The attendance was small. The list of causes shows but 8 in the Supreme Court, 9 in the Circuit Court, 5 in the jury appeals, 6 in the justices' appeals. Total 28, and out of these several were put off for the term, and several others will be tried before the Court. The jail list comprises only 13 cases, as follows: Larceny 2, breaking and entering 2, assault and battery 5, and burglary, non-support, carrying burglar's tools, entering and stealing, each one. The following is the grand jury for this term: Elizabeth—Job S. Crane, foreman; Jas. E. Hedges, Samuel D. Bowers, Joseph B. Morton, Conover S. Harris, Hampton C. Williams, Peter Meleth, Jeremiah E. Adams; Plainfield—Rudolphus MacDondal, Jasper G. Cadmus, Peter P. Dumont, John R. Brown; Rahway—Lewis High, Thomas H. Martin, Isaac S. Miller, John D. Beimar; Fanwood—Charles A. Smith; Westfield—James L. Miller; Union—Ogden Woodruff; New Providence—Henry F. Barrell; Linden—Job M. Winans; Springfield—George Mulford; Cranford—Joseph N. Ely; Summit—Geo. W. Allen. All the grand jurors called were present—twenty-four in number—and the Court excused Mr. Allen. Judge VanSyckel said he was very much pleased to see twenty-four grand jurors appear in Court, as it showed they properly appreciate the obligations resting upon them when summoned to act in this capacity. No matter of grave importance was to be submitted to them, as no crime of magnitude had been committed since the last term of Court, and they might at once proceed to their duties. Constables John Dixon and Amos Moffett were chosen to attend to them, and they retired to the Grand Jury room. Judge VanSyckel then heard common motions, and announced that he could be here but two weeks, as at the end of that time he would hold court at Toms River. He further announces that he could not be here on Saturday of this week nor Friday of next week. Later he set down the case of Senator Youngblood vs. Charles E. Post, for Monday next, and would also on that day hear the causes that are to be tried before the Court without a jury.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Doc. be careful which door you open while making New Year's calls.

Our Town Committee and Health Board meet at the Town Rooms on Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m.

The Westfield Public School opened on Monday last with a good attendance of scholars, who have had nearly two weeks' vacation.

The regular monthly meeting of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, was held at the Town Rooms, on Monday evening last. There was a good attendance of members.

At a meeting of the Westfield Fire Department, it was decided to hold the annual election for Chief Engineer, and two assistants, on the second Tuesday of February in each year.

The regular monthly meeting of Empire Engine Co., No. 2, was held on Tuesday evening at the Truck House. Considerable business of importance to the company was transacted.

Dr. William Gale received a letter last week from Casper Helinger, one of our young men who has been absent about two years. He is located at the Stanton House, Chattanooga, Tenn. He gives a very brilliant description of the battle fields near them of the late war, and of the National Cemetery near that place. Casper was always a very energetic fellow, and his many friends in our town wish him success.

On Saturday last the young son of Mr. Hugh Wiseman, residing on South avenue, Westfield, while his mother was at the village, took a bottle of powder outdoors, and sprinkled it on the walk and set fire to it. A spark exploded the contents of the bottle which he held in his right hand, making a very ugly and painful wound. He was immediately brought to Bayard's drug store, and put under the influence of an anesthetic, by Dr. Cooper, who sewed up and dressed the wound. The young lad is getting along very nicely. Young children should never fool with powder.

STATE HORTICULTURALISTS' OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society was held at the State House Trenton last week. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, Theo. F. Baker, Bridgeton; Vice Presidents, Wm. F. Bassett, Hammonton; E. S. Carman, River Edge; George W. Rogers, Mt. Holly; Samuel A. Bacon, Camden county; J. D. Cole, Deerfield; J. B. Ward, Newark; John Repp, Gloucester county; C. W. Idell, Hoboken; E. M. Heath, Hunterdon county; Chas. Black, New Brunswick; James Van Deventer, Princeton; John S. Green, Morristown; D. Aug. Vandevere, Manalapan; Jesse Battey, Manchester; Geo. C. Woolson, Passaic; R. W. Smith, Salem; D. C. Voorhees, Blawenburgh; E. P. Beebe, Elizabeth; Recording Secretary, E. Williams, Montclair; Corresponding Secretary, J. T. Lovett, Little Silver; Treasurer, Charles L. Jones, Newark; Executive Committee, Wm. R. Ward, Newark; C. W. Idell, Hoboken; John Parry, Parry; E. P. Beebe, Elizabeth; J. B. Rogers, Manalapan, Monmouth county.

"FIRST SHAD OF THE SEASON."

A Hudson river shad was sold in New York a few days ago at a fancy price as the "first shad of the season." The Trenton Gazette says: "By a singular coincidence, which those learned in the natural history and eccentricities of fishes may, perhaps, be able to explain, a large fine shad was caught in the Delaware at this city about the same time. It was caught in a net off Lamberton or South Trenton, and given to Mr. Yates, the Taylor Market fish dealer. By Mr. Yates it was presented to Mr. Thomas C. Hill, the caterer, and the latter served it up on Saturday evening to a little party consisting of Comptroller Anderson, Robert B. Bonney, Mr. Cloke, of the State Gazette, Mr. Yates and Mr. Hill and his son, Edmund C. The fish, which was a female with two large roes, weighed full five pounds, and was in prime condition. It seemed about like a shad of the third week in May. Its flavor, while good, did not seem quite equal in delicacy and deliciousness to that of the spring shad. This was the first December shad that had been caught at Trenton in thirteen years. Four years ago, however, Major Anderson said, one was taken somewhere up the river. There is no accounting for the occasional solitary wandering of a shad at this season of the year. It was agreed, however, both by Major Anderson and Mr. Yates, that to call it the 'first shad of the season' is absurd. It is more likely to be the last one of the season, or, more likely still, to be a lost member of the tribe, aimlessly wandering in unknown regions. Mr. Hill served the fish with a very excellent menu, the bill of fare being written on pieces of card board cut in artistic imitation of the shad."

The Truth as an answer to the Bombastic Advertising of the Royal Baking Powder Co.

We are analyzing all the Cream of Tartar used in the manufacture of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and we hereby certify that it is practically chemically pure—testing as high as 99.95 per cent and not less than 99.50 per cent.

From a hygienic point of view we regard Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as the ideal baking powder, composed as it is of pure Grape Cream of Tartar and pure Bicarbonate of Soda.

STILLWELL & GLADDING,
Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange.
New York, Nov. 25, 1884.

Analyses heretofore made by noted chemists show the amount of Tartrate of Lime found by them in different samples of Royal Baking Powder as follows:

WM. M. HABIRSHAW, F. C. S., Chemist of the N. Y. State Agricultural Society.	5.05
PROF. JAMES F. BABCOCK, State Assayer of Massachusetts	4.52
STILLWELL & GLADDING, Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange.	5.00

These analyses show that the Tartrate of Lime which the Royal Baking Powder Company condemns in its advertisements has been found in its own baking powder.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Alum, Lime, Potash, or Bone Phosphates, and it is ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM ADULTERATIONS.

TWO DANGEROUS SEASONS. Spring and fall are times when so many people get sick. The changes in the weather are severe on feeble persons, and even those naturally strong are upset, as they say, "to be feeling miserable." Then they are just in condition to be struck down with some kind of fever. A bottle or two of Parker's Tonic will invigorate the digestion, put the liver, kidneys and blood in perfect order, and prevent more serious attacks. Why suffer, and perhaps die, when so simple a medicine will save you? Good for both sexes and all ages.

Blessed are those who are afraid of thunder—for they shall hesitate about getting married, and keep away from political meetings.

WASHED-OUT HAIR. There is a sort of pallid, chalky complexion which the novelists call a "washed-out complexion." It is ghastly enough, and no mistake. Washed-out, faded, discolored, or parti-colored hair is almost as repulsive and melancholy. Parker's Hair Balsam will restore your hair to its original color, whatever it was—brown, auburn or black. Why wear snow on your head when you may easily have lively, shining hair?

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SAVED BY FIRE.

BY B.

One time I met at a Western port an old hunter by the name of Abe Barrell.

There was but little about him to distinguish him from others of his class.

He was the same genial, daring, reckless of danger, good hearted fellow that they all are.

But there was one thing which would be sure to attract the attention of a stranger.

Many would have thought that the entire surface had been flayed, and that a new skin had taken its place.

One day I asked him the cause of this strange appearance.

In answer he told me the following story:

I shall tell it, as near as I can remember, in his own words:

"Five years ago last autumn," he said, "I and Joe Shirley were hunting away up in the Sioux country.

"There was not a white man that we knew of within a hundred miles of us.

"For several weeks we had been at work and I never expected to see any better luck than we had.

"Game was plenty, and the way we made up our pile would have made you open your eyes with wonder.

"We had a couple of rough, shaggy ponies, who for speed and wind were hard to beat.

"They were better than they looked, for if they hadn't been I wouldn't have been here telling you this story to-night.

"At last we were pretty well satisfied with what we had done, and began to think of turning our faces homeward to go into winter quarters.

"There were signs in the air and all about us that the snow would soon be down.

"The trees in the timber were stripped as bare as your hand, and the grass on the plains was dead and as dry as tinder.

"We had to be mighty careful with our fires, or we should have made one that would have answered for the Fourth of July.

"The redskins had given us a wide berth.

"We had not seen a half dozen in the whole trip.

"I and Joe often spoke of it, and wondered what had become of 'em.

"But we found out full soon enough for us.

"The first signs we had of 'em was on the third day after we had set faces toward the East.

"Three times that day we got glimpse of a party of 'em hanging upon our rear.

"They were a good ways off, but we couldn't help thinking that they meant us mischief.

"There seemed to be at least a dozen of them, and they were well mounted.

"We knew this by the way they would gain upon us whenever they wished to do so.

"Just at sundown they rode up nearer than they had done before during the day, and Joe said as we gazed back on them:

"'Them varmints are arter us, Abe. I have felt it all day, and now I am sure of it. They'll give us trouble to-night, as sure as my name is Joe Shirley.'

"I felt that Joe had hit the nail on the head, and so I told him.

"'We must sleep with both eyes open to-night, Abe,' he said, a little after. 'Take it in a fair fight we needn't be afraid of the whole of 'em; but they'll come sneaking around us in the dark and cut our throats if they can do it.'

"I knew that Joe was right, and that if we wished to save our scalps we had got to keep a sharp look-out.

"We rode till about ten o'clock, and then we camped for the night.

"We went without our supper, for we didn't dare to build a fire, as it would show the redskins where we were.

"Without it, we were in hopes that they couldn't find us.

"Joe declared that he should have the first watch, and that I should lie down and get a nap.

"I would rather have done so myself, for I wasn't a bit sleepy.

"But I gin up to him and spread down my blanket, and turned in.

"It was more'n an hour before I could get to sleep.

"The stars kept winking above me, as wakeful as I; but at last they seemed to grow dim, and afore I knew it my eyes were stuck together, and I was asleep.

"I don't know how long it was that I laid there; but I opened my eyes and came upon my feet at the same moment.

"Joe's voice was ringing in my ears like a trumpet:

"'Wake up, Abe, if you dont' want to be roasted alive.'

"For a moment I didn't hardly know where I was.

"The stars were all gone, and the sky above us was as black as midnight.

"But about us, on three sides, like a part of a circle, was a wall of fire.

"The first thought that came into my mind was that it was the Day of Judgment.

"But the voice of Joe brought me to myself in a minute.

"'The cursed redskins mean to roast us alive. We've got to run for it or die.'

"He was right.

"They had set fire about us on all sides except one, and the flames were coming down upon us with long strides.

"There was no time to be lost, and we sprang upon our ponies and bounded away as fast as we could urge them on.

"But we hadn't gone more than a quarter of a mile before there came a shout right ahead of us.

"The redskins were there to cut us off.

"We reined in our ponies to consult for a moment as to what was best to be done.

"Hardly had we done so before a shower of bullets rained about us like hail.

"The varmints were bound to have our lives anyway.

"We looked round over our shoulders at the flames that the wind was driving down upon us.

"There was death before, behind and all about us.

"There was another shout and another shower of bullets while we stood there uncertain what to do.

"But the bullets as yet did no harm.

"Joe looked at me, and by the light of the flames I could see that he was as pale as death.

"'Our way lies yonder,' he said.

"He pointed back to the red flames that were coming down on us so fast.

"I nodded my head.

"'We must try it,' he said. 'There is more chance of escape behind than before.'

"He threw his blanket over the head of his pony and fastened it there.

"I did the same by mine, and then we pointed them toward the flames.

"A minute more, and we were in the midst of the blinding smoke.

"The next, and the red flames were lapping our faces.

"I don't know how it was that we got through, but we did, and stood upon the hot smoldering ground beyond, gasping for breath.

"My face and neck were burned to a blister, and the skin came off at the touch.

"Joe was in the same condition as I, and so were the ponies.

"Close to the roar of the flames we could hear the shouts of the redskins.

"They thought that they had burned us alive, and we did not let them know to the contrary.

"Now you know how it was that I got disfigured after this fashion."

A LAKE MICHIGAN MONSTER.

Milwaukee and Chicago seamen are much worked up over a marine monster which has been seen at different points in Lake Michigan. At present it seems to be disporting in Chicago harbor. Recently the steward of the tug Miller was engaged in filling his water barrel, when he was startled by a huge black object, with a hairy body about eight or nine feet in length, which came to the surface and snapped viciously at the gunwale of the boat. The captain and the crew also saw the marvelous sight before it dived into deep water and disappeared. Ed Burke, a deckhand on the tug Success, saw the same animal about an hour afterwards. It roared as loud as a circus lion, and started toward the tug with great ferocity. Landsmen are incredulous about the story, but the seamen who have seen it declare that it bellows as loud as a bull.—Milwaukee Journal.

ONE OF THE OLD GUARD.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

Colonel Robert I. Chester, messenger of the Tennessee Electoral College, and one of the oldest Democrats in the United States, passed through the city recently on his way to Washington. He was seen by a Courier-Journal reporter at the Standiford Hotel, and talked pleasantly for a few moments. Although 93 years old, he is hale and hearty, with a firm step and a figure but slightly bowed. His hair is snow-white, and his face clear of wrinkles and lines. He bears the appearance of a man about 60 years old:

"I have been voting with the Democrats for seventy-two years," he said. "It is a long time, but I have never failed to support the straight ticket. I cast my first vote for President Monroe, being just twenty-one years old. I was a warm friend of President Jackson, and spent a good deal of time with him. This cane which I carry at one time belonged to President Polk, with whom I was quite intimate. It was made from a piece of the old ship Constitution, and was given to Mr. Polk during his term by Congressman Hall, of Maine. He carried it during the rest of his life, and some months after he died Mrs. Polk presented it to me. I prize it very highly and when I die I want it to remain in my family. I had intended to go to Washington to see Governor Cleveland inaugurated, and the Electoral College chose me as their messenger. I am on my way there now, and I never did anything that will give me as much pleasure as to cast the vote of Tennessee for the only Democratic President since the war."

SCHEMES FOR NEW COUNTIES.

[From the Newark Journal.]

South Jerseymen will have to fight o'er again, before the Legislature this Winter, their battles against the North Jersey new county schemes that they have opposed so often before. Two such projects are being prepared for presentation at the coming session. A very fully developed one proposes to take the "shore townships" of Monmouth county, including Long Branch, Asbury Park and the adjacent Summer resorts, and erect them into a new county. The primary aim of this scheme is to deliver the Summer resorts from what they call their "bondage" to the farming townships that make up the greater part of Monmouth county. It will, however, have the ardent support of the Hudson, Essex, Passaic and other statesmen, who, by the new county, would gain one more vote in the State Senate and render proportionally nearer the time when they can overcome the preponderance in that body of the agricultural sections of the State and be able to change the basis of Senatorial representation from a county one to one by districts based upon population.

Another project, in a somewhat inchoate condition yet, but liable to develop rapidly, is to make a new county out of three adjoining corners of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties.

In the Senate, as at present constituted, the agricultural portion of the State can count on about a dozen votes out of the twenty-one as against any change in the system of representation. Heretofore these votes have been equally opposed to giving any indirect aid in that direction by creating new counties in the northern part of the State. The Monmouth county division project, however, has powerful backing, and there is also an element of justice about the pleas urged in its support that may carry it through in spite of the opposition of the farmer Senators.

DISCOURAGED MOTHERS.

You are tired, weary mother. The careworn, anxious look on your face, the long-drawn sigh of discouragement, and the dejected attitude, all indicate that the duties of the day have been more than your willing heart could plan, or your ready hands could execute. But can you not see by the expression of your child's face as he stands before you, that thoughts which bid defiance to submission are rising in his breast, and waiting only to be quicked into life by a hasty, passionate reproof? Control your irritation; speak kindly, lovingly to him. Note now the change: the I-will-if-I-want-to look has disappeared from his face, and submission is plainly written on every feature.

An hour later. Your little ones are quietly sleeping, and you wonder as you sit there in the twilight, if there is no release from this weary load. Must one weary day succeed another, and so the years of life wear away? There may come a release at any hour of our lives. The little one who clings to you through the long, weary day, may be lying white and still ere another day shall have passed away, and the lips which weary you with their prattle now, may never again lisp the sweet words in your ear. As these unwelcome thoughts come crowding into your mind, you cry out in agony of spirit, "Not that! Oh, not that!" Involuntarily you clasp your sleeping babe closer to your heart, and as your eyes rest on the dear boy, sleeping so sweetly in his little bed, you feel thankful that you were patient with him to-night.

Dear mothers, we stand among the shadows of earth. Around us, there is a turmoil, confusion and strife; but if we will open our hearts from within and drink deeply from the "Fountain of Life," we shall find our souls refreshed. Then shall the dear ones whose sunshine is the smiles of mother, and whose happiness depends upon the cheerfulness of the wife, abundantly reward us for all our efforts.

THE CENTURY
In 1885.
A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

PAPERS ON THE CIVIL WAR.

The important feature of The Century Magazine for the coming year—indeed, perhaps the most important ever undertaken by the magazine—will be a series of separate papers on the great battles of the War for the Union, written by general officers high in command upon both the Federal and Confederate sides—General Grant (who writes of Vicksburg, Shiloh, and other battles), Generals Longstreet, McClellan, Beauregard, Rosecrans, Hill, Admiral Porter, and others. The series opens in the November Century with a graphically illustrated article on written by the Confederate general, G. T. Beauregard. Brief sketches, entitled "Recollections of a Private," papers chronicling special events, descriptions of various auxiliary branches of the service, etc., will supplement the more important series by the various generals.

A strict regard for accuracy will guide the preparation of the illustrations, for which The Century has at its disposal a very large quantity of photographs, drawings, portraits, maps, plans, etc., hitherto unused. The aim is to present in this series, not official reports, but commanding officers' accounts of their plans and operations—interesting personal experiences which will record leading events of the war, and possess, at the same time, a historical value not easily to be calculated.

FICTION.

In this line The Century will maintain its prestige, and furnish the best stories by American writers that can be procured. In November begins author of "Venetian Days," "A Modern Instance," etc. This story deals with the rise of an American business man. A novel by Henry James, a novelette by Grace Denio Litchfield, and short stories by "Uncle Remus," Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, H. H., Julian Hawthorne, and other equally well-known writers will appear at various times.

A NEW NOVEL BY W. D. HOWELLS,

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

Under this heading may be included a series of papers on the Cities of Italy by W. D. Howells, the illustrations being reproductions of etchings and drawings by Joseph Pennell; a series on being an interesting group of papers by E. V. Smalley, Lieut. Schwatka, Principal Grant (of Kingston, Ontario), and others, descriptive of little-known regions; papers on French and American art—sculpture and painting, with some exquisite illustrations; papers on the first being by Professor Langley and others. Under Architecture are included more of Mrs. Van Rensselaer's articles on Churches, City and Country Houses, etc. Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., will describe

ASTRONOMY, ARCHITECTURE & HISTORY,

PROGRESS IN SANITARY DRAINING;

E. C. Stedman, Edmund Gosse and others will furnish literary essays; George W. Cable will contribute in various ways; several papers on sport and adventure will soon be published, and will write from time to time on outdoor subjects.

Readers of The Century may feel sure of keeping abreast of the times on leading subjects that may properly come within the province of a monthly magazine. Its circulation is now about 140,000 monthly, the November number exceeding that figure. Subscriptions should date from this number, beginning the War Series and Mr. Howells's novel. Price $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. All book-sellers and news-dealers sell it and take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to the publishers.

A free specimen of The Century will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of SCROFULA Scrofula about you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system. For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

ULCEROUS SORES "Hutto, Tex., Sept. 28, 1882. "At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with ulcerous running sores on its face and neck. At the same time its eyes were swollen, much inflamed, and very sore. SORE EYES Physicians told us that a powerful alterative medicine must be employed. They united in recommending AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A few doses produced a perceptible improvement, which, by an adherence to your directions, was continued to a complete and permanent cure. No evidence has since appeared of the existence of any scrofulous tendencies; and no treatment of any disorder was ever attended by more prompt or effectual results.
Yours truly, B. F. JOHNSON."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A DEAD MAN'S FACE.

A STORY IN TWO PARTS.

BY HUGH CONWAY, AUTHOR OF "DARK DAYS."

PART I.

Imaginative beings who invent marvelous tales may take what license they please but a simple narrator is nothing if not accurate; so, before beginning this, I looked up old correspondence and various memoranda made at the time when the following things occurred. The first paper upon which I put my hand was a letter. I may as well open with a copy of it.

"DEAR OLD BOY:—I have met her at last—my fate—the one woman in the world for me. Nothing is settled as yet: but I should not write this unless hope were a certainty. You must wish me joy, although she is a widow and an American—two qualifications which I know you will find fault with. No matter; when you see her you will recant and be envious. Yours ever, CLAUD MORTON."

The writer was my brother—I was going to say my only brother, but I had another once, although the less said about him the better. Nearly every family has its black sheep. Ours had been a peculiarly sable one. When he died, some years ago, I passed the sponge over his long list of delinquencies, and tried to think of him as kindly as possible. He died a disgraced man, far away from home.

I call this black sheep, Stephen, my brother, not Claud's, the fact being that Claud can scarcely be said to have known him. I stood in age midway between the two. Claud was sixteen years younger than Stephen, so that when the latter was shipped off as irreclaimable, the former was a little golden-haired fellow of seven.

The above letter made me feel both glad and sorrow. I was glad that the boy—he was still the boy to me, although his age was seven-and-twenty—was going to be married; but I was sorry that his choice had not fallen on one of his own countrywomen, and one who could have given him her first love. Still, all this was his own peculiar business. No doubt he had made a suitable choice, and the only thing left for me to do was to write him a cheerful letter of congratulation, and hope that his love affairs would soon be happily settled.

A week went by; then came a long letter from him. He had proposed in orthodox form and had been duly accepted. His letter lies before me at this moment, and I feel sad as I read again the two pages covered with the lover's usual raptures.

I am not a mercenary man, but I own I felt somewhat disappointed on learning that she was poor. Somehow one associates wealth with an American widow who is sojourning in England. But, so far as I could gather from Claud's letter, Mrs. Despard, or Judith, as he called her, was not well off. He spoke of her as being all alone in London, which fact, he added, would necessarily hasten his marriage. It would take place, he hoped, in a week or two. In conclusion he pressed me to run up to town in order to make the acquaintance of my future sister-in-law.

I was very busy at the time. I may say, in passing, that my business is to cure people's ailments, not to tell stories, nevertheless I managed to pay a flying visit to town, and was duly presented to Claud's betrothed.

Yes, she was handsome, strikingly handsome. Her whole appearance was much out of the common. She was tall, superbly built, on a large scale, perhaps, yet graceful as a panther in every movement. Her face gave evidence of much character, power and determination, and of passion also, I decided. Her rich dark beauty was at the time in full bloom, and although I saw at a glance that she was some years older than my brother, I was not at all inclined to blame Claud for his rapturous expressions. So far as personal charms went, I could find no fault with Judith Despard. For the rest, it was easy to see that she was passionately in love with Claud, and for the sake of this I gladly overlooked all my fanciful objections to his choice, and congratulated him heartily on having won so beautiful a creature.

Yet strange to say, in the midst of his new-found happiness my brother seemed anything but his usual cheerful self. He, the merriest and most talkative of men, seemed taciturn, moody and preoccupied. The curious thing was that his changed manner struck me particularly whilst we were in Mrs. Despard's company. He spoke and behaved in the most affectionate and lover-like way, but there was in his general bearing something which puzzled me altogether. It seemed to me that he might perhaps be nervous as to what impression his fair friend might make upon the elder brother whom he so reverenced and respected.

This theory of mine was strengthened by the fact that when, at night, we found ourselves alone, and I was able to freely express my admiration of Mrs. Despard's good looks, he brightened up considerably, and we sat until a very late hour and talked over the past, the present and the future.

"When do you mean to be married?" I asked.

"In a fortnight or three weeks. There is nothing to wait for. Judith is living alone in lodgings. She has no friends to consult; so we shall just walk to church some morning and get it over."

"Well, let me walk with you. I should like to see the last of you."

"All right, old fellow. But you'll be the only one—unless Mary likes to honor us." Mary was my wife; but as her time was just then fully occupied by a very young baby, I did not think it at all likely she would be able to make the long journey to town.

"I shall fix the earliest day I can," added Claud. "The fact is, I have been feeling rather queer lately. I want a change."

Thereupon I questioned him as to what ailed him. So far as I could ascertain, all that was the matter was his having worked too hard, and being a little below par. I prescribed a tonic, and quite agreed with him as to the benefit which he would derive from the change of air.

When I reached home my wife scolded me for my stupidity. It seems that it was my duty to have found out all about Mrs. Despard's antecedents, relations, connections, circumstances, habits and dispositions, whereas all I could say was that she was a beautiful widow with a small income, and that she and Claud were devoted to one another.

"Yes," said Mrs. Morton, scornfully, "like all other men, the moment you see a pretty face you inquire no further. I quite tremble for Claud."

When I reflected how little I really knew about Mrs. Despard, I felt abashed and guilty. However, Claud was a full-grown man, and no fraternal counsel was likely to turn him aside from his desire.

In the course of a few days he wrote me that he was to be married on the fifth of the next month. I made arrangements which would enable me to go to the wedding; but three days before the date named I heard again from him. The wedding was postponed for a fortnight. He gave no reason for the delay; but he said he was anxious to see me, and to-morrow he should run down to my house.

He came as promised. I was aghast when I saw him. He looked worn, haggard, wretched. My first thought was that business matters had gone wrong with him. His looks might well be those of a man on the brink of ruin. After the first greeting I at once took him to my study in order to be put out of suspense. Just as I was about to begin my anxious questions he turned to me.

"Frank, old fellow," he said imploringly, and with a faint attempt at a smile, "don't laugh at me."

Laugh! That was the last thing I was likely to do. I pressed his hand in silence.

"You won't believe me, I expect," he continued. "I can't believe it myself. Frank, I am haunted."

"Haunted!" I was bound to smile, not from any disposition toward merriment, but in order to show the poor boy the absurdity of his idea.

"Yes, haunted. The words sound ridiculous but I can use no other. Haunted."

"What haunts you?"

He came close to me and grasped my arm. His voice sank to a hoarse whisper.

"A horrible, ghastly, grewsome thing. It is killing me. It comes between me and my happiness. I have fought and struggled against this phantom terror. I have reasoned calmly with myself. I have laughed my own folly to scorn. In vain—in vain. It goes, but it comes again."

"Overwork," I said. "Insomnia, too many cigars, late hours; and had you been a drinking man I should add too much stimulant, too little food, anxiety, perhaps. Have you anything on your mind—any special worry?"

"Of course I have," he said, pettishly. Did I not tell you it is killing me?"

"What is killing you?"

He rose and paced the room excitedly; then suddenly he stopped short and once more clutched my arm.

"A face," he said, wildly—a "man's face; a fearful white face that comes to me; a horrible mask, with features drawn as in agony—ghastly pale, hideous! Death or approaching death, violent death, written in every line. Every feature distorted. Eyes starting from the head. Every cord in the throat standing out, strained as by mortal struggle. Long dark hair lying flat and wet. Thin lips moving and working—lips that are cursing, although I can hear no sound. Why should this come to me—why to me? Who is this dead man whose face wrecks my life? Frank, my brother, if this is disease or madness, cure me; if not, let me die."

His words, his gestures, sent a cold thrill through me. He was worse, far worse, than I had feared.

"Claud," I said, "you are talking nonsense. Cure you! of course I mean to cure you. Now sit down, collect yourself, and tell me how this hallucination comes."

"Comes! How does it come? It gathers in corners of the room; it forms and takes shape; it glares at me out of the wall; it looks up at me from the floor. Ever the same fearful white lying face, threatening, cursing, sometimes mocking. Why does it come?"

I had already told the poor fellow why it came, but it was no use repeating my words. "Tell me when you see it," I asked; "at night—in darkness?"

He hesitated, and seemed troubled. "No never at night. In broad daylight only. That to me is the crowning terror, the ghastliness of it. At night I could call it a dream. Frank, believe me I am no weak fool. For weeks I have borne with this. At last it has conquered me. Send it away, or I shall go mad."

"I'll send it away, old boy, never fear. Tell me, can you see it now?"

"No; thank God, not now."

"Have you seen it to-day?"

"No; to-day I have been free from it."

"Well, you'll be free from it to-morrow, and the next day, and the next. It will be gone forever before you leave me. Now come and see Mary and the babies. I haven't even asked you how Mrs. Despard is."

A curious look crossed his face. "I think she grows more beautiful every day," he said. Then he seized my hand. "Oh, Frank," he exclaimed, "rid me of this horror and I shall be the happiest man in the world."

Although I made light of it to my patient, his state greatly alarmed me. I hastened to put him under the strictest and most approved treatment. I enforced the most rigid sumptuary laws, made him live on plain food and locked his consumption of tobacco unmercifully. In a few days I was delighted to find that my diagnosis of the case was correct. Claud was rapidly recovering tone. In a week's time he seemed quite restored to health.

The days went by. As yet Claud had said nothing about leaving me; yet, unless the day was once more adjourned, he was to be married on the 16th. I did not counsel him to postpone the happy day. He was by now so well that I thought he could not do better than adhere to his arrangement. A month's holiday, spent in the society of the woman he loved, would, I felt certain, complete his cure, and banish forever that grisly intruder begotten of disorganized nerves.

From the monotonous regularity and voluminous nature of their correspondence it was evident, delay and separation notwithstanding, that matters were going on quite smoothly between Judith Despard. Every day he received and wrote a long letter. Nevertheless, it was not until the 16th of the month that I knew exactly what he meant to do about his marriage.

"Frank," he said, "you have been wonderfully kind to me. I believe you have saved my life, or at least my reason. Will you do something more for me?"

"Even unto half my kingdom," I answered.

"Look here: I am ashamed of the feeling, but I absolutely dread returning to town. At any rate, I wish to stay there longer than is needful. Thursday morning I must, of course, be there to be married. You think me cured, Frank?" he added, abruptly.

"Honestly, yes. If you take care of yourself you will be troubled no more."

"Yet why do I dread London so? Well, never mind. I will go up by the night mail on Wednesday—then I need only be there a few hours. Will you do this for me—go up on Wednesday morning, see Judith, and explain how it is that I shall not see her until we meet at the church?"

"Certainly, if you wish it. But you had better write as well."

"Yes, I shall do that. There are several other little things you must see to for me. The license I have, but you must let the clergyman know. You had better go and see my partners. They may think it strange if I marry and go away without a word."

Thinking it better that he should have his own way, I promised to do as he wished. Upon my arrival in town on Wednesday afternoon I went straight to Mrs. Despard's. I was not sorry to have this opportunity of seeing her alone. I wished to urge upon her the necessity of being careful that Claud did not again get into that highly wrought nervous state from which my treatment had so happily extricated him.

She was not looking so well as when last I saw her. At times her manner was restless, and she seemed striving to suppress agitation. She made no adverse comments on her lover's strange whim of reaching town to-morrow only in time for the ceremony. Her inquiries as to his health were most solicitous, and when I told her that I no longer feared anything on his account, her heart-felt sigh of relief told me how deeply she loved him.

Presently she looked me full in the face. Her eyes were half closed, but I could see an anxious, eager look in them. "He saw a face," she said. "Has it left him?"

"He told you of his queer hallucination, then?"

"No; but once or twice when sitting with me he sprang to his feet and muttered: 'Oh, that face! that ghastly, horrible face! I can bear it no longer!' Then he rushed wildly from the room. What face did he see, Dr. Morton?"

To set her mind at rest, I gave her a little scientific discourse, which explained to her how much mental phenomena were brought about. She listened attentively, and seemed satisfied. Then I bade her adieu until to-morrow.

The marriage was to be of the quiet kind. I found that Mrs. Despard had made no arrangement for any friend to accompany her; so, setting all rules of etiquette at defiance, I suggested that, although the bridegroom's brother, I should call for her in the morning and conduct her to the church. To this she readily consented.

Somehow that evening I did not carry away such a pleasing impression of my brother's bride as I did when first I met her. I can give no reason for this, except that I was not forgetful of my wife's accusation, that when first I met Judith Despard I had been carried away by the glamor of her beauty, and thought of nothing else. As I walked to Claud's rooms, which I occupied for the night, I almost regretted that he had been so hasty—certainly I wished that we knew more of his bride. But it was never too late for regrets or wishes.

I called for Mrs. Despard at the appointed hour and found her quite ready to start. Her dress was plain and simple—I cannot describe it; but I saw that in spite of her excessive pallor she looked very beautiful. In the the carriage on our way to the church she was very silent, answering my remarks with monosyllables. I left her in peace, supposing that at such a moment every woman must be more or less agitated.

When the carriage drew up at the church door, the bride laid her hand upon my arm. I could feel that she was trembling. "Claud will be here?" she asked. "Nothing will stop him?"

"Nothing. But I may as well step out and see that he is waiting."

Yes, Claud was in the church waiting for us. We exchanged greetings. The old sexton summoned the curate; and Judith Despard, my brother and myself walked up to the altar rails.

Claud looked very well that morning; a little fagged, perhaps, but the long night journey would account for that. He certainly looked proud and happy as he stood on the altar step side by side with the woman who in a few minutes would be his wife.

But before the curate had finished reading the opening address a great change came over him. From where I was standing I could see only his side face, but that was enough to show me that he was suffering from some agitation—something far above the nervousness so often displayed by a bridegroom. A deadly pallor came over his face, small beads of perspiration sprang to his brow, and I noticed that those tell-tales of mental disturbance, the hands, were so tightly clinched that the knuckles grew white. It was evident that he was suffering anguish of some kind, and for a moment I thought of stopping the service. But the rite is but a short one, and from whatever cause Claud's agitation might proceed, it was perhaps better to trust to him to curb it for a few moments than to make a scene. Nevertheless I watched him intently and anxiously.

Then came the charge to declare any impediment. As the curate made the conventional pause, Claud, to my surprise, glanced round in a startled way, as if fearing that his marriage would at the last moment be forbidden. The look on his face was now of actual terror.

PART II.

Both bride and bridegroom said their "I wills" in such low tones that I could scarcely hear their voices. Then, in pursuance of my duty, I gave the woman to the priest. He joined the hands of Claud and Judith.

After having played my little part I had not moved back to my former station. I was now close to the bride, and as Claud turned to her I could see his face to advantage. It was positively distorted with suppressed emotion of some kind. His mouth was set, and I could see that his teeth were closed on his upper lip. He did not look at his fair bride. His gaze passed over her shoulder. In fact, he seemed almost oblivious to her presence. I was dreadfully frightened.

The clergyman's voice rang out: "I, Claud, take thee, Judith, to be my wedded wife." Then, hearing no echo of his words, he paused.

"Repeat after me," he prompted. Again he began, "I, Claud——"

But his voice was drowned in a louder one, which rang through the empty church. With a fierce cry, as of inexpressible rage, Claud had thrown the bride's hand from him, and was pointing and gesticulating toward the wall, upon which his eyes had been riveted.

"Here!—even here!" he almost shrieked. "That cursed, white, wicked, dying face! Whose is it? Why does it come between me and my love? Mad! Mad! I am going mad!"

I heeded not the clergyman's look of dismay, or the bride's cry of distress. I thought of nothing but my unfortunate brother. Here, at the moment which should be the happiest he had yet known, the grewsome hallucination had come back to him. I threw my arms around him and tried to calm him.

"It is fancy, dear boy," I said. "In a moment it will be gone."

"Gone! Why does it come? What have I to do with this dying man? Look, Frank, look! Something tells me if you look you will see it. There! there! Look there!"

His eyes were ever fixed on the same point. He grasped my arm convulsively. I am ashamed to say that I yielded and looked in the direction of his gaze.

"There is nothing there," I said, soothingly.

"Look!" he exclaimed. "It will come to you as to me."

It may have been the hope of convincing Claud of the illusionary nature of the sight which tormented him, it may have been some strange fascination wrought by his words and manner, which made me for some moments gaze with him. God of heaven! I saw gradually forming out of nothing, gathering on the blank wall in front of me, a face, or the semblance of a face, white, ghastly, horrible! Long, dank, wet-looking, dark hair, eyes starting from their sockets, lips working—the whole appearance that of the face of a man who is struggling with death; in every detail as Claud had described it. And yet to me that face was more terrible than ever it could have been to Claud.

I gazed in horror. I felt my eyes growing riveted to the sight as his own. I felt my whole frame trembling. I knew that in another moment I should be raving as wildly as he raved. Only his hoarse whisper recalled me to my senses.

"You see?" he asked, or rather asserted.

Horror forced the truth from me. "I see, or fancy I see," I answered.

With a wild laugh Claud broke from me. He rushed down the church and disappeared. As he left me the face, thank heaven! faded from the wall, or from my imagination.

I turned to my companions. Judith Despard was lying in a dead swoon on the altar steps; the curate with trembling hands was loosening the throat of her dress. I called for water. The sexton brought it. I bathed the poor woman's temples, and in a few minutes she sighed, opened her eyes, and then shuddered. I took her in my arms and staggered to the church door. The curate removed his surplice and followed me. I placed my almost senseless burden in the carriage.

"For Heaven's sake, see her home," I said to the curate. "I must go and look after my brother. As soon as I have seen him I will come round to Mrs. Despard's. Get her home quickly. The coachman knows where to go."

The brougham drove off. I threw myself into a cab and drove off towards Claud's rooms. I hoped he might have gone straight there.

To my great relief, when I reached his house he was on the door step. We entered his room together; he sank wearily into a chair, and buried his face in his hands. I was scarcely less agitated than himself, and my face, as I caught its reflection in the mirror, was white as his own. I waited for him no speak.

Presently he raised his head. "Go to her," he said. "Ask her why that face comes between us. You saw it—even you. It can be no fancy of mine. Tell her we can meet no more."

"I will wait until you are calmer before I go."

"Calm! I am myself now. The thing has left me, as it always does. Frank, I have hidden from you one peculiarity of my state. That awful face never shows itself to me unless I am in her company. Even at the altar it came between us. Go to her; ask her why it comes."

I left him, but did not quit the house for some time. I went into an adjoining room to collect my thoughts; for, as I said, my mind was more troubled than even Claud's could be.

I am ashamed to re-assert it; I am willing to own that excitement, my brother's impressive manner, superstition which I did not know I possessed—anything that may bear a natural explanation—may have raised that vision. But why should that phantom, gathering and growing from nothing until it attained to form, or at least semblance, have been the face of one I had known? Why should the features distorted in deadly agony have been those of my brother Stephen? For his was the dreadful face which Claud's prompting or his own imagination had raised.

Almost like one in a dream I went to do Claud's bidding. I was thankful, upon reaching Mrs. Despard's, to find that she had gone to her room and left word that she could see no one to-day. This gave me time to consider the position.

Acting on a sudden impulse, I went to the telegraph office and sent instructions to my wife to forward to me, by passenger train, a small box in which I kept old letters and papers. Then I went back to Claud, and after some persuasion, induced him to leave town at once. I told him I would arrange everything on the morrow. He was better away.

In the morning the box arrived. In it I found what I wanted. After the calming effects of a night's rest I felt ashamed of my weakness as I drew from old letters a photograph of my brother Stephen—one taken about two years before the report of his death reached us. Nevertheless I put the portrait in my pocket, and about noon went to Mrs. Despard's.

I was at once admitted, and in a few minutes she came to me. She looked worn and haggard, as if sleep had not visited her for nights. Dark circles had formed round her fine eyes; lines seemed to have deepened round her firm, passionate mouth. She advanced eagerly toward me and held out her hand. I took it in silence. Indeed, I scarcely knew what to say or how to act.

"Where is Claud?" she asked in a quick voice, but scarcely above a whisper.

"He has left town for a few days."

She pressed her hand to her heart. "Does that mean I shall see him no more?"

"I am afraid I must say it does." He thinks it better you should part."

She gave a sharp cry, and walked up and down the room wringing her hands. Her lips moved rapidly, and I knew she was muttering many words, but in so low a key that I could not catch their meaning. Suddenly she stopped and turned upon me fiercely.

"Is this by your counsel and advice?" she demanded.

"No. It is his own unbiased decision."

"Why?—tell me why? He loved me—I love him. Why does he leave me?"

The passionate entreaty of her voice is indescribable. What could I say to her? Words stuck in my throat. It seemed the height of absurdity for a sane man to give a sane woman the true reason for Claud's broken faith. I stammered out something about his bad state and health.

"If he is ill, I will nurse him," she cried. "I will wait for years if he will give me hope. Dr. Morton, I love Claud as I never before loved a man."

She clasped her hands and looked imploringly into my face. In a mechanical way I drew the portrait of my dead brother from my breast. She saw the action.

"His likeness!" she cried, joyfully. "He sends it to me! Ah, he loves me!"

I handed her the photograph. "Mrs. Despard," I asked, "do you know——"

I did not finish the question, yet it was fully answered. Never, I believe, save then did a human face undergo such a sudden, frightful change. The woman's very lips grew ashen, her eyes glared into mine, and I saw them full of dread. She staggered—all but fell.

"Why is it here—who is it?" she gasped out.

I was a prey to the wildest excitement. To what revelation was this tending? what awful thing had I to learn?

"Listen," I said sternly. "Woman, it is for you to answer the question. It is the face of this man, his dying face, that comes between you and your lover."

"Tell me his name," I read rather than heard the words the dry lips formed.

"The name he was once known by was Stanley."

"He is dead," she said. "Why does he come between my love and me? Others have loved or said they have loved me since then. They saw no dead face. Had I loved them I might have married and been happy. Claud I love. Why does the dead man trouble him?"

"That man," I replied, "was my brother—Claud's brother."

She threw out her arms with a gesture of utter despair. "Your brother—Claud's brother!" she repeated. Then she fixed her eyes on mine as if she would read the secrets of my soul.

"You are lying," she said.

"I am not. He was our eldest brother. He left England years ago. He passed under a false name. He died. When and how did he die?"

She sank, a dead weight, into a chair, but still she looked at me like one under a spell. I seized her wrist.

"Tell me, woman,"—"tell me what this man was to you; why his dying face comes to us? The truth—speak the truth."

She seemed to cower beneath my words, but her eyes were still on my face.

"Speak!" I cried, fiercely, and tightening my grasp upon her wrist. At last she found words.

"He was my husband; I killed him," she said, in a strange voice, low, yet perfectly distinct.

I recoiled in horror. This woman, the widow and self-confessed murderess of one brother, within an ace of being the wife of the other!

"You murdered him?" I said, turning to the woman.

"I murdered him. He made my life a hell upon earth. He beat me, cursed me, ruined me. He was the foulest-hearted fiend that ever lived. I killed him."

No remorse, no regret in her words. Quite overcome, I leaned against the chimney-piece. Bad as I knew Stephen Morton to have been, I could at that moment only think of him as a gay, light-hearted school-boy, my elder brother, and in those days a perfect hero in my eyes. No wonder my heart was full of vengeance.

Yet even in the first flush of my rage I knew that I could do nothing. No human justice could be meted out to this woman. There was nothing to prove the truth of her self-accusation. She would escape scot-free.

"Would that I could avenge his death!" I said sullenly.

She sprang to her feet. Her dark eyes blazed. "Avenged!" she cried. "Is it not doubly, trebly avenged? Has he not taken all I care for in life from me? Has he not taken my love from my side? Coward in life coward in death. When I killed him I knew he would try to come back to me. He has tried for years. Ah, I was too strong for him. I could banish the face with which he strove to haunt me. I could forget. I could love. I could have been happy. Yet he has conquered at last. Not me—he could not conquer me—but the one I love. Oh, the coward is avenged!"

In spite of my feeling of abhorrence, I gazed on the speaker in amazement. Her words were not those of one who had committed a black crime, but of one who had suffered wrong. The strange fanciful idea that the dead man had been trying to haunt her, but had been kept at bay by her strong will, was in my experience unprecedented. As I sa[illegible] of mind under which she was the thought came to me that p[illegible] words were true, that my [illegible] death was this day avenged. [illegible] to leave her. I could gain no good, prolonging the painful scene.

She was still facing the room in fierce passion. Suddenly she stopped short, and in thrilling accents began to speak. It seemed as if she had forgotten my presence.

"See!" she cried, "the river-bank—the dark rushing stream! Ah, we are all alone, side by side, far away from every one. Fool! if you could read my heart, would you walk so near to the giddy brink? Do you think the memory of the old love will stay my hand when the chance comes? Old love is dead; you beat it, cursed it to death. How fast does the stream run? Can a strong man swim against it? Oh, if I could be sure—sure that one rush would end it all and give me freedom! Now I long for death—your death. Oh, brave swift tide, are you strong enough to free me forever? Hark! I can hear the roar of the rapids in the distance. There is a deep fall from the river cliff; there are rocks. Fool! you stand at the very edge, and look down. The moment is come. Ah!"

With her last exclamation she used a violent gesture, as if pushing something fiercely from her. She was, I knew, in her excitement, re-acting the tragedy.

"Free! free! free!" she cried, with a delirious, almost rapturous laugh, and clasping her hands. "Hold him, brave stream! Sweep him away. See! he swims; but he dare not swim with you. You are hurrying down to the rapids. He must face you, and wrestle with you for his life. Bear him down; keep him from me. If he masters you, he will land and kill me. Hold him fast, brave stream! Ha! his strength fails. He is swept away; he is under. No, I see him again. He turns his face to me. He knows I did it. With his last breath he is cursing me. His last breath! He is gone, gone forever! I am free!"

The changes in her voice, ranging from dread to fearful joy, her passionate words, her eloquent gestures, all these combined to bring the very scene before my eyes. I stood spell-bound, and even, as she described it, seemed to see the unfortunate man battling for dear life in the rushing stream, growing every moment weaker. As the woman's last wild exclamation—"Gone forever! I am free!"—rang through the room, I seemed to hear the cry of despair drowned as the waves closed over the wretched man's head. I knew every detail of my brother's fate.

I turned to leave the room. I longed to get away, and if possible to banish the events of the day from my mind. It was not given to me to be Stephen Morton's avenger.

My hand was on the door. She grasped my arm and drew me back into the room.

"Look!" she whispered. "Do you see it? There! The face—that awful face! It has come at last to me. The dead man has conquered. There! look! His eyes glaring, his mouth mocking. Now it has once come, I shall see it always—always. Look!"

No, I was not doomed again to see or to fancy I saw that face. Its mission, so far as I was concerned, was at an end. But the look of concentrated horror which Judith Despard cast at the wall of the room beggars description. Then with a piteous cry she fell at my feet, and seemed to strive to make me shield her from something she dreaded. I raised her. She broke from my grasp, and again fell upon the floor, this time in paroxysms of madness.

My tale is closed. That night she was removed to a private lunatic asylum, where for three years she was kept at my expense. She died raving mad, and from inquiries I made I know that from the moment when it first appeared to her to the hour of her death the face of the man she had killed was ever with Judith Despard.—Harper's Magazine.

A DEAD MAN'S FACE.

A STORY IN TWO PARTS.

BY HUGH CONWAY, AUTHOR OF "DARK DAYS."

PART I.

Imaginative beings who invent marvelous tales may take what license they please but a simple narrator is nothing if not accurate; so, before beginning this, I looked up old correspondence and various memoranda made at the time when the following things occurred. The first paper upon which I put my hand was a letter. I may as well open with a copy of it:

"DEAR OLD BOY:—I have met her at last—my fate—the one woman in the world for me. Nothing is settled as yet; but I should not write this unless hope were a certainty. You must wish me joy, although she is a widow and an American—two qualifications which I know you will find fault with. No matter; when you see her you will relent and be envious. Yours ever, CLAUD MORTON."

The writer was my brother—I was going to say my only brother, but I had another once, although the less said about him the better. Nearly every family has its black sheep. Ours had been a peculiarly sable one. When he died, some years ago, I passed the sponge over his long list of delinquencies, and tried to think of him as kindly as possible. He died a disgraced man, far away from home.

I call this black sheep, Stephen, my brother, not Claud's, the fact being that Claud can scarcely be said to have known him. I stood in age midway between the two. Claud was sixteen years younger than Stephen, so that when the latter was shipped off as irreclaimable, the former was a little golden-haired fellow of seven.

The above letter made me feel both glad and sorrow. I was glad that the boy—he was still the boy to me, although his age was seven-and-twenty—was going to be married; but I was sorry that his choice had not fallen on one of his own countrywomen, and one who could have given him her first love. Still, all this was his own peculiar business. No doubt he had made a suitable choice, and the only thing left for me to do was to write him a cheerful letter of congratulation, and hope that his love affairs would soon be happily settled.

A week went by; then came a long letter from him. He had proposed in orthodox form and had been duly accepted. His letter lies before me at this moment, and I feel sad as I read again the two pages covered with the lover's usual raptures.

I am not a mercenary man, but I own I felt somewhat disappointed on learning that she was poor. Somehow one associates wealth with an American widow who is sojourning in England. But, so far as I could gather from Claud's letter, Mrs. Despard, or Judith, as he called her, was not well off. He spoke of her as being all alone in London, which fact, he added, would necessarily hasten his marriage. It would take place, he hoped, in a week or two. In conclusion he pressed me to run up to town in order to make the acquaintance of my future sister-in-law.

I was very busy at the time. I may say, in passing, that my business is to cure people's ailments, not to tell stories, nevertheless I managed to pay a flying visit to town, and was duly presented to Claud's betrothed.

Yes, she was handsome, strikingly handsome. Her whole appearance was much out of the common. She was tall, superbly built, on a large scale, perhaps, yet graceful as a panther in every movement. Her face gave evidence of much character, power and determination, and of passion also, I decided. Her rich dark beauty was at the time in full bloom, and although I saw at a glance that she was some years older than my brother, I was not at all inclined to blame Claud for his rapturous expressions. So far as personal charms went, I could find no fault with Judith Despard. For the rest, it was easy to see that she was passionately in love with Claud, and for the sake of this I gladly overlooked all my fanciful objections to his choice, and congratulated him heartily on having won so beautiful a creature.

Yet strange to say, in the midst of his new-found happiness my brother seemed anything but his usual cheerful self. He, the merriest and most talkative of men, seemed taciturn, moody and preoccupied. The curious thing was that his changed manner struck me particularly whilst we were in Mrs. Despard's company. He spoke and behaved in the most affectionate and lover-like way, but there was in his general bearing something which puzzled me altogether. It seemed to me that he might perhaps be nervous as to what impression his fair friend might make upon the elder brother whom he so reverenced and respected.

This theory of mine was strengthened by the fact that when, at night, we found ourselves alone, and I was able to freely express my admiration of Mrs. Despard's good looks, he brightened up considerably, and we sat until a very late hour and talked over the past, the present and the future.

"When do you mean to be married?" I asked.

"In a fortnight or three weeks. There is nothing to wait for. Judith is living alone in lodgings. She has no friends to consult; so we shall just walk to church some morning and get it over."

"Well, let me walk with you. I should like to see the last of you."

"All right, old fellow. But you'll be the only one—unless Mary likes to honor us." Mary was my wife; but as her time was just then fully occupied by a very young baby, I did not think it at all likely she would be able to make the long journey to town.

"I shall fix the earliest day I can," added Claud. "The fact is, I have been feeling rather queer lately. I want a change."

Thereupon I questioned him as to what ailed him. So far as I could ascertain, all that was the matter was his having worked too hard, and being a little below par. I prescribed a tonic, and quite agreed with him as to the benefit which he would derive from the change of air.

When I reached home my wife scolded me for my stupidity. It seems that it was my duty to have found out all about Mrs. Despard's antecedents, relations, connections, circumstances, habits and dispositions, whereas all I could say was that she was a beautiful widow with a small income, and that she and Claud were devoted to one another.

"Yes," said Mrs. Morton, scornfully, "like all other men, the moment you see a pretty face you inquire no further. I quite tremble for Claud."

When I reflected how little I really knew about Mrs. Despard, I felt abashed and guilty. However, Claud was a full-grown man, and no fraternal counsel was likely to turn him aside from his desire.

In the course of a few days he wrote me that he was to be married on the fifth of the next month. I made arrangements which would enable me to go to the wedding; but three days before the date named I heard again from him. The wedding was postponed for a fortnight. He gave no reason for the delay; but he said he was anxious to see me, and to-morrow he should run down to my house.

He came as promised. I was aghast when I saw him. He looked worn, haggard, wretched. My first thought was that business matters had gone wrong with him. His looks might well be those of a man on the brink of ruin. After the first greeting I at once took him to my study in order to be put out of suspense. Just as I was about to begin my anxious questions he turned to me.

"Frank, old fellow," he said imploringly, and with a faint attempt at a smile, "don't laugh at me."

Laugh! That was the last thing I was likely to do. I pressed his hand in silence.

"You won't believe me, I know," he continued. "I can't believe it myself. Frank, I am haunted."

"Haunted!" I was bound to smile, not from any disposition toward merriment, but in order to show the poor boy the absurdity of his idea.

"Yes, haunted. The words sound ridiculous but I can use no other. Haunted."

"What haunts you?"

He came close to me and grasped my arm. His voice sank to a hoarse whisper.

"A horrible, ghastly, growsome thing. It is killing me. It comes between me and my happiness. I have fought and struggled against this phantom terror. I have reasoned calmly with myself. I have laughed my own folly to scorn. In vain—in vain. It goes, but it comes again."

"Overwork," I said "insomnia, too many cigars, late hours; and had you been a drinking man, I should add too much stimulant, too little food, anxiety, perhaps. Have you anything on your mind—any special worry?"

"Of course I have," he said, pettishly. Did I not tell you it is killing me?"

"What is killing you?"

He rose and paced the room excitedly; then suddenly he stopped short and once more clutched my arm.

"A face," he said, wildly—"a man's face; a tearful white face that comes to me; a horrible mask, with features drawn as in agony—ghastly pale, hideous! Death or approaching death, violent death, written in every line. Every feature distorted. Eyes starting from the head. Every cord in the throat standing out, strained as by mortal struggle. Long dark hair lying flat and wet. Thin lips moving and working—lips that are cursing, although I can hear no sound. Why should this come to me—why to me? Who is this dead man whose face wrecks my life? Frank, my brother, if this is disease or madness, cure me; if not, let me die."

His words, his gestures, sent a cold thrill through me. He was worse, far worse, than I had feared.

"Claud," I said, "you are talking nonsense. Cure you! of course I mean to cure you. Now sit down, collect yourself, and tell me how this hallucination comes."

"Comes! How does it come? It gathers in corners of the room; it forms and takes shape; it glares at me out of the wall; it looks up at me from the floor. Ever the same fearful white dying face, threatening, cursing, sometimes mocking. Why does it come?"

I had already told the poor fellow why it came, but it was no use repeating my words. "Tell me when you see it," I asked; "at night—in darkness?"

He hesitated, and seemed troubled. "No never at night. In broad daylight only. That to me is the crowning terror, the ghastliness of it. At night I could call it a dream. Frank, believe me, I am no weak fool. For weeks I have borne with this. At last it has conquered me. Send it away, or I shall go mad."

"I'll send it away, old boy, never fear. Tell me, can you see it now?"

"No; thank God, not now."

"Have you seen it to-day?"

"No; to-day I have been free from it."

"Well, you'll be free from it to-morrow, and the next day, and the next. It will be gone forever before you leave me. Now come and see Mary and the babies. I haven't even asked you how Mrs. Despard is."

A curious looked crossed his face. "I think she grows more beautiful every day," he said. Then he seized my hand. "Oh, Frank," he exclaimed, "rid me of this horror and I shall be the happiest man in the world."

Although I made light of it to my patient, his state greatly alarmed me. I hastened to put him under the strictest and most approved treatment. I enforced the most rigid sumptuary laws, made him live on plain food and checked his consumption of tobacco unmercifully. In a few days I was delighted to find that my diagnosis of the case was correct. Claud was rapidly recovering tone. In a week's time he seemed quite restored to health.

The days went by. As yet Claud had said nothing about leaving me; yet, unless the day was once more adjourned, he was to be married on the 19th. I did not counsel him to postpone the happy day. He was by now so well that I thought he could not do better than adhere to his arrangement. A month's holiday, spent in the society of the woman he loved, would, I felt certain, complete his cure, and banish forever that grisly intruder begotten of disorganized nerves.

From the monotonous regularity and voluminous nature of their correspondence it was evident, delay and separation notwithstanding, that matters were going on quite smoothly between Judith Despard. Every day he received and wrote a long letter. Nevertheless, it was not until the 16th of the month that I knew exactly what he meant to do about his marriage.

"Frank," he said, "you have been wonderfully kind to me. I believe you have saved my life, or at least my reason. Will you do something more for me?"

"Even unto half my kingdom," I answered.

"Look here; I am ashamed of the feeling, but I absolutely dread returning to town. At any rate, I wish to stay there longer than is needful. Thursday morning I must, of course, be there to be married. You think me cured, Frank?" he added, abruptly.

"Honestly, yes. If you take care of yourself you will be troubled no more."

"Yet why do I dread London so? Well, never mind. I will go up by the night mail on Wednesday—then I need only be there a few hours. Will you do this for me—go up on Wednesday morning, see Judith, and explain how it is that I shall not see her until we meet at the church?"

"Certainly, if you wish it. But you had better write as well."

"Yes, I shall do that. There are several other little things you must see to for me. The license I have, but you must let the clergyman know. You had better go and see my partners. They may think it strange if I marry and go away without a word."

Thinking it better that he should have his own way, I promised to do as he wished. Upon my arrival in town on Wednesday afternoon I went straight to Mrs. Despard's. I was not sorry to have this opportunity of seeing her alone. I wished to urge upon her the necessity of being careful that Claud did not again get into that highly wrought nervous state from which my treatment had so happily extricated him.

She was not looking so well as when last I saw her. At times her manner was restless, and she seemed striving to suppress agitation. She made no adverse comments on her lover's strange whim of reaching town to-morrow only in time for the ceremony. Her inquiries as to his health were most solicitous, and when I told her that I no longer feared anything on his account, her heart-felt sigh of relief told me how deeply she loved him.

Presently she looked me full in the face. Her eyes were half closed, but I could see an anxious, eager look in them. "He saw a face," she said. "Has it left him?"

"He told you of his queer hallucination, then?"

"No; but once or twice when sitting with me he sprang to his feet and muttered: 'Oh, that face! that ghastly, horrible face! I can bear it no longer!' Then he rushed wildly from the room. What face did he see, Dr. Morton?"

To set her mind at rest, I gave her a little scientific discourse, which explained to her how much mental phenomena were brought about. She listened attentively, and seemed satisfied. Then I bade her adieu until to-morrow.

The marriage was to be of the quiet kind. I found that Mrs. Despard had made no arrangement for any friend to accompany her; so, setting all rules of etiquette at defiance, I suggested that, although the bridegroom's brother, I should call for her in the morning and conduct her to the church. To this she readily consented.

Somehow that evening I did not carry away such a pleasing impression of my brother's bride as I did when first I met her. I can give no reason for this, except that I was not forgetful of my wife's accusation, that when first I met Judith Despard I had been carried away by the glamer of her beauty, and thought of nothing else. As I walked to Claud's rooms, which I occupied for the night, I almost regretted that he had been so hasty—certainly I wished that we knew more of his bride. But it was never too late for regrets or wishes.

I called for Mrs. Despard at the appointed hour and found her quite ready to start. Her dress was plain and simple—I cannot describe it; but I saw that in spite of her excessive pallor she looked very beautiful. In the carriage on our way to the church she was very silent, answering my remarks with monosyllables. I left her in peace; supposing that at such a moment every women must be more or less agitated.

When the carriage drew up at the church door, the bride laid her hand upon my arm. I could feel that she was trembling. "Claud will be here?" she asked. "Nothing will stop him?"

"Nothing. But I may as well step out and see that he is waiting."

Yes, Claud was in the church waiting for us. We exchanged greetings. The old sexton summoned the curate; and Judith Despard, my brother and myself walked up to the altar rails.

Claud looked very well that morning; a little fagged, perhaps; but the long night journey would account for that. He certainly looked proud and happy as he stood on the altar step side by side with the woman who in a few minutes would be his wife.

But before the curate had finished reading the opening address a great change came over him. From where I was standing I could see only his side face, but that was enough to show me that he was suffering from some agitation—something far above the nervousness so often displayed by a bridegroom. A deadly pallor came over his face, small beads of perspiration sprang to his brow, and I noticed that those tell-tales of mental disturbance, the hands, were so tightly clinched that the knuckles grew white. It was evident that he was suffering anguish of some kind, and for a moment I thought of stopping the service. But the rite is but a short one, and from whatever cause Claud's agitation might proceed, it was perhaps better to trust to him to curb it for a few moments than to make a scene. Nevertheless I watched him intently and anxiously.

Then came the charge to declare any impediment. As the curate made the conventional pause, Claud, to my surprise, glanced round in a startled way, as if fearing that his marriage would at the last moment be forbidden. The look on his face was now of actual terror.

PART II.

Both bride and bridegroom said their "I will" in such low tones that I could scarcely hear their voices. Then, in pursuance of my duty, I gave the woman to the priest. He joined the hands of Claud and Judith.

After having played my little part I had not moved back to my former station. I was now close to the bride, and as Claud turned to her I could see his face to advantage. It was positively distorted with suppressed emotion of some kind. His mouth was set, and I could see that his teeth were closed on his upper lip. He did not look at his fair bride. His gaze passed over her shoulder. In fact, he seemed almost oblivious to her presence. I was dreadfully frightened.

The clergyman's voice rang out: "I, Claud, take thee, Judith, to be my wedded wife." Then, hearing no echo of his words, he paused.

"Repeat after me," he prompted. Again he began, "I, Claud——"

But his voice was drowned in a louder one, which rang through the empty church. With a fierce cry, as of inexpressible rage, Claud had thrown the bride's hand from him, and was pointing and gesticulating toward the wall, upon which his eyes had been riveted.

"Here!—even here!" he almost shrieked. "That cursed, white, wicked, dying face! Whose is it? Why does it come between me and my love? Mad! Mad! I am going mad!"

I heeded not the clergyman's look of dismay, or the bride's cry of distress. I thought of nothing but my unfortunate brother. Here, at the moment which should be the happiest he had yet known, the grewsome hallucination had come back to him. I threw my arms around him and tried to calm him.

"It is fancy, dear boy," I said. "In a moment it will be gone."

"Gone! Why does it come? What have I to do with this dying man? Look, Frank, look! Something tells me if you look you will see it. There! there! Look there!"

His eyes were ever fixed on the same point. He grasped my arm convulsively. I am ashamed to say that I yielded and looked in the direction of his gaze.

"There is nothing there," I said, soothingly.

"Look!" he exclaimed. "It will come to you as to me."

It may have been the hope of convincing Claud of the illusionary nature of the sight which tormented him, it may have been some strange fascination wrought by his words and manner, which made me for some moments gaze with him. God of heaven! I saw gradually forming out of nothing, gathering on the blank wall in front of me, a face, or the semblance of a face, white, ghastly, horrible! Long, dank, wet-looking dark hair, eyes starting from their sockets, lips working—the whole appearance that of the face of a man who is struggling with death; in every detail as Claud had described it. And yet to me that face was more terrible than ever it could have been to Claud.

I gazed in horror. I felt my eyes growing riveted to the sight as his own. I felt my whole frame trembling. I knew that in another moment I should be raving as wildly as he raved. Only his hoarse whisper recalled me to my senses.

"You see?" he asked, or rather asserted.

Horror forced the truth from me. "I see, or fancy I see," I answered.

With a wild laugh Claud broke from me. He rushed down the church and disappeared. As he left me the face, thank heaven! faded from the wall, or from my imagination.

I turned to my companions. Judith Despard was lying in a dead swoon on the altar steps; the curate with trembling hands was loosening the throat of her dress. I called for water. The sexton brought it. I bathed the poor woman's temples, and in a few minutes she sighed, opened her eyes, and then shuddered. I took her in my arms and staggered to the church door. The curate removed his surplice and followed me. I placed my almost senseless burden in the carriage.

"For Heaven's sake, see her home," I said to the curate. "I must go and look after my brother. As soon as I have seen him I will come round to Mrs. Despard's. Get her home quickly. The coachman knows where to go."

The brougham drove off. I threw myself into a cab and drove off towards Claud's rooms. I hoped he might have gone straight there.

To my great relief, when I reached his house he was on the door step. We entered his room together; he sank wearily into a chair, and buried his face in his hands. I was scarcely less agitated than himself, and my face, as I caught its reflection in the mirror, was white as his own. I waited for him to speak.

Presently he raised his head. "Go to her," he said. "Ask her why that face comes between us. You saw it—even you. It can be no fancy of mine. Tell her we can meet no more."

"I will wait until you are calmer before I go."

"Calm! I am myself now. The thing has left me, as it always does. Frank, I have hidden from you one peculiarity of my state. That awful face never shows itself to me unless I am in her company. Even at the altar it came between us. Go to her; ask her why it comes."

I left him, but did not quit the house for some time. I went into an adjoining room to collect my thoughts; for, as I said, my mind was more troubled than even Claud's could be.

I am ashamed to re-assert it; I am willing to own that excitement, my brother's impressive manner, superstition which I did not know I possessed—anything that may bear a natural explanation—may have raised that vision. But why should that phantom, gathering and growing from nothing until it attained to form, or at least semblance, have been the face of one I had known? Why should the features distorted in deadly agony have been those of my brother Stephen? For his was the dreadful face which Claud's prompting or his own imagination had raised.

Almost like one in a dream I went to do Claud's bidding. I was thankful, upon reaching Mrs. Despard's, to find that she had gone to her room and left word that she could see no one to-day. This gave me time to consider the position.

Acting on a sudden impulse, I went to the telegraph office and sent instructions to my wife to forward to me, by passenger train, a small box in which I kept old letters and papers. Then I went back to Claud, and after some persuasion, induced him to leave town at once. I told him I would arrange everything on the morrow. He was better away.

In the morning the box arrived. In it I found what I wanted. After the calming effects of a night's rest I felt ashamed of my weakness as I drew from old letters a photograph of my brother Stephen—one taken about two years before the report of his death reached us. Nevertheless I put the portrait in my pocket, and about noon went to Mrs. Despard's.

I was at once admitted, and in a few minutes she came to me. She looked worn and haggard, as if sleep had not visited her for nights. Dark circles had formed round her fine eyes; lines seemed to have deepened round her firm, passionate mouth. She advanced eagerly toward me and held out her hand. I took it in silence. Indeed, I scarcely knew what to say or how to act.

"Where is Claud?" she asked in a quick voice, but scarcely above a whisper.

"He has left town for a few days."

She pressed her hand to her heart. "Does that mean I shall see him no more?"

"I am afraid I must say it does. He thinks it better you should part."

She gave a sharp cry, and walked up and down the room wringing her hands. Her lips moved rapidly, and I knew she was muttering many words, but in so low a key that I could not catch their meaning. Suddenly she stopped and turned upon me fiercely.

"Is this by your counsel and advice?" she demanded.

"No. It is his own unbiased decision."

"Why?—tell me why? He loved me—I love him. Why does he leave me?"

The passionate entreaty of her voice is indescribable. What could I say to her? Words stuck in my throat. It seemed the height of absurdity for a sane man to give a sane woman the true reason for Claud's broken faith. I stammered out something about his bad state and health.

"If he is ill, I will nurse him," she cried. "I will wait for years if he will give me hope. Dr. Morton, I love Claud as I never before loved a man."

She clasped her hands and looked imploringly into my face. In a mechanical way I drew the portrait of my dead brother from my breast. She saw the action.

"His likeness!" she cried, joyfully. "He sends it to me! Ah, he loves me!"

I handed her the photograph. "Mrs. Despard," I asked, "do you know——"

I did not finish the question, yet it was fully answered. Never, I believe, save then did a human face undergo such a sudden, frightful change. The woman's very lips grew ashen, her eyes glared into mine, and I saw them full of dread. She staggered—all but fell.

"Why is it here—who is it?" she gasped out.

I was a prey to the wildest excitement. To what revelation was this leading? what awful thing had I to learn?

"Listen," I said sternly. "Woman, it is for you to answer the question. It is the face of this man, his dying face, that comes between you and your lover."

"Tell me his name." I read rather than heard the words her dry lips formed.

"The name he was once known by was Stanley."

"He is dead," she said. "Why does he come between my love and me? Others have loved or said they have loved me since then. They saw no dead face. Had I loved them I might have married and been happy. Claud I love. Why does the dead man trouble him?"

"That man," I replied, "was my brother—Claud's brother."

She threw out her arms with a gesture of utter despair. "Your brother—Claud's brother!" she repeated. Then she fixed her eyes on mine as if she would read the secrets of my soul.

"You are lying," she said.

"I am not. He was our eldest brother. He left England years ago. He passed under a false name. He died: When and how did he die?"

She sank, a dead weight, into a chair, but still she looked at me like one under a spell. I seized her wrist.

"Tell me, woman,"—tell me what this man was to you; why his dying face comes to us? The truth—speak the truth."

She seemed to cower beneath my words, but her eyes were still on my face.

"Speak!" I cried, fiercely, and tightening my grasp upon her wrist. At last she found words.

"He was my husband; I killed him," she said, in a strange voice, low, yet perfectly distinct.

I recoiled in horror. This woman, the widow and self-confessed murderess of one brother, within an ace of being the wife of the other!

"You murdered him?" I said, turning to the woman.

"I murdered him. He made my life a hell upon earth. He beat me, cursed me, ruined me. He was the foulest-hearted fiend that ever lived. I killed him."

No remorse, no regret in her words. Quite overcome, I leaned against the chimney-piece. Bad as I knew Stephen Morton to have been, I could at that moment only think of him as a gay, light-hearted school-boy, my elder brother, and in those days a perfect hero in my eyes. No wonder my heart was full of vengeance.

Yet even in the first flush of my rage I knew that I could do nothing. No human justice could be meted out to this woman. There was nothing to prove the truth of her self-accusation. She would escape scot-free.

"Would that I could avenge his death!" I said sullenly.

She sprang to her feet. Her dark eyes blazed. "Avenged!" she cried. "Is it not doubly, trebly avenged? Has he not taken all I care for in life from me? Has he not taken my love from my side? Coward in life coward in death. When I killed him I knew he would try to come back to me. He has tried for years. Ah, I was too strong for him. I could banish the face with which he strove to haunt me. I could forget. I could love. I could have been happy. Yet he has conquered at last. Not me—he could not conquer me—but the one I love. Oh, the coward is avenged!"

In spite of my feeling of abhorrence, I gazed on the speaker in amazement. Her words were not those of one who had committed a black crime, but of one who had suffered wrong. The strange fanciful idea that the dead man had been trying to haunt her, but had been kept at bay by her strong will, was in my experience unprecedented. As I saw the agony of mind under which she was laboring, the thought came to me that perhaps her words were true, that my brother's death was this day avenged. I resolved to leave her. I could gain no good by prolonging the painful scene.

She was still pacing the room in fierce passion. Suddenly she stopped short, and in thrilling accents began to speak. It seemed as if she had forgotten my presence.

"See!" she cried, "the river-bank—the dark rushing stream! Ah, we are all alone, side by side, far away from every one. Fool! if you could read my heart, would you walk so near to the giddy brink? Do you think the memory of the old love will stay my hand when the chance comes? Old love is dead; you beat it, cursed it to death. How fast does the stream run! Can a strong man swim against it? Oh, if I could be sure—sure that one rush would end it all and give me freedom! Now I long for death—your death. Oh, brave swift tide, are you strong enough to free me forever? Hark! I can hear the roar of the rapids in the distance. There is a deep fall from the river cliff; there are rocks. Fool! you stand at the very edge and look down. The moment is come. Ah!"

With her last exclamation she used a violent gesture, as if pushing something fiercely from her. She was, I knew, in her excitement, re-acting the tragedy.

"Free! free! free!" she cried, with a delirious, almost rapturous laugh, and clasping her hands. "Hold him, brave stream! Sweep him away. See! he swims; but he dare not swim with you. You are hurrying down to the rapids. He must face you, and wrestle with you for his life. Bear him down; keep him from me. If he masters you he will land and kill me. Hold him fast, brave stream! Ha! his strength fails. He is swept away; he is under. No, I see him again. He turns his face to me. He knows I did it. With his last breath he is cursing me. His last breath! He is gone, gone forever! I am free!"

The changes in her voice, ranging from dread to tearful joy, her passionate words, her eloquent gestures, all these combined to bring the very scene before my eyes. I stood spellbound, and even, as she described it, seemed to see the un*fortunate man battling for dear life in* the rushing stream, growing every moment weaker. As the woman's last wild exclamation—"Gone forever! I am free!"—rang through the room, I seemed to hear the cry of despair drowned as the waves closed over the wretched man's head. I knew every detail of my brother's fate.

I turned to leave the room. I longed to get away, and if possible to banish the events of the day from my mind. It was not given to me to be Stephen Morton's avenger.

My hand was on the door. She grasped my arm and drew me back into the room.

"Look!" she whispered. "Do you see it? There! The face—that awful face! It has come at last to me! The dead man has conquered. There! look! His eyes glaring, his mouth mocking. Now it has once come, I shall see it always—always. Look!"

No, I was not doomed again to see or to fancy I saw that face. Its mission, so far as I was concerned, was at an end. But the look of concentrated horror which Judith Despard cast at the wall of the room beggars description. Then with a piteous cry she fell at my feet, and seemed to strive to make me shield her from something she dreaded. I raised her. She broke from my grasp, and again fell upon the floor, this time in paroxysms of madness.

My tale is ended. That night she was removed to a private lunatic asylum, where for three years she was kept at my expense. She died raving mad, and from inquiries I made I know that from the moment when it first appeared to her to the hour of her death the face of the man she had killed was ever with Judith Despard.—Harper's Magazine.

PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR.

State of New Jersey,
Executive Department,
Trenton, Jan. 12, 1885.

George M. Wright, the Treasurer of this State, elected by the Legislature in Joint Meeting, March 20, 1883, having died on the eighth day of January, A. D. 1885, and the said office being vacant:

I, Leon Abbett, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do make this my proclamation, and give public notice, that I have appointed and commissioned Jonathan H. Blackwell, of the county of Mercer, to fill the said vacancy and to execute the duties of Treasurer of the State of New Jersey, until the end of the next session of the Legislature, unless a successor shall be sooner appointed.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State of New Jersey, at Trenton, this twelfth day of January, A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-five.

By the Governor,
LEON ABBETT.
Henry C. Kelsey, Secretary of State.

THE STAR OF DEMOCRACY.

With all due regard for the opinions of political opponents, Democrats have just cause to feel proud of their party organization and to express that feeling.

For nearly 24 years the Democratic party has been deprived of national executive authority, and during that lengthened period it has braved the most intensely hostile opposition, yet, never faltering in fidelity to the Constitution, nor to the principles of its eminent party founder, it hopefully battled on until now it is on the eve of again inaugurating a Democratic President.

What other party could have shown such a record?

None that ever existed since the Republic was born.

After long years of exclusion from governing rule, the American people, by virtue of their sovereign power, have summoned the party of Jefferson to again take the helm of national affairs.

Why?

Because the people, suffering from the effects of a vicious system of corrupt political jobbery and plundering monopoly, and yearning for the blessings of HONEST GOVERNMENT, arising in the might of independent action, as became freemen, demanded a change and turned to the Democratic party as the only sure source of safety and reform.

On that platform GROVER CLEVELAND was nominated. He fully appreciates the wishes of those whose votes made him the President elect and will earnestly strive to prove their confidence worthily bestowed.

He will be the President of the United States, not for mercenary personal gain, or party radicalism, but for the enduring honor of country and the real welfare of the people.

Conservative and patriotic in thought and action, surrounded by wise counselors, faithful in the performance of every official obligation, and ever diligent at the post of duty, we confidently believe his Administration will be one of the most illustrious, because thoroughly honest and efficient.

Better times are coming.

The star of Democracy brightly beams.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor Abbett's Annual Message will be found in full, in supplement form, with this issue. The message will speak for itself to our readers. It is a sound, logical document, characteristic of our model and capable Governor. He starts out in the beginning of it to deal with facts and information of interest to all citizens, and keeps it up to the end. The message should be read by everyone interested in State matters.

DEATH OF TREASURER WRIGHT.

George M. Wright, Treasurer of the State of New Jersey, died, after a long illness at his home in Bordentown Thursday morning of last week. He was a leading man in the disastrous Pennsylvania, Slatington and New England Railroad enterprise. Worry over losses in this, together with the shock of the death of Gen. Gershom Mott, his next-door neighbor and most intimate friend, caused his death.

Messrs. H. C. Kelsey and Rufus Blodgett, of this State, have been appointed members of the reception committee at the Presidential inauguration.

The twenty ninth annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association will be held at the American House, Trenton, on Monday, January 19th, at eleven o'clock.

The Joel Parker Club, of Newark, contemplate taking part in the inauguration ceremonies of President Cleveland, attired in silk hats, light overcoats and umbrellas.

The sudden death of two prominent men occurred on Tuesday last, Schuyler Colfax, Republican ex-Vice President of the United States and Capt. Isaiah Rynders, known as the Democratic War Horse of New York city. Both died suddenly from apoplexy.

An attempt was made in O'Donovan Rossa's shop in New York Friday afternoon to assassinate Captain Thomas Phelan, Superintendent of the Kansas City Workhouse and an Irish Nationalist. He was stabbed eleven times. The assault was made because Phelan is accused of revealing secrets of the Irish Invincibles.

After several years of ill-health Moses D. Naar, editor of the True American, died from an affection of the lungs shortly before noon on Saturday last. He was in his 48th year, a lawyer by profession and succeeded the late Judge David Naar as editor. He was much respected and leaves a widow and two children to mourn his death.

Friday was a lucky day for Cleveland. He was born on Friday. He started to school on Friday. He began to study law on Friday. He was admitted to the bar on Friday. He received his first fee on Friday, won his first case the next Friday. He was nominated for the Presidency on Friday and his election beyond a doubt was not assured until Friday, Nov. 7.

Governor Abbett, on Monday last, appointed ex-Senator Jonathan H. Blackwell, of Trenton, State Treasurer, in place of George M. Wright, deceased. Mr. Blackwell is a member of the wholesale grocery firm of Wm. Dalton & Co., of that city, and is a Democrat. Mr. Blackwell will act as Treasurer until the election of Mr. Wright's successor by the Republican Legislature.

CAUCUS NOMINEES.

Both Democrats and Republicans held joint legislative caucuses at the State House, Trenton, Monday evening. The Republicans made the following nominations: For Comptroller, Major E. J. Anderson; for Treasurer, Col. J. J. Toffey, of Hudson; Police Justices, Jersey City, Wm. J. Stiding and Peter F. Wanser; Police Justice, Thirteenth ward, Newark, Paul W. Rider, all of whom were confirmed in the joint meeting held on Wednesday.

The Democrats made nominations as follows: Comptroller, James E. Connelly, of Newark; Treasurer, Jonathan H. Blackwell, of Trenton; State Prison Inspectors, George E. Fell, of Mercer, James C. Clark, of Hudson and Daniel J. McAulay, of Passaic; Police Justices, Jersey City, James Davis and James Estabrook; State Director of Railroads and Canals, Charles Wills.

Gov. Abbett sent to this meeting the name of ex-Senator Doughty, of Somerset, for a Sinking Fund Commissioner. Senator Vanderbilt opposed the nomination, which was subsequently referred to the Judiciary Committee.

CIX LEGISLATURE OF NEW JERSEY.

The 109th session of the New Jersey Legislature convened at Trenton on Tuesday last by the election of the following officers:

SENATE.

President—Abraham V. Schenck, of Middlesex.

Secretary—Wm. A. Stiles, of Sussex.

Assistant Secretary—Wm A. McCrellish, of Mercer.

Engrossing Clerk—John H. McMurray, of Camden.

Doorkeepers—B. F. Lee, Cumberland; C. P. Ford, Middlesex; C. F. Bunnell, Ocean; Benj. Pool, Camden.

HOUSE.

Speaker—E. A. Armstrong, Camden.

Clerk—Samuel Toombs, Essex.

Reading Clerk—J. Herbert Potts, Hudson.

Engrossing Clerk—Enos W. Runyon, Union.

Sergeant-at-Arms—G. W. Colfax, Passaic.

Asst. Sergeant-at-Arms—John Ginder, Mercer.

Keeper of Ladies' Gallery—J. F. Burton, Burlington.

Document Clerk—George R. Johnson, Essex.

The Governor's message was received and read. The document will be found in supplement form with this issue.

A resolution was passed calling for a joint meeting of the Legislature, January 14th, 1885.

Three bills were introduced in the Senate and 39 in the House. Among them was one making legal rate of interest 5 per cent.

On Wednesday, Mr. Kirkner introduced the following bills in the Assembly:

No. 48. By Mr. Kirkner—Requiring Union county overseers of highways to remove briars, thistles, &c., and improve the roads, the taxpayers to foot the expenses.

No. 49. By Mr. Kirkner—Amending the act against the use of toy pistols, so that persons shall not sell, hire or loan such things.

Organization of the Legislature.

Although the Republicans have a decided majority in both branches of the 109th Legislature of this State, their proceedings in organizing the same on Tuesday last, was not very harmonious. Senators Griggs, of Passaic, the youngest of them all, and Senator Youngblood, an old "vet" in Senatorial honors, were candidates for the position of President of the Senate. Griggs held the lead and a "full hand" up to the night before organization, and then Youngblood got his other blood up and swore by the great horn spoon that Griggs should not have that which he hankered after. Then the wise Democrats, who have such staunch leaders as Gov. Abbett, Miles Ross and others, put their heads together, and said, "we will give them a little dynamite." So they brought forward Senator Schenck, of Middlesex, who also swore by the great horn spoon that Griggs should not sit where he wanted to—and he didn't. The result of the affair was as follows, gleaned from the Trenton True American:

The Republican Senatorial caucus had been called for noon, but at that hour, as one of the leaders said, wringing his hands, "things were rather worse than ever before." Seeing that there was nothing to be hoped for from either Mr. Schenck or Mr. Youngblood, the supporters of Senator Griggs in their desperation resolved to go on with a caucus without them. The caucus met in Senator Fisk's room at the Trenton House about one o'clock. Senator Gummere presided and Senator Nichols was secretary. It was a most gloomy gathering indeed. After nearly an hour's discussion, a slate was made out with Senator Griggs as the candidate for the Presidency of the Senate. He received six votes and Senator Schenck three. It was considerably after three o'clock before the Senators assembled and as late as 3:20 o'clock, Secretary Stiles, acting at the request of fellow-Republicans, hesitated to call the body to order. Senators Herring and Fisk—suggestive names—were very busy on the floor passing between the Senators and in their whisperings seemed anxious to bring about a meeting of the Senatorial caucus. They swam first toward Griggs and then sucking down under the surface of the crowd bobbed up again near Mr. Schenck's desk. They only nibbled at Senator Youngblood. When approached Senator Griggs looked very cheerless and after their earnest talk he shrugged his shoulders suggestively as if to say, "All right, if you say so, but I think it's poor policy." After the further talk with Messrs. Schenck and Youngblood word was passed to Secretary Stiles to hold on. Then a melancholy stream of Senators filed into an ante-room to caucus, Messrs. Youngblood and Schenck remaining outside. They chatted pleasantly with friends while the caucus went on.

In the caucus it was understood that several Senators favored the nomination of Mr. Schenck for President, but other counsels prevailed and Senator Griggs declined to withdraw. As soon as the caucus closed Secretary Stiles opened the session and the subsequent roll-call resulted in Senator Schenck's elevation to the Presidency showed how futile had been the efforts to induce harmonious action. Senator Carpenter, (Democrat) of Hunterdon, nominated Mr. Schenck for President, and was seconded by Mr. Youngblood. The Democratic Senators all voted for Schenck, as also did Youngblood, and he was elected President by a vote of 11 to 8.

The Democratic Assemblymen met in the Senate Chamber at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, with Hon. E. O. Chapman, of Hudson, as Chairman, and Hon. Messrs. O'Connor, of Essex, and Cannicade, of Mercer, as Secretaries. The following were the nominations made for officers of the House: Speaker, Thomas Flynn, of Passaic; Clerk, H. D. Winton, of Bergen; Assistant, C. Edwin McGrath, of Essex; Engrossing Clerk, D. S. State, of Hunterdon; Assistant, John J. Berry, of Essex; Journal Clerk, William A. Bennett, of Monmouth; Assistant, William Nash, of Essex; Reading Clerk, James E. Connelly, of Hudson; Sergeant-at-arms, James Johnson, of Passaic; Assistant, John Jamison, of Mercer; Doorkeepers, John H. Neilson, of Hudson, and Aaron P. Chambers, of Warren; Keeper of the Ladies' Gallery, Jonathan Peterson, of Middlesex; Keeper of the Gents' Gallery, Simeon Harnois, of Burlington; Bill Clerk, Frank Nichols, of Cape May; Document Clerk, Charles Pratt, of Union.

It was a quarter after ten o'clock before the Republican Assemblymen met together in the Assembly Chamber, although the hour mentioned in the call was 9:30. There was more strife over the small offices than the large ones. E. A. Armstrong, of Camden received the nomination for Speaker on the first ballot by 19 votes to 17. E. Q. Keasbey, of Essex, had withdrawn in favor of George W. Jenkins, of Morris, but this combination failed to accomplish the purpose of defeating Armstrong. Job. S. Haines, of Gloucester, had also been named for Speaker. Had he stood out, it would have left Armstrong without a majority, but instead he withdrew, and voted himself for the Camdenite. Withdrawals being in order, A. B. Dayton, of Hudson, and J. W. Newlin, of Cumberland, got out of the way for Samuel Toombs, of Essex as Clerk of the House. Enos W. Runyon, of Union, was then nominated for Engrossing Clerk, defeating D. Harris Smith, of Salem, and Assemblyman Lupton's son. J. Herbert Potts, of Hudson, was renominated for his old position as Reading Clerk over several competitors. Assistant Engrossing Clerk was next taken up. It went to J. J. Stanton, of Sussex. G. W. Colfax, of Passaic, won the fight for Sergeant-at-Arms and John Ginder was nominated as his assistant. Major Way of New Brunswick was defeated in the race.

Relief Association.

Second-hand clothing is needed for distribution among the poor at the Relief Association room, corner of Second street and Madison avenue. Garments of all kinds will be gratefully received, and donations in money are also respectfully solicited.

By order of the President.

Sunday Evening Meeting.

Although the weather was inclement, a goodly sized and appreciative audience gathered in the Reform Club Hall last Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Rodman, of Grace Episcopal Church, delivered an eloquent and deeply instructive sermon, which was listened to with marked interest. After him, Rev. Mr. Honeyman ably discoursed on the subject of temperance. Ten persons, nearly all young men, came forward and signed the pledge.

Board of Education.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held Wednesday evening of last week, President Murray in the chair. After the transaction of routine business, and the passage of a resolution requiring the Collector of taxes to furnish the Board of Education with a proper bond, the President announced the Standing Committees for the present year to be:

Teachers—Messrs. Harper and Hurlbut.
Repairs and Supplies—Messrs. Wadsworth and Harper.
Accounts—Tyler and Hurlbut.
Fuel—Hurlbut and Wadsworth.

A Real Estate Boom.

There is every reason to believe that a real estate boom of magnitude and importance is about visiting Plainfield. For months past there have been many sales and transfers of real estate in this city, indicating that capitalists and others of small means, appreciating the healthfulness and prosperity of Plainfield, were anxious and willing to invest their money in property here. This is gratifying, and evidences the fact that our fair city is destined to become rich and populous in the near future, if the administration of its affairs are but carried on in an economical and fair manner. We want no bonded debt to enthrall us, like our sister cities Elizabeth and Rahway are burdened with. That is one reason why Plainfield is prosperous. Its healthfulness and beauty is another incentive for capitalists and others to invest their money in real estate.

THE Daft Electric Light Company, whose President, Mr. Leo Daft, is a citizen that Plainfield is justly proud of claiming, is laying extra rails on the Brooklyn Bridge tracks for the purpose of making an early experiment at running cars by its system.

Appeal from the W. C. T. U.

To the Honorable, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.:

We, whose names are here subscribed, officers and members of the WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION, of Plainfield, N. J. recognizing the fearful ravages daily caused by alcoholic drinks, and recognizing something of the misery, sorrow, suffering, want and woe resulting from their use, do most respectfully petition your Honorable body to refuse to grant any and all applications that may be presented by saloons or hotels for licenses to sell or dispose of spirituous and malt liquors.

When we remember that statistics prove that over $900,000,000 are annually spent in our land for alcoholic drinks, and that a still larger amount is indirectly wasted by this dreadful traffic; that the great majority of those in our state prisons, jails, poor-houses, alms-houses, and insane asylums are its victims; that our courts, our police, detectives, sheriffs, constables and other officers are chiefly necessary because of this evil; that our highest judges declare that four-fifths of the murders and most of the crime is indirectly traceable to it; and when we remember the wives it has widowed, the children it has orphaned, the homes it has broken up, the happiness it has destroyed, and the untold sorrow it has brought upon the innocent and the helpless; and when we still further remember that nearly 100,000 yearly go down to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell—we ask if you are willing, gentlemen, to take upon yourselves the responsibility of licensing these fountains of crime, these sources of human misery, for the sake of the few dollars it will put into the treasury? (and for every dollar it puts in, it takes two out by increasing taxation, as is proved in Vineland.) Are you willing to say: "We will consent to see bodies wrecked, homes ruined and souls destroyed?"

We appeal to you as patriots to lend us your aid in destroying this fearful curse, and saving our nation from becoming a land of drunkards.

We appeal to you as citizens to help save the hundreds of reformed men—who are nobly struggling to redeem themselves—by putting temptation out of their way. Some have already fallen because of that temptation which your licenses have placed before and around them. Shall others be allowed to perish also?

We appeal to you as fathers to protect your children from that which "at last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

We appeal to you as christians to help us rescue immortal souls from eternal death, for God's word declares that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven."

From your official position you are, in a sense, your brother's keeper. We entreat of you not to suffer their blood to cry from the ground for vengeance by licensing men to deal out liquid death.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Candidates for Chief of the Fire Department are now in order.

C. W. Harden has been nominated by H. & L. Co. No. 1 as candidate for Chief.

The Town Committee and Board of Health meet on next Saturday evening at Town Rooms.

Anson Grant, son of Anson F. Grant, residing on Westfield avenue, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla, for a few months.

The Town Committee met at Town Rooms on Saturday evening, Jan. 10th, 1885. Present—Jas. L. Miller, E. Embree, Levi Cory. Luther M. Whitaker, clerk. Minutes of the last meeting, Dec. 23d, read and on motion approved. On motion the following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That a quit claim deed be made to Edward G. Brown, of Elizabeth, for release from taxes of 69 acres of land, on road district No. 2, on east side of road, past C. Westp, adjoining K. Tompkins, taxed to Peniah Miller, for the year 1883, and sold by David T. Pierson, collector, to the Inhabitants of the Township of Westfield, Sept. 4th, 1884. The certificate of tax sale recorded in Union County Clerk's office, in Book 170 of Deeds, pages 440, etc., upon the payment of $22, amount of tax, interest and costs to date. The following poor bills were on motion ordered paid: James T. Pierson, groceries, $313.34; Patrick Traynor, do, $27; E. Miller & Sons, do, $47; J. S. Irving, coal, $52.78; Wm. Schoonover, meat, $4.72; Gale's pharmacy, medicine, $12.50. Total $466.35. The following road bills were examined and on motion ordered paid: John M. Badgley, overseer District No. 6, $43.68; Chauncey B. Ripley, overseer District No. 11, $58.94. The amount of overwork done by overseer on Road District No. 11 during the past year amounting to $827.81, and as he states in his letter of the 9th inst., he cheerfully gives to the public. The clerk was instructed on motion to tender Mr. Ripley a vote of thanks for his very generous interest shown in the matter of roads during the past year. Bills of P. & R. R. Co., for crushed stone for the past year, amounting to $1,927.44, were ordered paid. On motion, bill of Joseph Cross, services as arbitrator in Fanwood special school money matter of 1878, amounting to $15, ordered paid. The following communication was received:

WESTFIELD, Jan. 10, 1885.

James L. Miller, Esq., Chairman, etc.

DEAR SIR:—Agreeable to a resolution passed by the Fire Department at a regular meeting Wednesday evening, Jan. 7th, the Town Committee will please pay the fire appropriation for the year 1884 to F. Bramer, Treasurer of the Fire Department.

F. R. PENNINGTON, President.
ISAAC SEELY, Secretary.

On motion the communication was received and placed on file, and the Treasurer was instructed to pay the fire appropriation of 1884 to F. Bramer, Treasurer, etc. On motion adjourned.

On Wednesday evening, Jan. 7, the following gentlemen were elected officers of the I. O. O. F., No. 102, Westfield, N. J.: N. G. Samuel Godschalk; V. G. David Crouch; Recording Secretary, Geo. Todd; Permanent Secretary, Walter N. Sparkman; Treasurer, Benj. J. Crosby.

On Thursday, Jan. 8, the case of B. O. Parvin, vs. the Fire Association of Philadelphia, was tried before a jury at Elizabeth. This case grew out of the fire in our town last March, at the building corner of Broad and Elm streets. Mrs. Frazee and the Company could not agree on a settlement of the loss. Suit was brought by Mr. Parvin, the mortgager. The Company contended that the house was not worth over about $1,600. The policy was for $2,000. The case took a portion of two days to try. F. Bergen, Esq., of Elizabeth, represented the plaintiff. The jury was out about fifteen minutes and rendered a verdict against the Company for the full amount of the policy and interest.

We are sorry to hear that unless the public spirited citizens of our town come to the help of the village improvement committee, financially, that the street lamps will have to be abandoned, and our residents have to grope in the dark along our streets. This should not be so. With but very little help from the people, the committee can continue their good work. The Treasurer, Mr. Decker, is ready at any time to receive contributions to the fund. We understand the committee are contemplating a series of entertainments for the benefit of the Treasury.

The overseer of Road District, No. 11, Mr. C. B. Ripley, presented his annual statement of receipts and expenditures of the road moneys on that district for the past year. It shows amount of road tax credit to district, $58.94; amount of work done on district, $886.78. Showing the sum of $827.84 spent by Mr. Ripley over and above his receipts. Mr. Ripley receipted his bill in full. If we had a few such overseers on our road districts, we would soon have good and substantial roads.

VALENTINES have again made their appearance.

TRENTON has electric lights. When is Plainfield?

"SPECIAL RUN," he calls it, on Hamburgh embroideries, at Edsall's.

ANOTHER Reform Club, we are informed, has been started in Plainfield, yet the moon gets full twice this month.

THERE are more rumors to the square inch about the erection of another rink in Plainfield, than any other city of its size can boast of.

CHAPLAIN MCCABE, it will be remembered, lectures in Music Hall, under the auspices of the G. A. R. Post, of this city, Monday evening, the 26th inst.

WHO will Mayor Rockfellow recommend for the various city offices to be filled by the new Council, is now often asked. We guess "Rocky" knows what he is doing.

IT is rumored that work is to commence at once in the construction of a large hotel on the Washington Rock site, by the New York parties purchasing it over a year ago.

THE P. V. S. will not be accompanied by an orchestra at its next concert, but will please the audience with some of the brightest and gayest of part songs dependent upon voice alone for their charm.

THIRTEEN applications for hotel and saloon licenses were presented to the Common Council last Monday evening. Should they all be granted the exchequer of the city would be benefitted to the amount of $5,700.

THERE being no quorum, owing to the absence of Commissioners Morris, Livingston and Depew, the regular January meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, was adjourned indefinitely.

THE annual entertainment arranged by the ladies of the Mission Band will, this year, be given in Music Hall. Its nature is not yet decided upon but, as usual, the talent engaged will be generally known and particularly meritorious.

THE New Brunswick Fredonian has ceased to issue tri-weekly, and now comes out once a week, brim full of news. Bro. Babcock says the tri-weekly did not pay him. The Fredonian is always a welcome guest to our editorial table.

MR. FRANCIS H. GARDNER after four years faithful service as Superintendent of the Warren Mission, resigned recently in consequence of the demands upon his time in other ways. The resignation was accepted with regret by his associates.

A NORTH PLAINFIELD young lady whose sister lies very ill, attempted to commit suicide by taking poison, last Monday evening. The cause was despondency induced through jealousy of her sister, who it is claimed robbed the other of a lover.

THE following communication explains itself: "Please state conspicuously in your paper, I am personally and positively at my New Brunswick stables Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays of each and every week. John W. Morris."

THROUGH the medium of Mr. William C. Ayers, the Central Land Improvement Company, have, within the past few weeks, disposed of $18,000 worth of property on North avenue, opposite the depot, averaging in price from $100 to $150 per running foot.

SINCE the publication of Mayor Rockfellow's message in last week's CONSTITUTIONALIST, we have heard only favorable comments on the document, for its sound ideas and suggestions. The public congratulates the new Mayor on the success of his first effort.

THE Music Hall Association contemplate giving the Plainfield public a rare treat by a course of lectures from Prof. John Fiske, on the theme—"The American Revolution," the course to consist of thirteen lectures. The price of tickets per person for the course will be only $3.

AT the meeting held last Sabbath afternoon at four o'clock, in Reform Hall, by the W. C. T. U., in response to a call from the leader, about three-fourths of the congregation arose to their feet, and consecrated themselves anew to the work in the future. The meetings are growing in interest each week, and good results are plainly manifest.

BOB BURDETTE, of the Burlington Hawkeye, or the Brooklyn Eagle, or any other paper, almost, is lecturing in Music Hall this (Thursday) evening, on the "Pilgrimage of the Funny Man." The next of the Y. M. C. A. Course will be at the same place, Thursday evening, the 29th inst., when the great and only Gough will lecture—on temperance, probably.

SINCE the erection of Day Bros. Livery Exchange on North avenue, the Central Land Improvement Company have disposed of lots adjoining to the following persons: C. M. Raybert, 20 feet; J. T. Vail, 25 feet; F. McIntyre, 35 feet; E. C. Mulford, 25 feet. It is not improbable that all the parties will shortly cause to be erected commodious buildings on the lots purchased.

MISS NELLA BROWN—or Mrs. Major Pond—whose face, form and talent have already won her a success in this city not often achieved by elocutionists, will give an evening's readings in the Park avenue Baptist church, next Thursday. This entertainment will be the second of the Y. P. A. Course, and a few reserved seats for those who have not season tickets, are still left and may be secured at Reynolds' pharmacy.

"REYNOLDS' SPECIALTIES" are being universally used throughout Plainfield by those desiring purity combined with efficacy. In another column is advertised the merits of quality, quantity and low prices of the most active and odorless disinfectant in the market. From week to week, in the same manner, will be announced to the public other distinctive preparations put up under the personal supervision of the proprietor of Reynolds' Pharmacy.

ALL sorts of rumors as false as they are base, are being circulated by some enemies of the Park House with the intention of damaging its future and its reputation. Hundreds of dollars have been and are being spent on this hotel, thoroughly refitting it in the ways of heating, plumbing and ventilating. When all the plans in process for its improvement are completed, it will be one of the most convenient and comfortable houses in the State, and under the management of its present proprietor, Mr. C. L. Johnson, no doubt will be unfulfilled.

THE President has appointed Theo. F. Littell, to be postmaster at Summit, N. J.

CHRIS. VAN ARSDALE has leased the Taylor Hotel property, near the depot, at Somerville.

THE seed house of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., is one of the largest in the country. Seeds procured of them are sure to be fresh.

CAPITALISTS are talking of buying a portion of the property on Johnston's drive, at Vail's Spring, and erecting thereat a Summer boarding house.

IN another column Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde gives the dates of the beginning of his Spring and his Summer terms for pupils in piano, harmony and guitar.

"OXYGENE," which is claimed to be a "universal coal saver," is advertised for sale by W. C. Butler, at No. 1 East Front street. Read elsewhere of its merits.

THE applications for licenses, in another column, are only half advertised. The description of the property claimed by the signing freeholder should be specified in the advertisement.

EXCURSION tickets for Montreal and the Ice Palace are sold at $13.10 from the Plainfield station by any one of three routes. By way of Troy, N. Y., Springfield, Mass., or St. Albans, Vt.

IF the person who picked up a sum of money Saturday afternoon in the cigar store of H. Eggerding on Park avenue, will return the same to this office, he will receive the thanks of the owner.

THE frame building No. 11 and 13 West Front street, occupied by Messrs. Geo. W. Force and T. J. Pruden, is to be lowered about the first of next month so that the store entrances will be on a level with the sidewalk.

AT the installation of the new officers of Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, Wednesday evening, there were present comrades from the Hoboken, Elizabeth and Rahway Posts. The Plainfielders entertained their guests in a royal manner, and sent them home to the music of the G. A. R. fife and drum corps.

LAST Sunday Father Smyth presented his annual financial statement to the congregation of St. Mary's church. The total receipts from all sources were $9,869.99 and the expenditures $9,891.82, leaving a balance of $21.83 due the Treasurer. The debt of the church had been reduced $3,700. He thanked all who had contributed for their generosity and urged those who had not to come forward and help diminish the burden still attached to their beautiful church.

THOSE who failed to attend the entertainment of "Kindergarden" at Music Hall last Wednesday evening, missed a rare treat. A small, but appreciative audience were kept in a continual roar of laughter by the performance, which was given for the benefit of the Hatters' Association of South Norwalk, Conn. Messrs. Wilford S. Bailey and James Costello are managers of the combination, which is engaged to perform "Kindergarden" thirteen nights for the above mentioned benefit. The troupe is a good one and deserved a better house, especially for the object of the entertainment.

After Four Day's Sickness.

Edward T. Low, assistant general freight agent of the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Company, died at his home in this city on Friday night last of typhoid fever. He has been connected with the Erie Road for over twenty years, and after subordinate service he was given charge of the local freight department, holding the position for many years. He was about forty-four years of age and was born in Beverly, Mass. He leaves a wife and four children. He had many friends and was an efficient officer of the Erie.

Personalia.

Mr. John L. Everitt and Miss Everitt of Front street, will spend a month in Brooklyn.

Rev. John L. Vincent will again take up his residence in Plainfield, during the coming Spring.

Thanks are extended to Senator Livingston and Assemblyman Kirkner for Legislative documents.

Assemblyman Vatterlein was unable to be in attendance at the opening of the Legislature on account of sickness.

Miss Maggie Simpson, only daughter of Councilman Simpson, was married on Thursday of this week and is now Mrs. Cadmus.

The birthday of Mr. Edw. Searing was commemorated last Friday evening by a surprise ball given him by a number of his admirers.

The many friends of ex-Collector Alfred Berry, will be pleased to learn that he is feeling somewhat better after his protracted illness.

Captain Charles E. L. B. Davis of the U. S. Engineer Corps, has been spending a few days with his father, C. S. A. Davis, Esq., of Broadway.

In the renomination of Major Anderson for State Comptroller, the Republicans have chosen a courteous gentleman and efficient officer.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., past, present and future Counsel to the Corporation, and Mrs. Marsh are among the Winter guests at the Hotel Netherwood.

Mr. O. T. Roberts of Mandan, D. T., has recently been gladdening the eyes of his scores of friends in this city, during a too brief visit in Plainfield.

Mr. Auguste Saltzman, editor of the La Croix Federale is confined to his rooms at Force's Hotel, by illness, occasioned from taking a heavy cold.

The re-election of President Coriell and City Clerk Leonard by the Council was a deserved recognition of their efficient services and many courtesies of the past, and insures the public official faithfulness for the present year, by them at least.

The friends of Senator Robert L. Livingston and Assemblyman Jacob Kirkner, of this city, will always find those officials ready to receive them at their quarters in the Trenton House, whether calling on matters pertaining to the Legislature or friendship.

The many friends of ex-Judge Enos W. Runyon, of this city, are congratulating him upon his appointment as Engrossing Clerk of the House of Assembly. No more capable person could have been given the position by the Republican majority. Our congratulations are extended to you, Judge.

E. Ambler Armstrong, the Speaker of the Republican House of Assembly, is a brother of Mr. Thomas Armstrong, manager of Reynolds' pharmacy, this city. The new Speaker is but 26 years of age, a lawyer by profession, and a resident of Camden. He has the ability to make an excellent presiding officer.

Mr. John H. DeCamp, son of Hiram H. DeCamp, and nephew of John W. Laing, Esq., of this city, has been visiting his parents at Chester, Morris, Co., and friends in this vicinity, the past few days, returning to his place of business and residence, St. Paul, Minn., on Saturday. Mr. DeCamp left this section of the country some four years since to try his fortunes in the West, and obtained employment in St. Paul, with Messrs. Hoxsie & Jaggers, wholesale grocers and commission merchants, where he is much liked. His many friends wish him continued success in business.

A Great Theatrical Treat.

Stage Manager Mattox, of the Music Hall, to whom is due entirely the good taste, cleverness and beauty of the settings of the many plays and other entertainments that have occupied the stage during the present Season, is arranging for the production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on a scale of unsurpassed thoroughness in every detail. The pick of the profession have volunteered to appear upon this occasion, in memory of past years of service with Mr. Mattox in other theatres with which he has been connected, and in return for remembered courtesies on his part. W. Davidge, Jr., of "Wallack's," will play "Marks, the lawyer," and his wife, Maggie Harrold, will play "Topsey." Further particulars and other members of the cast, we will publish later. The date will probably be the 23d of February.

The above play will be produced at Music Hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 22d. Already there is a call for reserved seats for that evening. "7-20-8" is said to be a production that is guaranteed to drive away the "blues." Among the many flattering press notices before us we extract the following from the Newark Daily Advertiser of Jan. 13th:

> Augustin Daly's play "7-20-8; or Casting the Boomerang" drew a large audience to the Park Theatre last night. The play, which abounds in comical and mirth-provoking situations, was admirably put upon the stage and the company was a good one. Miss Fisher-Meader's rendition of Mrs. Hypatia Bargiss was particularly good, and Mr. Ernest Bartram, as Prof. Gasleigh, kept the audience in the best of humor all the evening, as did Mr. John T. Raymond as Signor Tamborini. Miss Geneviev as Flossy also did some excellent acting. The piece is announced for to-night and to-morrow.

A Palatial Rink Proposed.

It really seems probable that Plainfield, which is justly proud of its possessing the most elegant and commodious Opera House in New Jersey, will soon be boasting of its magnificent new Rink. Negotiations are now pending with the intent of securing one of the most desirable and accessible locations in the city, and the erection thereon will at once begin of one of the handsomest buildings in its exterior in the State, and the most conveniently arranged and tastefully furnished in its interior of any Rink in the country. On the lot, which is a corner one, a structure of brick and iron in the Queen Ann and Renaissance styles will be put up, with a tower, arched doorways and carriage drive, stained glass windows, and of the most graceful, original, and artistic proportions. The interior will contain a skating surface 100 by 250 feet, richly carpeted dressing rooms with open fire places, commodious galleries, offices, skate and smoking rooms. The roof will be arched to allow for games of tennis, and lighted in a very thorough manner. The gentleman who proposes to embark in so extensive an enterprise, is possessed of plenty of funds and an unlimited supply of good judgment and refined taste. Further particulars we are not at liberty—just now—to disclose.

The Latest Rinkles.

In another place we describe to some extent the size and other details of an elegant Rink that we are informed, by a gentleman of abundant means, is to be built at once.

"Little Tot," in variegated costumes of satin and silk, charmed everybody Tuesday evening with her cunning ways. Her dresses were bright and appropriate to the special acts she gave.

Among the rumors of prospective rinks to be built in this city, is one that authentically locates a building for the purpose, 70 by 162 feet, on Central avenue between Third and Fourth streets.

Captain Fox will enter his polo team as members of the Northern New Jersey League, and there is no doubt, from their playing of the past, that the Casinos will finish the season very near the head of the list.

A new roller skate has been invented which bids fair to be very popular with skaters. It consists of a rubber arranged at the back end which allows the skaters to stop by pressure of the heel without danger of falling.

The Christian Advocate opposes roller rink skating. It will make nothing by fighting the popular pastime. If conducted as properly everywhere as in Plainfield there is no more harm in roller skating than in donation visits.

The Jersey City poloists appeared on the floor last Saturday with an exceptionally strong team, and fully prepared to teach the Casinos a lesson. There was a hard fight for over thirty minutes, but the Plainfield boys finally secured a goal.

One of Plainfield's boys sold a pair of shoes for 35 cents to go to the Rink, recently. But he fared better than the one that sold his collar and cuffs for the same purpose, but was not allowed to go on the floor without such articles of apparel.

A new instructor has been engaged in addition to those already at the Casino. Mr. Charles E. Frace, formerly manager of the Nyack Rink, is a skater of more than usual ability and has already proven himself a very efficient assistant to beginners.

Some unknown person posted the following notice in the gentlemen's "dressing room," recently. "The young man with a weird eye who is wont to wander backwards on his rollers, will either tumble to the fact that he makes us very, very weary, or he'll tumble on his head."

We have noticed with amusement and amazement patrons of the Rink bringing packages of candy with them in ignorance of the fact that Mr. Butler is selling, at his "Joint" in the far west corner, a particularly pure and delicate assortment of confectionery at twenty-five cents a half-pound.

If all the intentions now possessed by certain capitalists are carried out in regard to additional buildings and roller-skating facilities in this city, there is every prospect of a "Rink war" in our midst. The proprietor of the Casino will, in the event of the erection of another rink, enlarge his floor 100 feet or so, and defy all competition.

A skating ring manager is expected to be a gentleman, a policeman, a good business man, a lightning calculator, a machinist, a judge of human nature, a steam engineer, a tolerably good skater, a gallant, a good judge of music, a strong man and a popular favorite—sometimes all at once and sometimes pretty much in the order given above.

The Canary Combination proved its right to the title of Champions of the World. Livesey and his wife (nee Carrie Gilmore) are the most expert skaters that have exibited their grace and ability in this city; while Dan himself is a greater wonder than ever. His latest feat—the upside-down mount on one wheel—is beyond belief.

The Plainfield merchants complain their business has fallen off 50 per cent in consequence of the Casino Rink. What would happen should another rink be erected? Would they lose twice as much trade. We can set at rest the fears of such, and quiet the rumors started from unreliable sources, by stating the fact that there'll be but one rink in this city.

As we before have felt called upon to remark, to no one so much as to Mr. Will Furman, the genial floor manager, have the patrons of the Casino been indebted for kind attention and courtesies. Always a thorough gentleman in every particular, affable and willing at all times to assist beginners to overcome the difficulties of mastering the art of roller skating, and faithfully keeping a watchful care for the comfort of all and the preservation of good order.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Two hundred and eighteen members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union petitioned the Council to refuse any and all licenses for the sale of liquor in the city. Ref'd to License Com.

PRESENTATION OF CLAIMS.

The following, which were referred to the proper committees: Plainfield Relief Ass'n, $32.50; M. Dady, $12; E. Cole, $9; M. Van Ness, $6; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $109 20; A. D. Jennings, $15; J. Manning, $8.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reviewed in a communication, a Court case in which the city was interested, requesting instruction and authority before moving further in the matter. Ref'd to Laws Com. with power.

The bond of Treasurer Van Winkle was presented and referred to Laws Com. The Clerk reported that the sureties on the bond of Constable Kelly had erased their names, and the Council ordered its return to that officer with a notification that he do not act until a proper bond be filed.

The bond of Constable Dodd was presented and referred.

The Alms Com. reported as correct the claims in its hands. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

The Finance Com. stated that a maturing note of $5,000 had been paid by the Treasurer.

The Laws Com. reported as correct the bonds of Treasurer Van Winkle and Constable Dodd. Received and ordered placed on record.

The Salaries Com. reported as correct the claims for election services in its hands. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

On motion the Clerk was authorized to order printed cards of the Committees, and the necessary roll blanks.

On motion of Mr. Marsh the Central Times and THE CONSTITUTIONALIST were designated the official papers for the coming year.

The Finance Com. was authorized to procure tax duplicates, new books for the Collector's use and for a list of delinquent taxes, at an expense not to exceed $25.

Mr. Marsh moved that the Laws Com. be authorized to have the ordinances revised and printed, and also the Charter and laws governing the city. And that an appropriation be made of $75 towards the expense of compilation. Carried.

The Aud. Com. reported as correct the claims referred, for which warrants were ordered drawn.

It was moved by Mr. Marsh, that the License Com. be requested to report on the communication of the W. C. T. U., before reporting on the license applications referred to it. Motion lost.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

Reform Club.

At the business meeting of the Reform Club held Thursday evening, the 8th inst., the proceedings were of a varied and highly interesting character. Full written reports from last year's committees giving a detailed and satisfactory review of matters entrusted to their care, were received and read. The newly elected officers for the present year accepted their respective posts of duty, each one, with the exception of two absent, making an appropriate address. The roll is as follows:

President—John H. French.
First Vice President—Isaac Brokaw.
2d Vice President—Frances C. Harder.
3rd Vice President—George Belcher.
Recording Secretary—Albert Utter.
Financial Sec'y—Alexander Titsworth.
Treasurer—Ethan Lanphear.
First Marshall—William C. Smith.
Second Marshall—R. J. Perry.
Sergeant-at-arms—J. W. A. Banersachs.

The President nominated the following Standing Committees:

Executive Committee—William B. Maxson, H. Newton Spencer, John H. Cuthbert, H. H. Lowrie, Jacob Voehl.

Speaking Committee—Rev. W. E. Honeyman, Julian Scott, Charles R. Thairs.

Finance Committee—Louis F. Wadsworth, George F. Brown, Horace Martin.

Printing Committee—George W. F. Randolph, John H. Carney, Lemuel E. Woolston.

The following resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That to members of this Club the approaching holiday of February 22, promises two-fold interest, commemorating as it will the birth of Washington, the winner of American Independence, and being also the anniversary of the first visit to this city of [illegible] and English, those [illegible] strivers for the overthrow of alcoholic tyranny, the Executive Committee are hereby requested to consider the propriety of preparing special and suitable exercises for that occasion, and to make report at the next business meeting of the Club.

ONE OF PLAINFIELD'S INDUSTRIES

THE SCOTT FOUNDRY AND MACHINE WORKS.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE BUILDINGS!

This extensive manufactory is situated on South avenue, between Richmond and Berckman streets, and adjacent to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in the City of Plainfield. Numbers of our readers, while passing on the cars, will have watched the rapid progress made in erecting the several buildings since May last, but they can have no adequate idea of the extent, solidity and thoroughness of the establishment, unless they should personally spend a day in making an inspection of it. Mr. Scott, before locating his works, visited all the principal places suitable for an iron working concern within twenty-five miles of New York, and finally, after due deliberation, selected Plainfield as the most desirable place. In making this selection he was influenced by the following facts: 1st—Plainfield is directly connected with the great coal regions; 2d—It is in near proximity to the iron district of Pennsylvania; 3d—Its through railroad connections; 4th—Its lying within easy reach of New York and Philadelphia, the great shipping ports; 5th—Last, but not least, because of the pleasant and healthful place of residence for himself and workmen. The works are connected with the Central Railroad by a siding, and one thousand seven hundred feet of rails are laid through the yards to the various buildings. Opposite the works the Central Railroad is elevated twelve feet. Mr. Scott has taken advantage of this circumstance by making a large embankment opposite the foundry on the same level, and also level with the charging floor of the cupola. On this embankment is stored all coal and iron used in the foundry. The rails then run over one hundred and fifty feet of trestle work, where the steam and smiths' coal is dumped. This dump will hold about one thousand five hundred tons of coal. There are also one thousand eight hundred feet of narrow guage railroad connected by turn-tables, leading through the buildings and yards, to convey materials to the proper places during process of manufacture. The main building is 350 x 60 feet, two stories; tool room, 40 x 15 feet, two stories; smith shops, 80 x 30 feet; engine room, 45 x 30 feet; boiler room, 30 x 30 feet; foundry, 120 x 70 feet; and other buildings, equal to fifty-seven thousand square feet of floor. The ceilings are high: First floor—15 feet; second floor—12½ feet. There are monitors, with windows and ventilators on the roofs. The windows are numerous and high, so as to send the light into the centre of the buildings. The timbers are heavy and the walls strong. The first floor is two inches thick, laid on joists, bedded in concrete eight inches deep. Where large tools stand the concrete is thirty-six inches deep; the second floor is double and two and one-half inches thick, with paper between to keep dirt from falling through. There are about twelve thousand feet of one and one-quarter inch steam pipes used to heat the rooms; some of these are placed above the windows and some below, as most convenient for proper circulation. These pipes are connected so that either live or exhaust steam can be used. A tower is run up in which are placed vaults connecting with the tool rooms, for the storage of standard gauges and select tools or templates. On top of the tower, above the level of the roofs, is placed an iron tank ten feet square. The tank is supplied with water by one of the several steam pumps from a large well, by means of iron pipes two and one-half inch diameter. On the pipe, at convenient locations, are placed valves, which connect with one hundred and fifty feet of hose at each place. There is also a hose room underneath the tank, so that water can be thrown from the roof. A powerful fire pump is also connected to three pipes. We also notice a liberal supply of Harden's hand grenades placed on the walls. The different grades of oil used are kept in covered tanks and every precaution seems to be taken to prevent and to extinguish fire. The buildings are beautifully lighted up by arc electric lights. During our visit to the foundry the molten metal was being poured into the moulds. This is a very pretty sight. The melted iron runs out of the cupola into huge ladles, constructed with gearing so that they can be tipped over in order to pour out the metal. A monster crane, which runs on rails twenty feet overhead, picks up the ladle with four tons of iron in it, and takes it to the mould. This crane is a wonder in itself. It is capable of raising ten tons and placing it anywhere in the whole length of the building. It is operated by a man who sits in a cage and travels with it. By pulling levers he can run up or down, along, across, any or all of them at one time and at two speeds. The power is supplied from the machine shop by means of a wire rope. The crane is operated by a cotton rope, which runs at a speed of one mile per minute. The motive power used is a 100 horse power engine of the Corliss style, the foundation of which contains 24,500 brick, laid in cement. The fly wheel of the engine weighs six tons. The belt wheel is twelve feet in diameter and thirty inches wide. The engine is supplied with steam by a large steel tubular boiler, the chimney to which is 100 feet high, with 42-inch flue. The cap is of cast-iron, 9 feet wide, and weighs 2,400 pounds. It is conceded to be the handsomest chimney in the State. There are upwards of one thousand three hundred feet of line shafting, from two inches to four and one-half inches in diameter. The journal boxes are all self-oiling, which require to be oiled once in a year. There are numerous counter shafts and hundreds of belt pulleys, ranging in size from six inches to seventy-two inches in diameter, and thirty inch face. All the pulleys and one line shafts are split in halves so that they can be changed or removed at any time without taking down part of the shaft. The machine shop is equipped with the latest improved tools. The planers, ranging in size from 26 inches wide by six feet long, to eighty-four inches wide by sixteen feet long, are placed on one side of the room. On the other side are placed the large lathes from twenty-six inch to seventy-two inch swing, and boring, turning mills, etc. These large tools project or are placed underneath an overhead traveling crane, so that the pieces to be operated upon by them can be lifted from the tramway and placed into the tools. We notice that the planers up to thirty-six inches return four to one and from thirty-six inches to eighty-four inches three to one; also that the feeds are very coarse, the forty-eight inch taking a finishing cut with one inch feed and the eighty-four with two and one-half inches, cutting twenty-two feet per minute. The eighty-four inch planer has four heads, which can be operated at one time, is automatic in all its movements and weighs twenty-seven tons. There are many special tools and appliances, some of which are very ingenious, and generally automatic in their operations. We will not attempt to describe them, as no description, however good, could convey a correct idea of their various workings. There are two machines which we cannot overlook; they are the automatic gear and rack cutters. The gear cutter will cut a gear fifty-two inches in diameter with any number of teeth. The rack cutter will cut a rack ten feet long, with any size tooth. These machines are entirely automatic and only require a boy to put in a new blank when the other is finished. The pattern making department is fully equipped with tools suitable for the work. We saw the various kinds of saws, planers, lathes, etc. The smith shop is well and conveniently arranged. The smoke from all the fires is led into the main chimney. At one end there is a steam hammer, capable of striking a blow of four thousand pounds. We notice already 16 printing machines in process of construction. At every turn one can discern a complete system, not only in the arrangements but in the methods of working. On every side there is a reminder that he who originated and controls the establishment is thoroughly practical in every detail. After our long journey through the buildings we finally brought up at the offices. They are situated at the south-west end. The business offices are on the lower floor and the drawing room directly above, on the upper floor. We found the proprietor of the establishment, Mr. Walter Scott, closeted in his private office, which is tastefully arranged and the floor laid with an elegant Brussels carpet; in fact, fitted up as an office should be, where so much originality and multiplicity of invention are produced. Mr. Scott was busily engaged with drawings and designs which, to those unskilled in the art, looked bewildering. We did not find him a morose, sullen, harping individual, like some inventors, who get one idea and take a lifetime to endeavor to perfect it. On the contrary, he seems to be of a very cheerful and happy disposition, willing to give and take a joke like any other good fellow. Now that Mr. Scott has got this establishment running, he is placing some of the burden and responsibility on other shoulders. The following skilled and able gentlemen have charge of the several departments:—office, David S. Pope; drawing room, John H. Morris; pattern making, William Cross; foundry, William R. Northup; machinists, Alonzo Weseman. The contractors for buildings were our townsmen, I. W. Pangborn, mason; John Chandler, carpenter; G. J. Holbrook, roofer; J. F. Hubbard, superintendent of construction. For technical terms and figures given above we are indebted to Mr. Weseman, superintendent.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

The Chemist of the New York State Agricultural Society Finds Ammonia in the Royal Baking Powder, and Says:

"Ammonia is used in a baking powder to make the powder cost less. I have always been opposed to its employment, considering that it is not a constituent of pure baking powders. I would not use such an article nor recommend it."

And adds: "The results of a complete analysis of several packages of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, purchased by myself of grocers, confirm the fact that it is made of pure and healthful materials, well manufactured, and is in every particular reliable and most wholesome. Having had the examination of the materials used in manufacturing the Cleveland Powder for many years, it affords me pleasure to recommend it without reserve."

Ayer's Hair Vigor improves the beauty of the hair and promotes its growth. It imparts an attractive appearance, a delightful and lasting perfume. While it stimulates the roots, cleanses the scalp, and adds elegance to luxuriance, its effects are enduring; and thus it proves itself to be the best and cheapest article for toilet use.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents per bottle. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

WASHED-OUT HAIR.

There is a sort of pallid, chalky complexion which the novelists call a "washed-out complexion." It is ghastly enough, and no mistake. Washed-out, faded, discolored, or particolored hair is almost as repulsive and melancholy. Parker's Hair Balsam will restore your hair to its original color, whatever it was: brown, auburn or black. Why wear snow on your head, when you may easily have lively, shining hair.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

The editor frequently has to fight for his writes.

TWO DANGEROUS SEASONS.

Spring and fall are times when so many people get sick. The changes in the weather are severe on feeble persons, and even those naturally strong are apt, as they say, "to be feeling miserable." Then they are just in condition to be struck down with some kind of fever. A bottle or two of Parker's Tonic will invigorate the digestion, put the liver, kidneys and blood in perfect order, and prevent more serious attacks. Why suffer, and perhaps die, when so simple a medicine will save you? Good for both sexes and all ages.

"I must shake off this bad habit," said a tramp as he gazed at his tattered coat.

A RUNAWAY.

BY M. G. S.

"Your Aunt Carleton and Cousin Jennie will be here on the next train, Russell," said Mr. Wilder to his nephew. "You had better take the pony chaise and bring them from the depot."

"Can't. Am going away myself, sir."

"The deuce you are!" responded the old gentleman, pushing his spectacles up over his forehead and regarding his nephew with an air of surprised consternation.

"Yes, sir. Charley Hunt invited me out to his place for a few weeks, and I thought that I might as well go now as any time."

"I should say that it was a very strange time to be leaving home; your aunt and cousin will consider it as a personal affront, sir!"

"It is not intended as such, sir. Though to be frank, considering the object of Cousin Jennie's visit, I prefer not to see her. And I must say that I think she would have shown more sense and delicacy if she had stayed away."

"Your cousin is a very lovely girl, Sir Impudence, and won't be likely to go a-begging."

"I don't doubt it in the least. But for all that, she won't suit me for a wife, uncle."

"How do you know that, you conceited young donkey! when you have never seen her?" inquired the irate old man, bringing his cane down upon the floor with startling emphasis.

"Common-sense teaches us that no marriage can be a happy one that does not spring from mutual love. And on one thing I am resolved—that I will never marry from mercenary motives."

"Nobody wants you to marry the girl unless you like her!" roared Mr. Wilder, his face growing purple with rage and vexation at his nephew's perversity. "All I ask is that you will stay and see her. And this is a point I insist upon—yes, sir, I insist upon it!"

"I am sorry to disoblige you, uncle; but if I should stay, it will only give rise to conclusions that I am anxious to avoid. But I will tell you what I will do; I will relinquish all claim to the property that you are so anxious should not be divided. As that seems to be the main object, I think that it ought to be satisfactory to all parties."

A few minutes later Russell passed by the window, valise in hand.

He nodded good-humoredly to his uncle as he glanced in, who glared after him in speechless rage.

"He shan't have a penny—not a penny!" he growled, as, sinking back in his chair, he wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"What's the matter now?" said the gentle voice of his wife Polly, who had just entered the room.

"Matter enough, I should say. Russell has gone—actually cleared out so as not to see his cousin. What d'ye think of that?"

"I think you'll have another attack of the gout if you get yourself excited," said the good lady, as she placidly resumed her knitting.

"What's to be done now?"

"Nothing that I can see. If Russell and Jennie had seen each other before they had any notion that you wanted them to marry, ten to one but what they would have fallen head and ears in love with each other; but as matters are now I don't believe it would be of the least use. From what Ellen writes me I should think Jennie to be as much opposed to it as Russell. She says that she can't bear to hear his name mentioned, and that it was as much as she could do to get her to consent to come at all when she heard that Russell was at home."

"They are a couple of simpletons," said the old gentleman, testily. "I've got half a mind to make another will and leave my property to some charitable institution."

In going to Dighton, whither he was bound, Russell Wilder had to travel part of the way by stage.

There was only one passenger beside himself, for which he was not sorry, the day being very hot and sultry.

This passenger was a lady—there was an unmistakable air of ladyhood about her which told him that. He noticed particularly the daintily gloved hands and well-fitting boots.

Her graceful form indicated that she was both young and pretty, but he could not see her face on account of the envious veil that hid it.

But as soon as she got comfortably settled in the corner, to which Russell gallantly assisted her, she threw it back, disclosing a fair, sweet face, lighted up by a pair of wondrously bright black eyes, which shot a swift bewildering glance into those that were so intently regarding her.

The sudden starting of the coach, which sent some of the lady's parcels from the seat to the floor, gave Russell an opportunity of speaking, as he returned them, of which he was not slow to take advantage.

From this they fell easily into conversation, and it was curious how sociable they became.

They talked of the beautiful scenery through which they were passing; of the newest books and latest magazines, some of which Russell had with him.

The lady inwardly thought her companion to be the most entertaining and agreeable man she ever met with. And as for Russell, he often lost the thread of his discourse in admiring the red dimpled and the pearly teeth disclosed whenever she spoke or smiled.

Certain it is that his four hours' ride from P—— to Dighton were the shortest four hours he had ever known in his life.

"Where do you want to be left, sir?" inquired the coachman, as they entered the village.

"At Mr. Charles Hunt's, Locust Hill. Do you know where that is?" said Russell, putting his head out of the window.

"Certainly, sir; take you there in a jiffy!"

"Why, there's where I'm going," said the lady, opening her eyes widely. "Nellie, Mr. Hunt's wife, is my most particular friend; we used to go to school together."

"And Charlie Hunt is my most particular friend, and one of the finest fellows in the world."

"How very odd!"

"How very fortunate!" exclaimed Russell, with a meaning glance at his fair companion, which made the rosy cheeks still more rosy. "Might I take the liberty of inquiring——"

But just at this moment the stage stopped in front of the house on the portico of which stood Mr. and Mrs. Hunt, enjoying the evening breeze.

In a moment Russell was shaking hands with the former, while his companion rushed eagerly into the arms of his surprised and delighted wife.

"Why, what a happy surprise, Jennie!" she said, after spiriting her visitor off to her own room; "I had given up all idea of seeing you this summer."

"And I had no idea of being able to come until just before I started. You see, mamma—my step-mamma, you know—was going to Uncle Wilder's, and she insisted on my going with her to see the hateful, disagreeable prig of a cousin of mine that they are determined to marry me to. So when mamma was busy packing I just put on my things and slipped off, leaving them a note to tell where I was going. Wasn't that a good joke on them all?"

"I should think it was," said Nellie, with a burst of merriment, far more than the occasion warranted. "When I saw who your companion was I thought you were out on your wedding tour."

"No, indeed; never saw the man until he got into the stage at P——. But really he is the finest-looking man I ever saw, and so agreeable. Who is he?"

"Oh, I'll introduce you when you come down stairs. There's Sarah wanting to see me about supper. You'll have only time to dress. Mind and look your prettiest."

And with a roguish shake of her finger at her friend, Nellie ran away to see about supper.

If Jennie did not "look her prettiest" she certainly looked very lovely as she entered the supper room, her linen suit exchanged for a fresh, soft muslin, whose simplicity and purity were relieved only by the violet-colored ribbons in the hair and throat.

Russell had also taken great pains with his toilet, as could be seen by his spotless linen and carefully arranged hair.

The pause that followed Jennie's entrance was broken by Mr. Hunt, who, in response to a meaning glance from his wife, said:

"Russell, allow me to introduce you to your cousin Jennie; Miss Carleton, your cousin, Russell Wilder."

The embarrassment which followed the blank astonishment into which this announcement threw the parties, so unexpectedly made known to each other, was quickly dispelled by the turn that was given it by their host and hostess.

"I suppose you'll want to book yourself for the next stage?" said Mr. Hunt, slyly, to Russell, who had been taken into his friend's confidence.

"And you," said his wife, turning to Jennie, "I don't suppose anything could tempt you to remain, now that you are to have that hateful, disagreeable ——"

"Nellie!" interrupted Jennie, crimsoning, as she remembered her words.

"Well, I won't then. But you must let me laugh! Just to think of you both running away from each other and running in the same direction and to the same place!"

The ringing laugh that burst from Nellie's lips was too contagious to be resisted even by those at whose expense it was raised.

This merriment was followed by a general good feeling, and a pleasanter tea-party never gathered around the social board.

We need hardly say that Russell did not take the stage the next morning, nor did Jennie seem at all disposed to cut short her visit on account of her cousin's unexpected appearance.

When they did go, they went as they came, together.

Mr. Wilder's astonishment was only equaled by his delight, on looking out of the window to see the two walking up the path toward the house, arm in arm, and apparently on the best of terms.

As for Russell and Jennie they seemed to regard this unexpected meeting as an indication of "manifest destiny," accepting it as such, much to the joy of their uncle, whose darling wish was accomplished in the marriage of the two, thus made happy in spite of themselves.

RED BANK'S NEW WATER WORKS.

The system of water works which has been building in Red Bank for several months is completed, and the firemen were ordered out recently to test the works. The trial was satisfactory, water being thrown to the top of a three-story building with the reservoir only about half filled. The well, which has a capacity of 250,000 gallons, is in the west part of the town, while the reservoir, holding 800,000 gallons, is a mile east on Borden's hill, 145 feet above tidewater, and 120 feet above the main level of the town. The total cost of the works was about $45,000. About three miles of pipe were laid, and the business and thickly settled residence districts of the town are now well protected. In the Spring the system will be extended through all the principal streets. The town has been bonded for the cost of the water works, and the bonds, which pay 5 per cent., are selling as fast as the money is needed. During the past five years there have been losses from fire in Red Bank amounting to over $1,000,000, much of which might have been prevented had there been an adequate supply of water.

CHLORAL AND BROMIDE OF POTASSIUM.

Again we have to record with deep regret a sad proof that those who give or take chloral or bromide of potassium for sleeplessness are guilty of a deplorable error and do a grievous wrong, says the London Lancet. The narcotics which poison sleep almost deprave the higher nerve centers, enfeeble the controlling powers of the will and leave the mind a prey to the depressing influence of a conscious loss of self-respect and self-confidence. The cultured mind feels the ignominy of the intellectual and moral depreciation with great acuteness, and in the end succumbs to the sense of powerlessness to recover self-control and do right. The deprivation wrought is purely physical. The baneful influence of the lethal drug is, so to say, organic. The essential elements of the nerve tissues are blighted by the stupefying poison, as by alcohol in habitual drunkenness. In short, the resource to chloral and bromide is precisely the same thing as recourse to alcohol. The man or woman sent to "sleep"—the mocking semblance of physiological rest—by a dose of either of these narcotizers is simply intoxicated. No wonder that habitual drunkenness of this class first impairs and then destroys the vitality of the mind organ, and places the subject of a miserable artifice at the mercy of his emotional nature, and makes him the creature of his passions. When will the public awake to the recognition of facts with regard to these most pernicious of stupefacients? Persistence in recourse to them has no better excuse than unwillingness to search out the cause of the "wakefulness" which prevents natural sleep.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

With the new volume, beginning in December, Harper's Magazine will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine-making. In a word, the Magazine becomes more and more the faithful mirror of current life and movement. Leading features in the attractive programme for 1885 are: new serial novels by Constance Fenimore Woolson and W. D. Howells; a new novel entitled "At the Red Glove;" descriptive illustrated papers by F. D. Millet, R. Swain Gifford, E. A. Abbey, H. Gibson, and others; Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," illustrated by Abbey; important papers on Art, Science, etc.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

ATTRACTIONS FOR 1884-5.

No printed periodical can take the place of parent, pastor, or school-teacher; but a good magazine can supplement their work and influence to a wonderful degree. In view of this, it is not extravagant to say that—instead of "Can we afford to take ST. NICHOLAS?"—the question of every earnest household in English-speaking countries, to-day, should be "Can we afford not to take ST. NICHOLAS?"

has grown familiar to hundreds of thousands of young readers; and their interest and intelligent enjoyment have constantly inspired the editor and publishers to fresh effort. To-day its strength is in its wholesome growth, its sympathy with young life, its hearty recognition of the movement of events, and its steadily increasing literary and pictorial resources. The following are some of the good things already secured for future numbers of ST. NICHOLAS:

"His One Fault," a serial story for boys, by the popular author, J. T. Trowbridge.

"Historic Girls," a companion series to "Historic Boys." By E. S. Brooks.

"Ready for Business"; suggestions to boys about to choose an occupation,—based on personal interviews with prominent representatives of various trades and professions. By G. J. Manson.

"Driven Back to Eden," a serial. By E. P. Roe.

"Talks for Young Folks," a series of papers, by H. H. (Helen Jackson).

"Among the Law-makers"; recollections of a boy-page in the U. S. Senate,—containing much political information, both instructive and amusing. By Edmund Alton.

"Davy and the Goblin," a very funny serial story by a new writer, Chas. Carryl.

Short stories by Louisa M. Alcott.

"The Progress of Invention"; "From Palanquin to Parliament," "From Cross-bow to 100-ton Gun," etc. Descriptive papers, by Chas. E. Bolton.

"Art Work for Young Folks"; papers on decorative handicraft, by Chas. G. Leland.

"Sheep or Silver?" a story of Texan life, by the late Rev. William M. Baker.

"A Garden of Girls," being six short stories for girls, by Six Leading Writers.

"Tales of Two Continents"; stories of adventure, by H. H. Boyesen.

The Illustrations will be the work of the very best artists and engravers,—and there will be plenty of them. In the November and December numbers are beautiful

COLORED FRONTISPIECES.

Buy the November number for the children. It costs only 25 cents, and all book and news-dealers sell it. The subscription price is $3 a year, and now is just the time to subscribe.

A free specimen copy of ST. NICHOLAS will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

THE CENTURY CO. NEW YORK, N. Y.

THE CENTURY

In 1885.

A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

PAPERS ON THE CIVIL WAR.

The important feature of The Century Magazine for the coming year—indeed, perhaps the most important ever undertaken by the magazine—will be a series of separate papers on the great battles of the War for the Union, written by general officers high in command upon both the Federal and Confederate sides—General Grant, who writes of Vicksburg, Shiloh, and other battles; Generals Longstreet, McClellan, Beauregard, Rosecrans, Hill, Admiral Porter, and others. The series opens in the November Century with a graphically illustrated article on

THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN,

Written by the Confederate general, G. T. Beauregard. Brief sketches, entitled "Recollections of a Private," papers chronicling special events, descriptions of various auxiliary branches of the service, etc., will supplement the more important series by the various generals.

A strict regard for accuracy will guide the preparation of the illustrations, for which The Century has at its disposal a very large quantity of photographs, drawings, portraits, maps, plans, etc., hitherto unused. The aim is to present in this series, not official reports, but commanding officers' accounts of their plans and operations—interesting personal experiences which will record leading events of the war, and possess, at the same time, a historical value not easily to be calculated.

FICTION.

In this line The Century will maintain its prestige, and furnish the best stories by American writers that can be procured. In November begins

A NEW NOVEL BY W. D. HOWELLS,

author of "Venetian Days," "A Modern Instance," etc. This story deals with the rise of an American business man. A novel by Henry James, a novelette by Grace Denio Litchfield, and short stories by "Uncle Remus," Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, H. H., Julian Hawthorne, and other equally well-known writers will appear at various times.

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

Under this heading may be included a series of papers on the Cities of Italy by W. D. Howells, the illustrations being reproductions of etchings and drawings by Joseph Pennell; a series on being an interesting group of papers by E. V. Smalley, Lieut. Schwatka, Principal Grant (of Kingston, Ontario), and others, descriptive of little-known regions; papers on French and American art—sculpture and painting, with some exquisite illustrations; papers on the first being by Professor Langley and others. Under Architecture are included more of Mrs. Van Rensselaer's articles on Churches, City and Country Houses, etc. Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., will describe

THE NEW NORTHWEST,

ASTRONOMY, ARCHITECTURE & HISTORY,

PROGRESS IN SANITARY DRAINING;

E. C. Stedman, Edmund Gosse and others will furnish literary essays; George W. Cable will contribute in various ways; several papers on sport and adventure will soon be published, and will write from time to time on outdoor subjects.

Readers of The Century may feel sure of keeping abreast of the times, on leading subjects that may properly come within the province of a monthly magazine. Its circulation is now about 140,000 monthly, the November number exceeding that figure. Subscriptions should date from this number, beginning the War Series and Mr. Howell's novel. Price $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. All book-sellers and news-dealers sell it and take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to the publishers.

A free specimen of The Century will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

What gives our Children rosy cheeks,
What cures their fevers, makes them sleep;
Castoria.
When Babies fret, and cry by turns,
What cures their colic, kills their worms,
Castoria.
What quickly cures Constipation,
Sour Stomach, Colds, Indigestion;
Castoria.
Farewell then to Morphine Syrups,
Castor Oil and Paregoric, and Hail Castoria!

"Castoria is so well adapted to Children that I recommend it as superior to any medicine known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M.D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier that can be used. It invariably expels all blood poisons from the system, enriches and renews the blood, and restores its vitalizing power. It is the best known remedy for Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin, as also for all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood, such as Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, and Scrofulous Catarrh.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

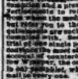
Gray's Specific Medicine.



TRADE MARK The Great English Remedy. An unfailing cure for loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to Insanity or Consumption and a premature grave. TRADE MARK

BEFORE TAKING. AFTER TAKING.

Beware of advertisements to refund money, when druggists from whom the medicine is bought do not refund, but refer you to the manufacturers, and the requirements are such that they are seldom, if ever, complied with. See their written guarantee. A trial of one single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most skeptical of its real merits. On account of counterfeits, we have adopted the Yellow Wrapper, the only genuine. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to every one. The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or six packages for $5, or will be sent free by mail on receipt of the money by addressing

POETRY

THE CLICKING OF THE GATE.

As the twilight shadows gather
And the evening shades draw nigh,
When we're waiting for some loved one,
Ah! how slow time seems to fly;
And the shadows gather deeper
While we sit and doze and wait
For the ever-welcome clicking
Of the latch upon the gate.

We've, perchance, a much-loved sister
Or a brother gone astray,
Who, beguiled by love and flattery,
Falled and stumbled on the way—
Gone to wreck a much loved father,
Led on by relentless fate,
Yet we listen for his footsteps
And the clicking of the gate.

And we sit and dream and muse,
Passing the hours away,
Whether filled with joy or sorrow,
Time will never stop or stay.
When the midnight hour is striking,
And our loved one's coming late,
Oh! how eagerly we listen
For the clicking of the gate.

* * * * * *

And through all we're ever listening,
Be it early, be it late,
For our loved one's welcome footsteps
And the clicking of the gate.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A THREE-VOLUME NOVEL.

VOL. I.

She stands in the gloamin', the fair spring gloamin' that lazily and lightly dallies with the night. There is an air of luxury in her surroundings; the appointments are those of a luxurious boudoir. Against it all she stands, a simple-looking figure in a flowered cotton gown. She has delicate features, and the head is glorified by a crown of ruddy gold hair knotted on high. Her hat is thrown down on a satin chair, likewise her cloak, seemingly a garment of simplest shape; without any "seeming" at all, it is of the roughest and cheapest brown material.

The clothes are nothing; that lightly poised head of hers, like a flower on its delicate stem, claims and makes good the fit union of her simplicity and the wealth of luxury.

She is Patience Luttrell, the daughter of a Cornish curate, and she has just arrived on a visit to her uncle, Sir Titus Luttrell of Olney Chase and of Park Lane. Here she is in Park Lane, and she is vaguely wondering at the irregularity of family arrangements which sets one brother on high and lets the other settle down in a valley of existence where one is made to learn too sharply the value of what is called the "current" coin of the realm.

"Current!" thinks Patience; there has not been much flowing of luxury along the streams of her life.

A tap at the door, and the maid enters.

"My lady has sent me, Miss, to ask if I can help you dress or unpack."

Patience flushes a little; not for worlds would she have a maid dive into the treasures of her box.

"Thank you, no," she says, however, with a quiet dignity. "I am accustomed to do all for myself. Stay, though," she changes; "the strap is so tight that I ask you to help me with that."

She wants to ask this maid who is in the house. Is she only to see her uncle and aunt?—her aunt has already welcomed her—or are the girls, Annabel and Marcia, at home? Her cousin Titus, too—what of him? But dare she? What are the laws between mistress and maid here in Park Lane? Do they differ from those of Cornwall?

The maid settles the difficulty.

"I can quite easy help you, miss; my young ladies do not require me for half an hour."

Difficulty the second: Patience rebels at any touch of this very polite maid, beyond the unstrapping of her box.

She is at the end of a long passage, and suddenly she hears a soft whistle coming along. It grows louder, and it declares itself to be of the "very susceptible Chancellor" song out of "Iolanthe."

"Titus is at home," thinks Patience. He is the only boy of the house, but he is twenty-three.

The maid has at last found strength enough to undo the very tight strap, and pants with a red face.

At the same time the door is burst open, and a short girl, all a sheen of creamy Surah silk, with a hat all rose-tinted feathers, runs in. Behind her is a taller copy of herself, so far as dress goes; but this is Marcia the fair, while Annabel is brown as a gypsy.

"And to think we should be out when you arrived. Stupid Lady Radleigh and her garden party!" cried the first girl. "And you are Patience Luttrell, after all, and, after all, not a Quakeress, which you ought to be with that sort of name. I must kiss you; you are lovely."

Patience laughed.

"You are too explosive, Nan," reproves Marcia.

"Not at all, my divinity. I call her that because she suggests Mars—fancy the depth of my wit!" This is for Patience's benefit. "Not at all, I repeat. I don't say she's lovely for beauty, because she is like you, a Luttrell, but simply from the get-up of her. You are a picture, Patience."

"Am I?" and Patience looks at herself in the long glass of her wardrobe, but sees only what she is accustomed to seeing.

"Never alter yourself, my dear, and you'll have crowds of eligibles and ineligibles at your feet in a week."

"Dear!" and the girl laughs; "I shall run home then."

"Who have you seen?"

"Aunt Anne."

"No one else?"

"No."

"Then you have a trial for your nerves. First in papa, who is buckram, and then in the younger Titus, who is flabbiness personified."

Patience naturally laughs. She is a girl who can laugh—who, in fact has never—malgre poverty—had anything in her life to prevent her laughing.

"Is it not a bad sign when one disparages one's relation?" says Marcia, in a soft languor.

"I never dispute any of your aphorisms, Mam, dear, but Ti is flabby. You look healthily sensible, my ravishing coz, or I would advise you for your good."

"I can be foolish."

Patience lightly adopts the tone of her surroundings.

"Don't fall a victim, then, to the charms of flabbiness, because his effete majesty is booked."

"I never learned Greek," says Patience, demurely.

"No! Then I translate. He is engaged to Lady Ellice St. Leger—that's all."

Patience is offended. Why, she scarcely knows; but, still, she is offended, and the Luttrell dignity causes her fair and striking head to lift a little.

"Now I'll go. Come, Mars!" dashes Annabel. "Patience, I downright respect you for being angry, but— Forgive me, there's a love!" And the bewitching Annabel makes a melancholy face and puts up her rosy lips to be kissed.

She goes out of the room whistling again the tune of the "very susceptible Chancellor."

VOL. II.

Patience Luttrell's nerves stand the ordeal of both "buckram" and "flabbiness." Both her stately uncle and her languid cousin, too, are following in Annabel's wake of admiration. Is not Patience, in her utter simplicity, such a contrast to the generality of girls.

Again, she wears only a cotton gown—white, because it is evening, and her decorations are a loosely-knotted sash of dull old-gold satin, while on her breast hangs a quaint Indian jewel her mother has left her. That, too, is dull and tawny, though of rare workmanship. So her striking qualities, if she have any, must be innate, and not the effect of clothes.

She is a mixture of girlish fun and of womanly dignity. She is not shy, and she has a natural tact by which she divines the right thing to say to the right person.

Days go on, and she sees "the world." That is what she has come all the way from Cornwall to see. Lady Luttrell carries her wherever her own daughters go, and——. Well, it is foolish to dally over a simple fact: Patience becomes the star, and outshines her cousins.

Marcia does not care—she has a consolation of her own—but Nan flashes out words sometimes which a young maiden of decorous manners should not use.

The climax comes one day when Patience receives attention from a gentleman who, before she came, was devoted to Annabel. It is like fire to tow; Nan says too much.

Whereat Patience retires to her room, and by-and-by, instead of appearing dressed for a ball, shows herself in herself in her morning-gown, and her boxes are seen to be closed and strapped.

"Is aunt in her room?" she asks of a maid. "And will you have a cab here for me at seven in the morning."

The maid is aghast; also Nan, who stands in her doorway, is aghast and speechless as Patience sails by sternly on her way to see Lady Luttrell.

Lady Luttrell is indignant, then she laughs, then she falls to weeping, as naught else will avail against the injured pride of her neice.

Tears succeed, for what further resource was to be found Lady Luttrell does not know—she only knows she can have no scene. Is not the ball specially given by her for Patience? She is a veritable match-maker, and she sees her way to curing Patience's "starring" by a grand coup. There is a minor canon within reach of her toils, singeing his wings in the pure light of Patience Luttrell's sweet, fair dignity. That canon shall end all rivalries.

The girl's generous heart fails, indignation and pride succumb, and she returns to her room to dress. The best evening dress is at the top of her box, and she is not many minutes donning it. It is of India muslin—silken robes she has never worn—and this dress, with its soft ruffling of laces, is the most extravagant garb she has ever possessed; it is Lady Luttrell's gift. Not even the old Indian jewel will she unpack. She shakes her radiant hair into fit order, (disorder) and walks down-stairs.

Guests are arriving, music is sounding, the scent of faint perfumes steals up to her on the stairs; the fresher, purer breath of flowers comes up and makes her think of the dear old Cornish home, where the sea dashes blue against the rocks. She will be there to-morrow.

How glad——No, suddenly and truly a lump comes up in her throat and gives the lie to that first thought.

A man comes to her with the imperturbability of a perfect servant: "For Miss Patience Luttrell, miss." With this he puts in her hand a bouquet of roses. From blush to crimson, from crimson to blush again, there they are in her hands, flashing warm color over her soft whiteness.

"Unexpected—eh?" says a high, thin voice at her elbow as Patience moves along and becomes one of the throng.

Patience's face is buried in the mass of sweetness; she does not answer. Why does she not? Why does she not show her face?

"Ah, yes, Miss Patience!" and the high voice rings on cold and cutting. This is Lady Luttrell. Titus Luttrell's fiancee, and Titus is leading her across the landing from one room to another. "Now tell the secret!" and she makes a dead stop in front of the girl.

All the color has gone out of her cheeks as Patience lifts her face.

"Do not answer any impertinent questions, Patience," says Titus, in his languid way. He is by no means a languid person in truth, but covers what originally may be in him by the stereotyped manner that hundreds of young men love. "Take my advice," he ends, without the languor.

The girl's spirit has risen rampant against the cold, thin voice of Lady Ellice; she is equal to most calls upon her, and she might have flashed a retort which would have been magnetic, but she catches a tone, or sees a look of her cousin, which turns angry into gay defiance.

"Impertinent—no; but I answer a pertinent question like Lady Ellice's. It is really quite unexpected! I think I shall go round the room asking, 'Who is the owner of this pretty thing, this very pretty thing?'"

"Titus, is she as simple as she looks?" says Lady Ellice with unveiled scorn. "Ah!" this is an exclamation quite beside the present small matter. "You will find me a seat, Mr. Luttrell," she adds in her coldest manner.

"You do not waltz this time, then?"

He does not look miserable at the prospect; but, then, why does that intense languor ever lead one to understand?

"No, I think not."

The answer is chilly.

Patience goes off in an opposite direction, and again her face is buried in the roses. When she lifts it, tears are in her clear eyes. She is ashamed of them, surely! How proudly, with what a noble, quiet dignity does she walk across the great drawing-room!

Her cousin has said that he would send her a flower to wear that evening—why has he sent the bouquet?

Titus! Titus! do you know what you have done?

VOL. III.

The evening wears away.

Patience quite charms her aunt—she is so gracious to the minor canon. So cooly, quiet, gracious, that Lady Luttrell is astonished, and marvels at the woman-of-the-world air her neice wears. Fancy, half a London season doing so much for any girl.

The fact is that Patience is telling herself a truth, and that all the scene before her—minor canon and all, moves before her eyes like the scene of a play in which she has, boldly enough, come to stand as a sort of "super" on the stage, but in whose leading parts she has no share.

"To-morrow she goes home—to-morrow she goes home." There is the repetition of some sort of a dim chorus her soul is hearing.

She walks through her part, as one may say, dances, talks, laughs, all with a calm, self-assured grace which, under a gayer phase, has always been a characteristic of hers.

So the night wears on. When hours have gone she for the first time finds herself alone, and she is beginning to think. Her thoughts are broken into by the sound of a high-toned voice. It is a voice which Patience knows only as a cold voice, but now it is trembling with passion.

It is answered by a man's voice—not Titus Luttrell's, and yet this second voice says words which Patience knows should only be acceptably heard by the first speaker from him.

Patience trembles. In her simplicity, she is spellbound by horror. Are women of the world false like this?

The world has not yet taught the country-girl all its lessons.

Now she knows who the gentleman speaker is. Did she not see him coming up the staircase when her cousin and Lady Ellice were standing with her, and when Lady Ellice quizzed her about her bouquet? He is a certain Colonel Bayle.

Here is part of what she overheard:

"I will not break with him yet. No; wait a day or two."

"Why?"

"Never. Feminine spite, very probably, is my motive. You men think you can blind women and be free yourselves."

The high, thin voice was cold and cynical.

"Ellice, why do you say this? I do not——"

"I was not thinking of you. You ought to be satisfied. No; he steals away from me before I release him. Can you not see?"

"The scoundrel!"

"Not at all. He will keep honorably his engagement to me. Ha, ha! I have two strings to my bow."

This noble lady is becoming vulgar.

Patience's cheeks burn. She understands only too well, and she would fly, but she cannot. Certainly she cannot. She is in an anteroom, and a conservatory masks the only exit from this room. In here are Lady Ellice and Colonel Bayle. She tries to shrink into a corner, and she tries to stop her ears.

How thankful she will be when another twenty-four hours are past! She will be safe at home then.

She suddenly remembers—ah, we think in her heart of hearts she has never forgotten—that Titus Luttrell will come and will claim her for the next dance. She starts erect. Such a thing can never be. No, she will not dance with him. The feeling which before had been but a soreness, and a thing dimly recognized, has by this time grown into a burning wound, a fiery shame that maidenly pride and indignant revolt must cauterize out of existence.

She risks all—meaning her discovery by Lady Ellice—and clothing herself with her coldest dignity, she slowly moves to the threshold of the room, and as slowly passes in front of the two speakers.

"Patience Luttrell!" exclaims the high voice of her ladyship. "Lying perdu—eh? And asleep? Little should be asleep at these late hours; country ways are being forgotten."

"I was not asleep, Lady Ellice, but I was tired. You will let me pass; I am going to bed. You know I go home to-morrow, and by an early train."

"London disgusts you—"

"Scarcely"—Patience is very cool—"no, scarcely that. Nevertheless the country is better."

Titus Luttrell is coming. She sees him, she knows that the other two also see him, and she cannot avoid him. She is literally at bay, and, like a creature at bay, suddenly becomes gifted with a mighty strength.

She hastens a little in meeting him, and says, loudly enough for Lady Ellice also to hear:

"You must do without me, really! I am just as tired as—as forty dogs; besides, you know I am off by the early train, and I must have some small amount of sleep. Find some one else to dance with, Titus."

"Off! What do you mean?"

"A stern fact!" she cries, laughing and hurrying past him.

She does not laugh when, a few minutes after, she is folding her dress together and putting it into the box.

She does go home on the morrow.

But a week goes by, and she does not find the dear Cornish home so satisfying as it ought to be. Strange!

At the end of another week it has again become lovely in her eyes. Why?

She had a letter from her cousin, Titus Luttrell. Lady Ellice has seen fit to break off the engagement which the parents of both herself and himself had made in the days of their children's babyhood. Titus is free, and yet Titus will be bound—contradiction!

Patience smiles, and she watches the sea gradually rolling in the afternoon sunlight; she knows that before the sweet summer night falls that Titus will be bound as he wishes.

She, too, will have lost her freedom, and yet she goes smiling on.

A VICIOUS ANIMAL.

Moses Hand, of Lyons Farms, drove his stallion Windbeam to Irvington on Wednesday, January 7th, and while there drove into a gentleman's stableyard to look at some cows that were stabled near by. He gave the stallion in charge of a young German while he went to look at the cows, telling him to look out for the horse, and if he nipped at him to slap him over the head with his hand. While looking at the cows Mr. Hand heard the German yelling at the top of his voice. Suspecting something wrong, Mr. Hand ran with all speed for the yard. In coming out of the stable he saw that the stallion had the young man by the shoulder, and with ears laid back and forefeet extended, was shaking him like a terrier would a rat. He several times lifted the man from the ground and struck at him with his forefeet, and but for the timely arrival of Mr. Hand, would doubtless have killed him. When Windbeam heard Mr. Hand's voice he loosened his hold, and turning round quickly upset the wagon and ran for the gate. Mr. Hand was too quick for him, however, and succeeded in catching him before he got out. It was a fortunate thing for the German that Mr. Hand was so close by.—Elizabeth Herald.

Nature will always take the color of the spectacles we wear.

TROTTING RECORD.

A list of the horses that have in succession lowered the mile trotting record since 1810, together with the time made and the year of the performance, will be found in the appended table. It will be interesting as showing the progress made in the development of that essentially American product, the trotting horse:

THE PRESENT LEGISLATURE.

The published notices of application indicate that a wide range of subjects will be brought before the Legislature at the session which began last Tuesday afternoon. Among the measures which the Legislature will be asked to consider are the following: To change the life-tenure of the Riparian Commission, and to make the term five years, and to make the board non-partisan; to require Justices of the Peace to pass an examination as to their capacity to properly perform the duties of the place; to provide for the examination and license of physicians by a State Board; to amend the laws so that songbirds shall not be killed for millinery trimmings; to extend the power of the child-labor act, to provide for compulsory education; to prohibit overcrowding in tenement-houses; to enable the State Board of Water Commissioners to set apart a water-shed for the supply of great cities, under suitable regulation; to create new counties of parts of Monmouth, Somerset, Union and Middlesex; to condemn and buy the Newark and New York plank road; to create a non-partisan police in Newark; to reduce tolls on the Newark plank road; to annex to Essex county that part of Hudson west of the Hackensack River; to reduce railroad fares on the roads near New York; to extend the time for the completion of the Hudson River tunnel; to restore a number of convicted criminals to citizenship; to annex Millham to Trenton; to increase the power of the Passaic County Freeholders; to increase the stringency of the Savings Bank act; to limit the powers of the Court of Chancery; to modify the railroad tax act, and to change the oyster and game laws; to change the rules of the Morris Plains Lunatic Asylum.

The Legislature will also have to meet the question of Prohibition fairly in the face. The action of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, in circulating petitions, will undoubtedly result in the demand being made for a submission of the question to the people. Those members who have been coyly dallying with the subject will have a chance to meet it face to face.

I have also the pleasure to report that there are no temporary loans or floating debt against the county.

Respectfully submitted,
P. SHERIDAN, County Collector.

On motion, received and ordered on file.

COMMITTEE REPORT.

The committee on claim of Jonathan Moore, of Rahway, for damages, reported as follows:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:—Your committee, to whom was referred the claim of Jonathan Moore, of Rahway, for damages, would respectfully report that upon examination we find that it is an old matter, originating on or about the [illegible] of Feb., [illegible], and after laying dormant for over two years it was, on May 25, 1882, brought to the attention of the board by the chosen freeholders from Rahway and referred to a committee of the board, which committee upon investigation, reported as follows (on June 1, 1882): "That after an inquiry in relation to said claim and the manner said injuries were received, would recommend that the matter be left as it is, as in the opinion of your committee the county is not liable. Signed, W. E. Clark, C. W. L. Martine, Thomas White, A. J. Halliday, S. S. Mapes, G. W. Doty, "and now, at the expiration of two years more, we would again recommend that the matter be left as it is."

BUSINESS MALARIA.

A St. Louis journal remarks—"When a 'bear' yells out from the pit of a Board of Trade, 'I'll sell 5,000 February wheat,' and a 'bull' responds, 'take it,' that is a specimen of modern commerce."

Such is a vivid description of the way commercial business, so called, is now largely transacted, and to term it gambling would not be wandering away from the truth.

The whole system is unsound and pernicious from centre to circumference, and until it is abolished, safe and honest trade will remain paralyzed.

Gambling speculation not only rules dealing in stocks and bonds, but extends to almost every standard commodity of traffic and use.

It is in the line of legitimate business to purchase and sell for actual receipt and delivery investment securities, wheat, corn, flour, pork, lard, butter, beef, sugar, coffee, and the various essential articles of life, but to convert them into airy bubbles and then tax human ingenuity and artifice for the invention of means to create an artificial rise or fall, may be game for some, but it is certainly cruel injury to public morals, and the pecuniary welfare of the many.

This, glossed over as it may be, unprincipled speculation, reckless adventure, and the more a country has of such peculiar business, poorer will become the masses of the people and greater depressed their real industries.

Human health demands the exclusion of poisonous gases from the atmosphere. A healthy condition of trade and commerce requires a similar process.

Speculative prosperity is a delusion and snare.

AMERICAN FREEDOM.

Every legally qualified voter in this country has the unquestionable right of depositing such a ballot as he deems proper.

That is a prerogative of citizenship which cannot be taken away without doing violence to high law, and any attempt of the kind, through fraud or force, is nothing short of disloyalty.

Endeavoring to convince a voter by honest and truthful argument that he is wrong in judgment is within the bounds of propriety, but to willfully misrepresent, or treacherously connive for the accomplishment of such an end is dastardly in the extreme.

It is certainly an exhibit of foolish political enmity on the part of those Republicans who persist in denouncing former voters of that partisan faith, because of their refusal to support Mr. Blaine for the Presidency.

Such denunciation, if allowable, would come with much better grace from Democrats, for the reason, that many thousands of votes were lost to Mr. Cleveland on account of treachery, false charges, and artfully concocted plans of deception.

It is a fact, that a multitude of Republicans, breathing the spirit of manly independence, voted for Cleveland in preference to Blaine. They did so as honest, patriotic and thoughtful men, openly, without any mercenary intent, but for the praiseworthy reason that they believed the best interests of country called for such action on their part.

They deserve honor instead of abuse.

And it is equally a fact, that many former Republicans voted for St. John. They, too, were honest men, knowing what they were about, wedded to what they deemed a principle of far more importance than the success of either of the old parties.

They likewise are entitled to honorable mention rather than vulgar defamation.

The day for cracking the cat-o'-nine-tails of partisan anger over free and intelligent American voters has passed away. The determination to support the best candidates for office, the best measures of government for the people, and to rebel against the decrees of scurvy politicians and greedy cormorants, is yearly growing stronger and for the public good.

"How much did you say this was?" "A dollar and a half." "That's a big price, isn't it?" "Oh, no, I assure you; drugs are very costly." "But I am a druggist." "Oh, you are? Well—of course—15 cents."

Alfred Bradford, an oysterman, shot a seal in Maurice River Cove, of Delaware Bay, on Saturday last. It was five feet long, dark gray, and weighs 100 pounds. It is something unusual to catch a seal in this latitude.

Frederick W. Foote, the junior member of the suspended bank firm of Cisco & Co., is the eldest son of the late F. W. Foote, of the Elizabeth Journal. He was a former clerk under Sub-Treasurer Cisco, and, following him in the banking business, was admitted a member of the firm in the Spring of 1883.

Mr. Chas. Spaulding, of South River, who was a soldier in the last war, has received a check for $11,312 for back pensions for an injury to his eyes sustained in the last war. Mr. Spaulding is entirely blind, and has been for years. Besides the large check, he will receive $72 per month for the remainder of his life.

Judge Nixon of the United States Circuit Court Friday last granted an application filed by Counselor E. T. Green for an appeal of the familiar Dinsmore suit to the United States Supreme Court. It will be brought up at the next term of the United States Supreme Court. The suit involves the validity of the Central Railroad case.

President Thurston, of the Jersey City and Bergen Horse Railroad Company, received a few days ago an envelope enclosing a $50 bill and a letter signed "ex-Conductor," stating that the money was what he had stolen from the company while in its service. As the company thought its system against robbery was perfect, the receipt of the money has been a sorrow rather than a joy.

The steel tire of a six-foot driving wheel on one of the locomotives of the New Jersey Central Railroad came near causing a serious accident to a train near Pamrapo, on Thursday of last week. The train was running rapidly when the tire flew from the wheel and fell on the track. Four cars, containing nearly four hundred passengers, passed over it, and it wrecked some brake rods and truck gear and tore a hole in the floor of one of the cars, but no person was injured.

REDUCED FARE TO WASHINGTON.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has offered to carry organizations numbering over one hundred from New York to Washington, to attend the inauguration ceremonies, for $6.50 a passenger for the round trip. Organizations of less than that number will be transported for $9 a passenger.

TREASURER TOFFEY'S BONDSMEN.

State Treasurer-elect Toffey, of New Jersey, qualified with his bondsmen last Saturday before Judge Knapp in Jersey City. The bond is for $300,000. The sureties, who qualified in the sum of $500,000, were Daniel Toffey, William Toffey, George C. Toffey, the Treasurer's brothers; Isaac Struble, Garret D. Van Reipen, Richard G. Sipp, Albert Heritage, Frank Mitchell, Michael Desmond and C. J. Cronan.

EX-GOVERNOR ST. JOHN'S STATEMENT.

Ex-Governor St. John has written a statement regarding the charges that he made overtures in the recent campaign to the Republican National Committee, offering for $25,000 to withdraw as the Prohibition candidate. He cites in order the several charges made against him in Mr. Clarkson's letter, and gives dates and facts to prove that the charges are false; that he never made any proposition of any sort, directly or indirectly, to the Republican management, and that from first to last he carried out the programme made for him by the Prohibition National Committee.

THE OLD LIBERTY BELL.

The old Liberty Bell, it is expected, will be shipped from Philadelphia to the New Orleans Exposition on January 24th. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company will be intrusted with the charge of its transportation. A special train will be furnished by the Company to carry the bell and three officers appointed by the Mayor as custodians who will not leave it night or day until the relic is returned to the city in June at the close of the Exposition. The special train will be preceded by a pilot engine to guard against collision. When the bell leaves the city it will be the second time since it was originally received in Philadelphia in 1752. In 1777, when it was expected the British would capture the city, the bell was removed to Bethlehem for safe keeping.

U. S. COLLECTIONS.

The annual report of the Register of the United States Treasury shows that the lowest annual receipts of customs at any port of entry were those received at Little Egg Harbor, the total amount being but $11. The largest amount of duties collected was at New York, $134,361,872.65. The collections at Newark footed up $4,070.55, and at Perth Amboy, $27,908.48. The internal revenue collections in the three New Jersey districts during the same period were: First district, $130,666.56; Third district, $491,159.04; Fifth district, $2,858,372.71. The expenses for collecting the revenue from customs at the New Jersey ports during the past fiscal year were as follows: Burlington, $245; Great Egg Harbor, $5,582; Newark, $2,680; Perth Amboy, $9,441; Bridgeton, $386; Little Egg Harbor, $1,277. Total, $16,611. The expenditures for assessing and collecting the internal revenue during the same period were: First district, $11,461.86; Third district, $17,266; Fifth district, $25,913.73. The salaries paid in this (Third) district are: Collector, $3,750; one deputy at $1,800; one at $1,600; one at $1,200; three at $1,000; two at $400; one clerk at $1,000; three storekeepers at $4 per day; four gaugers and one inspector, fees. The deputies, clerks, gaugers and storekeepers are employed at the following places: Somerville, six; Phillipsburg, two; Elizabeth, two; Flemington, one; Jamesburg, two; New Brunswick, two; Millstone, one; Middlebush, one.

The Republicans of the Pennsylvania Legislature nominated Senator Cameron for re-election by a vote of 116 to 50.

The heavy winds on Saturday blew down the wooden walls of a skating rink being erected at Newark. Four men were buried in the ruins.

E. C. Marley, Republican, having resigned the postmastership at Point Pleasant, Ocean county, Captain John Arnold, Democrat, has been appointed.

The House Committee on Rivers and Harbors on Saturday completed the consideration of the River and Harbor bill for the next fiscal year. The appropriations aggregate $11,399,200. The Engineers' estimates were $34,597,630. Among them are the following for the Delaware river, and other waters of New Jersey: Delaware River, $165,000; the Delaware Breakwater, $100,000; Raritan Bay, $15,000; Maurice River, $5,000; Passaic River, $30,000; Raritan River, $15,000; Shrewsbury River, $10,000.

A pair of spectacles are on exhibition at Danbury, Conn., that have a history. They were formerly worn by one of the party who came to New England in the Mayflower. After knocking about the Massachusetts colony for years, they were bought by descendants of the family in Litchfield, this State, as an heirloom. They have been in Litchfield over 100 years. Recently W. F. Thrall, a local jeweler, secured them, and has placed them among his curiosities. The bows are of steel, an eighth of an inch wide, and forged by hand. The glasses are thick as plate glass, but clear and of fine quality. They are set in rims of horn, probably for ornamentation. The side pieces are of heavy steel ribbons, and the spectacles weigh five ounces.

N. J. Editorial Association.

The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association was held in the American House, Trenton, Monday last. Some thirty members were present. President Ketcham, of the Belvidere Apollo, called the meeting to order, after which Secretary Bechtel called the roll of newspapers. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Robert Gwynne, Jr., Salem Sunbeam; Vice President, First District, Alfred Cooper, Cape May Gazette; Second District, James O. Glasgow, Burlington Gazette; Third District, Joseph T. Crowell, Rahway Censor; Fourth District, W. J. Rittenhouse, Hackettstown Gazette; Fifth District, Samuel Garrison, Boonton Bulletin; Sixth District, E. W. Baldwin, Orange Chronicle; Seventh District, Edward Gardiner, Bayonne Times; Secretary, Charles Bechtel, Trenton; Treasurer, James S. Yard, Monmouth Democrat; Executive Committee, Sinnickson Chew, West Jersey Press, A. A. Vance, Jerseyman, Morristown, L. S. Hyer, Democrat, Rahway, J. F. Babcock, Fredonian, New Brunswick, James S. Yard, Monmouth Democrat.

Fire Board Meeting.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met, pursuant to a call of the President, in the parlor of Zephyr H. & L. Co., Tuesday evening. Present—President Van Winkle, Treasurer Cutter, Secretary Morris and Commissioner Jones. Absent—Senator Livingston and ex-Councilman Depew. The Committee on Hose Carts reported that two one-horse jumpers had been purchased second-hand, put in thorough repair and delivered to the Department as good as new. The Committee on Warren Engine matter could not make a full report in the absence of one of its members, but recommended the purchase of the steamer. It was also reported that promises of necessary repairs to Alert Hose house had been made by those in charge of the property; but as similar promises of the past had been broken, the Committee had made no new lease of the premises at present. The action of the Treasurer in paying the bills of Carney Bros., $73.63 and Alert house rent, $18.75, was approved. Messrs. Wm. N. Tier and George Rickert were accepted by the Board as new members of Gazelle Engine Co. The following bills were ordered paid: Gutta Percha Rubber Manufacturing Co., $137; and $134.80; Newark Fire Department, $200; Z. I. Pratt, $9.25; P. B. Hapenny, $3.50; Robt. Simpson, $60.25; Alex. Gee, $4.50; J. E. Flanbery, $18.50; P. & B. R. R. Co., $4.20; Chas. A. Smith, $7.95 and $24.72; J. Rickert, $1; W. T. Newman, $1; William Krausse, $5.75; Plainfield Gas Co., $28.22 and $8; Theo. Adams, $2.80; J. W. Apgar, $3.

Secretary Morris was requested to instruct Captain E. C. Morse of the Fire Patrol as to the duties of that organization, and also investigate the charge of W. Stewart, Esq., to the effect that one the Department hose carriages, while racing with another, had collided with and smashed a buggy belonging to the complainant. At the request of Zephyr H. & L. Co., the Board appointed this evening to meet and accept from that company its team of horses. A resolution was adopted loaning No. 1's old hand engine and No. 2's old hose carriage to the Scotch Plains Department, and permission was granted Gazelle to erect a shed in the rear of its house. The Board endorsed the action of Zephyr Co., in the election of Irwin Waters Asst. Foreman in place of Joseph Noel resigned, and then adjourned.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Midwinter (February) Century will contain an article by Dr. George W. Beers, of Montreal, on "Canada as a Winter Resort," profusely illustrated by Henry Sandham, with views of tobogganing, curling, racing on snow-shoes, etc. The Montreal Carnival will give this paper an especial timeliness.

Two full-page illustrations of Mr. Howell's article on "A Florentine Mosaic," in the next number of The Century, are said to be quite remarkable reproductions by the wood-engraver of etchings. Mr. Pennell, the artist, was sent to Italy by the publishers of The Century to illustrate Mr. Howell's series on Italian cities, of which this is the first paper.

We have received the first number of Industrial America issued from the same office and under the same general management as that sterling weekly, The Electrical World. Industrial America presents a handsome typographical appearance: its matter is carefully prepared and ably edited, and its illustrations are of a high order. It is published every other Saturday at No. 9 Murray street, New York, at ten cents a number, or $2.00 a year.

The Art Interchange of January 1 may be called a china painting number, so many designs suitable for this branch of art work are given in it. The text treats of notes on embroidery in London, the tariff on works of art, church embroidery, decorative novelties, design for anti pendium for church lectern, arrangement of peacock's feathers, bowls for window transparencies, and scheme of decoration of house interior. In Art Notes and News reference is made to recent prominent art events. This number of the Art Interchange can be obtained for 15 cents from William Whitlock, 140 Nassau street, New York.

An important feature of Babyhood for January is an article by Dr. Yale on "The First Steps," in which the earliest development of the Baby's power of locomotion is described in a practical manner, with suggestions as to the avoidance of "bow-legs," "knock-knees," etc. Parents of little folks as yet nameless may find some serviceable hints in an amusing sketch by Rev. Edward Everett Hale, entitled "Naming the Baby." Mrs. Christine Ladd Franklin makes "The Infant's Mind" a subject of most interesting study. "Baby Abroad in Winter," by Marion Harland, and various other features, go to make this number a valuable one for all who have the baby's interest at heart.

An Old Soldier's
EXPERIENCE.
"Calvert, Texas,
May 3, 1882.
"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
as a cough remedy.
"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases.
J. W. WHITLEY."
Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

HIGH WATER MARK!

Last week's issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST reached a total of 2,460 copies.

THE next legal holiday, Washington's birthday, falls on a Sunday.

ONE year ago to-day, the thermometer was ten degrees below zero in this vicinity.

AN adjourned meeting, and a vote on the license question, will draw a large crowd to the Council rooms, next Monday evening.

THE bridal present, last week, upon the occasion of the marriage of Councilman Simpson's daughter, were unusually numerous and costly.

HENRY HAMILTON, for some months janitor of the public schools and the Council rooms, died at his residence in this city, last week, of typhus fever.

LARRY V. TUNISON, a former proprietor of the Elm Park Hotel, near Bound Brook, and well known to many of our residents, died in New York last Tuesday week.

AT New Haven, last Saturday Dr. Carver finished his great task of hitting 60,000 balls in six days. The score was: Shots, 64,841; misses, 28,825; and hits, 60,016.

SEATS for Gough's lecture in Music Hall, next Thursday evening, may be secured without extra charge at Reynolds' pharmacy. Fifty cents only for admission and reserved seat.

AN unusual occurrence in the birth of twins has happened in Morristown, one of them being born on Friday night and the other on the following Tuesday. The first was a girl and the second a boy.

MR. GEORGE W. FORCE of No. 11 West Front street, previous to extensive alterations in his place of business, as announced by us last week, will sacrifice his stock of boots and shoes at astonishingly low prices.

ABOUT sixty vocalists are rehearsing under the leadership of Dr. Utter, the cantata of "Esther" that is to be given in an elaborate manner in Music Hall, for benefit of the Reform Club, about the middle of February.

THE trial of John Cass, of Raritan, indicted for setting fire to a barn in that town, was ended in the Somerset county Courts last Thursday. The jury were out all night and failed to agree. Cass was liberated on a $1,200 bail bond.

GEORGE HURLING recently had a personal encounter with another colored citizen, over a dusky lady acquaintance. George's antagonist took too much of George's lip, and the services of a doctor were necessary to put back the mouthful and sew it in place.

MR. ALEX. RUNYON'S very valuable Jersey cow left its comfortable bed of board, Monday night, and no trace behind. A description of the animal was at once telegraphed to the New York pawn shops, and Postmaster Pope is keeping a sharp watch over the outgoing mails.

To those of our readers who are in want of clothing we will say that they need not go out of town as our enterprising clothier, S. C. Lillenstern, is closing out his stock at prices that defy competition, both in the State or out of it, and his clothing is made up equal to the finest ready-made goods.

OUR readers have not heard us boast of our large subscription list in many years, so they will pardon the present reference to our increasing circulation. Last week's issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST reached 2,460 copies—almost two thousand of which were delivered in this city to paying subscribers.

JUDGING by our experience at its weekly rehearsals, the Plainfield Vocal Society will render at its next concert a programme of particularly enjoyable music of the most pleasing character. The selections will not be so "heavy," possibly, but all the more satisfactory to the majority of the subscribers for such cause.

THE New York papers under the head of "Suburban Society Notes," will insist upon giving the title of Union Boat Club to that organization of wealthy citizens whose Club House in Plainfield is situated at Broadway and Ninth street. Plainfield is a dry city for Boat Clubs—and, by the way, the Union is a dry Club for the thirsty.

MESSRS. HARRIS & VOEHL last Friday purchased of Mr. Joseph Gerstel all the latter's right, title and interest in the temperance billiard rooms on West Front street. The new proprietors intend to make the resort one of the city's greatest attractions, and will spare no effort in catering to the tastes of their gentleman patrons.

MRS. R. P. PENFIELD of the State Committee makes this appeal: "The New Jersey Temperance Teachers' Association is in need of funds to procure a bannerette to be placed in the W. C. T. U. booth at the New Orleans Exposition. Will the friends of temperance in this city send in their mite for this purpose immediately to Mrs. J. W. Yates?"

"HAWKEYE" BURDETTE gave a very amusing, interesting and sensible lecture, full of true humor and some tenderness, too, at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week. How true, also, was his statement that a school-boy could learn to be an expert punster in half an hour, and that upon his achieving such rank he should be taken out and shot.

MRS. JAMES FARLEY who lives in the lane off Front street leading to the old Randolph Mill, loaded the kitchen stove with wood, Sunday. The blaze was driven by the fierce draft out through the flue into the room above, and setting fire to the chimney-board started a small conflagration. Neighbors, summoned by Mrs. Farley's cries of fright, came in and put out the fire.

VAN DEVENTER HALL, if altered and leased by the Y. M. C. A., as is proposed, will afford that association most convenient rooms in a very desirable locality. A move from their present quarters is necessary, as the C. L. S. C. will need the entire first floor of the Chautauqua building for the future. Dr. Vincent and other officers of the organization intend to establish their headquarters in this city.

THE lecture by Chaplain McCabe at Music Hall, next Monday evening, is the second of the G. A. R. Course, arranged by the Winfield Scott Post of this city. The subject is "The Sunny Side of Libby Prison Life," and the lecturer intersperses the narrative with singing by himself. No orator in this country, we are assured, has been heard with more pleasure and interest than this Christian soldier.

THE Saengerbund will hold a Calico Sociable at its rooms, corner of North and Park avenues, during Monday evening, Feb. 16th.

THE city promptly collects the charge for emptying into the North avenue sewer, but seems to think it is unnecessary to clean out the cesspool.

THE Union county Grand Jury has made a presentment against the Board of Excise in Elizabeth, condemning the mode of granting saloon licenses.

AT the Park avenue church this (Thursday) evening, Miss Nella Brown is again charming an audience with her elocutionary talents and fascinating manners.

HIS HONOR the Mayor, makes short work of complainants. He sensibly insists that they go before a Justice, and swear out a warrant, if they want redress.

BE in your seat early upon the occasion of Chaplain McCabe's lecture at Music Hall, Monday evening, to witness tableau specially prepared for the occasion.

NICHOLAS KELLY is again an ex-policeman. The first time he gained the title by suspension—now it is due as a result of his voluntary withdrawal from the force (?)

LAST evening Mr. Noah W. Pike, of this city, delivered an address entitled "The Two Pledges," before a large audience, in the Hall of the W. C. T. U., Newark, N. J.

MR. EDWARD SANDFORD, proprietor of the Oil Cloth works, was thrown from his carriage, last Tuesday evening, and had his arm broken. Dr. H. H. Lowrie, who is attending the case, is confident of entire repair in a very short time.

MR. S. MERRITT POTTER will commemorate his sixteenth birthday, to-morrow, by giving a dancing party during the evening to a select few of his intimate lady and gentleman friends, at the residence of his father, S. A. Potter, Esq., at Grove street and Mercer avenue.

ROLLER "skating" seems the safest, after all. Of the thousands that have visited the Casino Rink, only two have met with any accident and both merely to the extent of fractured wrists. Yet during Tuesday night, Mrs. Frederick S. Green, of Sherman avenue, while skating on the Brooklyn avenue pond, fell and broke her leg. Sure and speedy recovery, however, under the care of City Physician Fritts, is assured.

THE members of the Hypate Club of last season had an exceedingly pleasant social reunion, Monday evening, as the guests of Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde of Netherwood. In the absence of tenor voices among the Club's possessions, no attempt will be made in the direction of a musicale this year, so extensive as that of last June. The members will keep up the pleasant sociability that now exists, and enjoy together each other's talents.

THE reflection of a fire on the sky in the vicinity of Morristown, furnished an excuse for ringing an alarm, Wednesday evening, about 7 o'clock. After the curious crowds on the corners had waited some minutes, No. 1 Engine tore through Second street headed for New York, and about 30 seconds afterwards No. 2 Engine turned up Somerset street in the direction of the new moon. Both steamers were returned in safety to their houses, however, before any damage had resulted.

John B. Gough.

The lecture committee of the Y. M. C. A. advertises all reserved seats at fifty cents—without extra charge—for Gough's lecture, January 29. This great veteran of the platform will soon have spoken his last message, but time has not yet dimmed his powers. Tickets and diagram at Reynolds' pharmacy.

Real Estate Sale.

Messrs. Cook Bros. have disposed of the balance of land owned by them on the north side of North avenue. Mr. Daniel Roberts, the liveryman, purchases 60 feet frontage next to Force's Hotel, running through to Second street. On this he contemplates erecting two store buildings and livery stables. The stables will be located in the middle of the lot, with a drive-way from North avenue and Second street. Mr. William Moore purchases the remainder of the land on North avenue, running up to Woolston & Buckle's, which gives him an outlet on Second street.

Need Not Print Everything.

It is said that the newspaper must print all the news—must furnish a mirror of the life of the community. To this it may be answered, first, that it is no more good journalism to print everything than it is good to paint everything. The artist must select his subjects, and so must the journalist. In point of fact the journalist does select, as we have said. He does not print a thousandth part of the things that happen. He picks out what he will print. The present indictment is that out of the multitude of things printable, he chooses so much that is not fit to print.—Christian Union.

Plainfield Enterprise in Newark.

The citizens of Newark in and about Roseville are to be favored with one of the prettiest rinks in the State, which is now being built at the corner of Orange and Sixth streets by two of Plainfield's capitalists, Mr. J. B. Miller, proprietor of Laing's Hotel, and Wm. H. Voorhees, Esq. The building is in Queen Ann style, all frame, novelty siding and colored glass windows. Mr. Oscar S. Teale of North Plainfield is the architect. The interior is to be provided with all conveniences that can be desired. Toilet rooms, skate rooms, private offices and bicycle room, furnished with every requisite for the comfort of patrons. The skating surface will be 60 by 150 feet, of the hardest wood and laid in the very best manner possible. It is intended, if the weather remains favorable, to open the new rink to the public on the 23d of February. It is just one mile from the Broad street station of the Newark and Elizabeth branch, and the Orange street cars pass both points.

Pool.

Friday evening of last week, the champion pool player of Scotch Plains with his backer visited this city and tackled a young Plainfielder at the game in the Front street billiard rooms. The result was that Scotch Plains was most emphatically left. Three series were played, and the Plainfield Boy Wonder, Mr. Frank Frazee, won every match—the last with six straight games. It was a very cold evening for the countryman, but he will probably do better some warmer day.

Mr. Joseph Gerstel having disposed of his rooms to Messrs. Harris & Voehl, the local pool tournament will probably never be finished. Therefore, though incomplete, we publish below the result to date, with four games to be played. The handicaps were—Krewson gave Stover and Green 15 each, Theirs, Andrews and Squier 20 each, Huffman, Mahaffee, Dunham and Atterbery 25 each. Green and Stover gave Theirs, Andrews and Squier 10 each, Hoffman, Mahaffee, Dunham and Atterbery 15 each. Theirs, Andrews and Squier gave Hoffman, Mahaffee, Dunham and Atterbery 5 each.

The Last of "Norwood."

The unsold portions of the elegant property on Front, Richmond and Second streets, formerly known as "Norwood" opposite the fine new residence of James T. Closson, Esq., is advertised for sale at auction by T. J. Gillies, auctioneer, on Monday, Feb. 23, 1885, at 11 o'clock, a. m. The high prices at which property in this locality has been held, has heretofore rendered this property practically unsaleable. We are informed that the entire property must be sold to close the estate, and parties in search of lots to improve will be granted an opportunity to secure some of the choicest ever offered in this city.

Prof. Fiske's Lecture.

The Music Hall Association offer to the Plainfield public advantages enjoyed nowhere else except in the largest cities. The situation of Plainfield between New York and Philadelphia, the fine Music Hall, and the enterprise of the Directors are the contributing causes. We are led to these observations by the announcement of a proposed course of lectures by Prof. John Fiske, of Harvard University, on the theme "the American Revolution." The course consisting of thirteen lectures was given in Boston last winter three times, the last course—beginning before the conclusion of the first. New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington have secured Prof. Fiske for this season, and it is upon the "off-night's" that the Music Hall Association will engage the Professor for Plainfield, if a sufficient number of course tickets can be sold in advance to cover expenses. For the thirteen lectures the price per person will be only three dollars. Than Prof. Fiske's there is no mind in the country more competent to treat the subject than the revolutionary period and there is no portion of our history more necessary to be understood in order to a comprehension of the genius of American institutions. It is safe to predict that our school teachers, and all parents mindful of the proper culture of their children will heartily second the efforts of the Music Hall Association to secure for Plainfield, this rare intellectual feast.

Personalia.

County Collector Sheridan is confined to his house by a very severe attack of rheumatism.

We are in receipt of a copy of the able speech of Congressman McAdoo on Interstate Commerce.

Assemblyman Vetterlein, of Somerset county, has secured the furnished house, No. 87 Jackson street, Trenton, which he will make his home during the session of the Legislature. He will be pleased to meet his friends at the above No. when they happen in Trenton.

The Senior of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST returns his thanks to Mr. William Gordon, of Lake Hopatcong, for the present of a mess of pickerel taken from the waters of that locality, which for freshness and flavor could not be excelled. "Billy," they put us in mind of the time we ate such fish off a rudely constructed table, (after we had caught them) when we were in camp on the island at your beautiful lake.

Plainfield's representatives, Senator Livingston and Assemblyman Kirkner, were well remembered in the distribution of Committees in the State Legislature. The Senator is on three important Committees, one of which is Chairman of the Joint Committee on Sinking Fund. Mr. Kirkner is Chairman of the Education Committee, which position he is most eminently fitted for. He is also on the Committee on Corporations, a most important Committee. On Joint Committees he is on Passed Bills. Assemblyman Vetterlein, of Somerset county, is a member of the Committee on Incidental Expenses.

Of Interest to Sportsmen.

A case of much interest to sportsmen of this State, is about to come before the Supreme Court for a decision as to jurisdiction. In 1873, when special legislation was allowed by the N. J. State Legislature, a charter was granted to certain parties of West Jersey, who organized "The West Jersey Game Society" with a limit of fifteen years. Under the provision of the act, non-residents were obliged to join this Society, before they were allowed the privilege of shooting or fishing in six counties of the State of N. J. In 1878 our State Legislature passed a general law similar to the special law of the West Jersey Society, providing that all non-residents must comply with the by-laws of the game protective societies organized, or to be organized under the laws of the State, if they desired to shoot or fish within its borders. Under this law the "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" was organized in 1879, with its headquarters at Plainfield. The object of the above Society is to restock the State with game birds and fishes, and prevent as far as possible illegal shooting and fishing in the State, through the means of the funds received annually for membership. The object of the "West Jersey" Society was stated to be similar. From the date of organizing the "N. J. G. & F. P. S," there was a hostile feeling manifested by the "West Jersey" against the former, for what reason has not been explained. The objects of both Societies were supposed to be similar and for the good of the sporting fraternity. The annual dues of the "New Jersey Society" is two dollars, while that of the "West Jersey" is five dollars. Threats were made by the latter that any non-residents bearing a certificate of membership of the "New Jersey Society," and not that of the "West Jersey" would be arrested by the officers of the latter Society, if found gunning on what they claim as their territory. All amicable overtures of the officers and members of the "New Jersey Society" to the "West Jersey," were rejected. Finally, a member of the former Society, named Robert Welsh, was arrested while shooting in Salem county, and fined $50. He immediately appealed the case, but when the time of trial came, it was claimed by the West Jersey Society that the papers were not properly drawn, and the case was declared "off" by them although the fine was not collected. Last October another member of the "N. J. Society," named U. B. Jones, of Philadelphia, was arrested by an officer of the "West Jersey Society," at Mauricetown, Burlington county, while gunning. The Justice before whom he was taken fined him $50. The "New Jersey" Society's Counsel immediately filed appeal bonds, and the matter came before Judge Reed, in the Cumberland County Courts, at Bridgeton, recently. That official last week rendered his decision that under the charter of the "West Jersey," that Society had jurisdiction over the territory covered by the six counties of Camden, Gloucester, Salem, Cumberland, Cape May and Atlantic. "The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" have carried the case to the Supreme Court. They claim that the general law under which they are organized give their non-resident members the right to gun in any part of the State. No objection has ever been offered to any non-resident members of the "West Jersey Society" shooting or fishing in any parts of the State, by the "New Jersey Society," on the contrary the latter Society recognize the object for which both Societies were organized and allows all members of the "West Jersey" to gun or fish in any part of the State without hindrance. It will be well for all non-residents to remember this one fact: The special charter of the "West Jersey" Society will expire by reason of limitation within three years. They cannot then renew it. Thomas P. Curley, of Camden, acts as Counsel for the "New Jersey Society." The case will be argued before the Supreme Court shortly.

"Victor Durand."

The above is the title of a play to be produced at Stillman Music Hall, this city, Tuesday evening, Jan. 27th. Among the many favorable comments from the press on the play, we extract the following from the New York Times: "'Victor Durand,' a drama in four acts, brought forward at Wallack's Theatre last evening, and likely to remain on the bills there for the remainder of the season, is a remarkably ingenious and interesting play. Its story is clear and not unnatural, the dialogue effective and not too diffusive, while its characters appeal to the sympathies of the spectators, and they are placed in situations which exhibit the author's fertile imagination and indisputable skill. The plot of "Victor Durand" is exceedingly simple and straightforward, yet the interest is cumulative and the spell exerted over the audience is not broken until the last curtain falls. In short, we wish to accord to Mr. Carleton the honor of writing not only a successful but a good play—a play that is likely to remain before the public because of its intrinsic merit and the fine opportunity it offers for competent actors to gain distinction."

The Latest Rinkies.

No new rinks—on paper—have been built since our last issue.

A roller Skating Rink will be opened at Bound Brook about Feb. 1st. It will be called the "Eureka."

The management of the Casino would esteem it a favor if the patrons should call attention to any act against good order or in violation of the rules of the Rink.

A new march, "Leader," a waltz, "Beautiful Star," and a galop, "Last Issue," are the latest additions of beautiful music to the Casino Band's programme.

In the Elizabeth rink they have a "complaint box" into which the public who think it too hot, or too cold, or too anything else, drop their objections or suggestions set forth on paper.

There are many complaints that the members of Miss K——'s infant class skate so rapidly, and in some cases so awkwardly, as to rudely interfere with others' enjoyment of the exercise.

Master Bobbie Wood who was to be the bright particular attraction of this afternoon and evening, is unable to appear to-day, but will exhibit his wonderful talent next Tuesday evening instead.

Plainfielders who have visited the "Cosmopolitan" and "Knickerbocker" rinks of New York, the "Temple" of Elizabeth and many others, can more thoroughly appreciate the perfect floor of the Casino.

An eminent authority says, regarding roller-skating: "It is no longer necessary, in the present enlightened state of public opinion, to champion the cause of healthful amusement against the inuendoes of bigotry or ignorance."

Rinks at Westfield, Cranford and Roselle are the latest. Lyceum Hall at Westfield and Cranford Hall are to allow the use of their floors for roller-skating, and one of the dining rooms of the Mansion House at Roselle is to be utilized for the same purpose.

This afternoon and evening, besides the "wealth" of other attractions, Miss Mabel Jackson a young lady (?) of remarkable ability as an artistic fancy and trick skater, will surprise those present with her marvellous accomplishment of surprising steps and figures on the little rollers.

The public hears all the talk of prospective rinks with sensible equanimity. The foundation for the airy buildings is just as apparent as the foundation for any expectation of such. The people have a rink with one of the best floors in the country and managed in a way that leaves nothing to be desired—consequently the people are satisfied.

Members of the Band and employees of the Rink gave a concert at Miller's Hotel, Friday evening of last week, upon which occasion was displayed much of the sort of talent that would accomplish the success of an amateur minstrel company. Why not form such an organization and give the public an opportunity of enjoying its achievements.

The receipts to-day are for the benefit of the Band of Hope, and no passes will consequently be recognized. There will be music both afternoon and evening and a grand march of children as a part of the day's attractions. We trust the public will respond in a more satisfactory manner, financially, than upon the occasion of the last benefit (?) for a local charity.

Mister Ellis Finn (not Master) "appeared" on the floor of the Rink, Friday evening last, full of spirits and capable of performing any feat, on or off the rollers, that could be thought of. The audience, however, since Livesey's exhibition, keeps its applause sacred to the memory of good skating, and Mister Finn's reception was not, strictly speaking, overwhelming.

The attendance at the Casino still continues large, and upon some occasions there is in fact a noticeable increase. Last Saturday afternoon the crowd was never exceeded, and during Monday evening the great number of the best people present was remarkable. The fascinating exercise seems, therefore, to have extended the hold its charms secures upon the sensibilities of almost everybody.

Captain Runyon's double quartette of bicycle riders held its first drill at the rink, Monday evening, and the charming revolutions and evolutions of Messrs. Serrell, Marsh, Pound, Yates and Runyon (with Craig, Burr and Demarest to furnish the applause) tempted many skaters to remain later and enjoy the sight. Weekly drills will soon perfect the squad in innumerable movements and combinations of grace and (more or less) elegance.

Mr. "Charles West"—known to Plainfielders as Charles Thompson, when formerly a resident of this city—gave a very entertaining exhibition in fancy and trick skating, Tuesday evening. There being no way of advertising the attraction by newspaper notice, the public was ignorant of the event and but a small audience was present. Mr. Thompson's ability and agility, were remarkable, and some of his feats entirely new. His spread-eagle, figure-eight, inside and outside edge, we have never before seen accomplished.

A Maryland town is to be greatly commended for having discovered a new and highly exhilarating sport. The local papers advertise a "ham race" at the skating rink. The game apparently combines the mystery of blind man's buff, the excitement of roller-skate racing, and some of the social features of the cake walk. A ham is suspended over the surface of the rink at a height admitting of a touch from the uplifted hand. The blindfolded skaters are then turned loose to find and touch "the dangling prize," which becomes the property of the most successful contestant.

Those who witnessed the polo game of Wednesday evening were awakened to the fact that the "Plainfields" are rapidly becoming a hard team to beat, and the playing of the majority of the members demonstrated the probability that some day the banner of the 'Casinos' will be lowered by the victories of "the other Plainfield club." After a hard fight the "Columbias" of Jersey City had been given one goal and the "Plainfields" had claimed two. But the judges would not allow the latter, and time was called with the game in favor of the visitors. During the battle Captain Squires received an ugly blow over the eye, and a member of the "Jaffray" team playing with "Columbias" had his lip badly cut.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The second talk of the series of Health Talks will be given by Dr. E. W. Hedges in the Y. M. C. A. Hall next Monday evening, Jan. 26th, at 8 o'clock, and we wish more of the young men of our city might improve this opportunity and spend a profitable as well as pleasant evening.

The next regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Literary and Debating Society will be held next Saturday evening, Jan. 24th, at 8 o'clock. The exercises will be very interesting and the members are earnestly requested to be present. The following is the programme: Essayist, Mr. W. D. Murray; Reader, Mr. T. N. Horn; Critic, Mr. A. Hoagland; Review Topics of the Day, Mr. E. Knauft. Subject for debate "resolved, that a classical education is of more benefit than a scientific." Affirmative, Messrs. Ulrich and Smith. Negative, Messrs. Coddington and Daniels. The reading room is open every week day from 9 to 12 a. m., and from 2 to 10 p. m., and is fitted up with the leading daily, weekly and monthly papers and magazines, chess, checkers and other games. All the young men of the city are cordially invited to drop in and use the papers and games.

A very important change has been made in our Boy's Branch by dividing the Branch and making a senior society and and a junior society, the boys over fourteen years of age forming the senior society and the boys under that age the juniors. The latter hold their meetings every Friday afternoon at four o'clock. The meeting this week Friday will be a Social under the management of the Boy's Work Committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary. The following are the officers elected for the next six months: Max. Munger, President; Harry Roney, Vice President; Clarence Titsworth, Secretary; Charlie Taylor, Sergeant-at-Arms. The senior society hold their meetings every Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Hall of the Association. These meetings will be of great variety, such as debates, talks of travels, practical business talks, health talks, social meetings, etc. The officers as elected are as follows: Frank Newman, President; Frank Hubbard, Vice President; F. L. Willis, Chaplain; David G. Atwood, Secretary; John Polat, Treasurer; Thad. Doane, Sergeant-at-Arms.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

Miss Nellie Gale of Elizabeth, and Mr. James McKenzie of Brooklyn, N. Y., are guests at the residence of Stanley Day.

Mr. Waglow lost a daughter by death on Sunday last, the funeral services being held at his residence on Tuesday last.

A sociable was held at the residence of Mr. Lloyd Nelson on Wednesday evening. Ladies furnishing refreshments and gentlemen assessed.

The house, barn and lot belonging to the estate of the late Mr. Blackford was sold at auction by the executors, realizing $1,040, the purchaser being, Mr. William Farrier.

The store formerly occupied by Mr. Shawhill, and owned by Dr. Titsworth, is reported rented to one of Plainfield's citizens. Mr. Cutter, to be opened as a general store.

A pound party under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, was held at the residence of Mrs. Newhall, and was well attended. The sale of the pound packages realized a considerable sum of money, and incidentally afforded a good deal of amusement in the usual ridiculous feature of buying a "pig in a bag."

An ugly hole in the road has been made by the late heavy rains. It is situated opposite the Bound Brook road. A plank has been sunk in to warn parties of the danger. This is all very well in the day time, but at night as no lantern is placed on the plank, it remains a very dangerous obstacle to persons driving. Our road master being absent nothing is done, but in case of an accident occurring with a liability of result for damages, which would unquestionably be sustained in such a case, some official would wake up so find it high time to have it put right. Would the township or the road master be responsible in such a case? Is it not his duty during a prolonged absence to employ some one to watch such matters?

WESTFIELD WISPS.

We are soon to have a fine roller skating rink in our town. So says John Peiffer.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman addressed the Reform Club at Temperance Hall on Wednesday evening.

Wm. H. Moore has sold out his harness and sadlery business to Mr. Joseph N. Randolph, of North Plainfield.

The ordinance of Baptism, by immersion, will be administered at the Baptist church, Elm street, next Sunday morning.

James Patterson killed a large raccoon in Mr. Ripley's woods Tuesday last. He felled a tree which proved to be hollow and Mr. Coon was caught napping.

A sermon in memory of Mrs. J. E. Ladd, so long the principal of the Westfield Seminary, will be delivered next Sunday morning by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Neill, at the Congregational Church.

The Westfield Fire Department received last week a check for $50 from the Cranford Town Committee, as a token of their appreciation for the efficient services rendered by the Westfield fire laddies at the late fire on Union avenue.

Our residents must not forget the village improvement committee in regard to our street lamps. They are kept lighted by voluntary contributors. Our postmaster is the treasurer, who will be happy to receive money towards the enterprise at any time.

The Town Committee met at the Town Rooms on Saturday evening, Jan. 17th, at 7.30 p. m. Present—James L. Miller, Levi Cory, L. M. Whitaker. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Treasurer reported a blank form of check for use of Township as requested at last meeting. The Chairman reported in the matter of the Hook & Ladder Co. lot which was referred to him at the last meeting. That counsel had advised that upon the surrender of the tax deed and all papers pertaining to the matter, that the Township reimburse the Company for what money they may have paid out on account of said lot. In pursuance of the above report it was on motion ordered that the Treasurer pay the Westfield H. & L. Co. No. 1 the sum of $34.25, amount of taxes, interest and costs which they have paid the Township to date, as per memorandum presented. John D. Jaques reported he had collected the following fines during the past year: From Mary Fealy, $3; John Kelly, $3; Ann Peiffer, $5; Robert Harrison, $3; John Kane, $10. The same was received, and passed to the Treasurer. The bill of John D. Jaques, Justice of the Peace, for issuing tax warrants and return to Collector of delinquent taxpayers, $10.80, was presented. John M. C. Marsh presented two maps from Rachel Tomlinson, Mary A. Marsh, Charles A. Kimball, Sarah A. Kimball, John M. C. Marsh and Ellis Bridges, dedicating certain pieces of lands to public use as public highways described on said maps as Walnut street and Kimball avenue, lying between Elm street and Mountain avenue, on road district No. 8. Moved and seconded that we, the undersigned, Township Committee of the Township of Westfield, county of Union, do hereby accept the said roads as dedicated on said maps as public highways. On motion, Walnut street and Kimball avenue, as above, were attached to road district No. 8. The Treasurer reported the following distribution of crushed stone to the several road districts during the past year to date as follows: No. 1, 3 cars, $19.24; No. 2, 18 cars, $117.32; No. 4, [illegible] cars, [illegible]; No. 5, 5 cars, $36.58; No. 7, 24 cars, $106.40; No. 8, 62 cars, $320.3[illegible]; No. 9, 13 cars, $84.55; No. 11, 7 cars, [illegible]9.14; No. 12, 31 cars, $221.60; No. 14, [illegible] cars, [illegible].74.

The case of the State against John Cheeseman, indicted for assault and battery upon J. L. VanSickel, was given to the jury in the Cumberland Court on Friday. After being out all night the jury, which stood 7 to 5 for conviction, reported that they were unable to agree, and were discharged. A sentence of $50 fine and costs was issued against VanSickel for his assault on Cheeseman. The libel suit against Cheeseman is not likely to be pressed, because of the right of the defendant to plead the truth.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

THE REV. GEO. H. THAYER, of Bourbon, Ind., says: "Both myself and wife owe our lives to SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE." Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

Injurious to the Public Health.

I have this day made a chemical examination of samples of baking powder purchased by me in the open market and marked Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and Royal Baking Powder.

These powders contain:

Cleveland's.

- Cream of Tartar
- Bicarbonate of Soda
- Flour

Royal.

- Cream of Tartar
- Bicarbonate of Soda
- Carbonate of Ammonia
- Tartaric Acid
- Starch

The relative amount of pure Carbonic Acid Gas produced by 10 grains of each of these powders is as follows:

Cleveland's, 658 cubic centimeters.
Royal, 577 cubic centimeters.

In view of these facts I regard Cleveland's as superior to the Royal because:

I. CLEVELAND'S contains only pure and unobjectionable materials, while the ROYAL contains Ammonia, a drug derived from disgusting sources, powerful in its action upon the system. The adulteration of baking powder with Ammonia is in my opinion an injury to the public health. It deserves the severest condemnation, and should be brought to the attention of physicians and boards of health throughout the country.

II. The quantity of pure Carbonic Acid Gas yielded by CLEVELAND'S is greater than that produced under like conditions by the ROYAL.

CLEVELAND'S BAKING POWDER being pure and free from Ammonia, Lime, Alum, Terra Alba, or any adulteration whatever, and having great leavening power, I do not hesitate to recommend as worthy of public confidence for producing light, digestible, and wholesome bread.

WASHED-OUT HAIR.
There is a sort of pallid, chalky complexion which the novelists call a "washed-out complexion." It is ghastly enough, and no mistake. Washed-out, faded, discolored, or grizzled-colored hair is almost as repulsive and melancholy. Parker's Hair Balsam will restore your hair to its original color, whatever it was; brown, auburn or black. Why lose more on your head, when you may easily have lively, shining hair.

WHY WILL YOU cough when Shiloh's Cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

TWO DANGEROUS SEASONS.
Spring and fall are times when so many people get sick. The changes in the weather are severe on feeble persons, and even those naturally strong are apt, as they say, "to be feeling miserable." Then they are just in condition to be struck down with some kind of fever. A bottle or two of Parker's Tonic will invigorate the digestion, put the liver, kidneys and blood in perfect order, and prevent more serious attacks. Why suffer, and perhaps die, when so simple a medicine will save you? Good for both sexes and all ages.

Lavish lunches do not gull the public. A stock company enterprise that is opened with a corkscrew is generally closed with an auctioneer's hammer.

"HACKMETACK" a lasting and fragrant perfume. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Butler.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, requires a smaller dose, and is more effective, dose for dose, than any other blood medicine. It is the cheapest, because the best. Quality and not quantity should be considered.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

Ayer's Pills cure constipation, improve the appetite, promote digestion, restore healthy action, and regulate every function. They are pleasant to take, gentle in their operation, yet thorough, searching, and powerful in subduing disease.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

BY MISTAKE.

BY M. D.

The family of Mr. Benjamin Barby, a gentleman of very close habits, was alarmed one bright, sunshiny morning by the venerable old gentleman, whose voice was heard in all parts of the house at the same time. He had run in from the garden crying:

"Martin, Martin! Where is that precious rascal, Martin?"

Martin was a bustling, active servant in the family, remarkable for his polite and agreeable manners, which quite atoned for the ugliness of his visage—not actual ugliness, but ugliness occasioned by a black patch over one of his eyes and another across his nose. The family of Mr. Barby consisted of himself and ward, a young lady of nineteen, to whom he had been left guardian by an old friend and school-fellow.

He did not like the idea of being set as a watch-dog over the inclinations of a young girl, but respect for his friend's memory would not admit of his refusing to take upon himself the charge.

Seeing the host of suitors addressing her, and being unable to separate the wheat from the chaff, he resolved upon discountenancing them all, by expressing his determination that Millie Winters should not marry at all.

"She shall have no husband at all," he cried. "Better be without a husband, Millie, than have a bad one."

The wary old man accordingly chose for Millie's maid a remarkably curious looking humpbacked old woman, thinking she would be true to his interests.

But Mr. Barby was mistaken, for Julie was remarkably fond of money—a five-pound note would throw her into a state of delirium, during which she continued oblivious of all that might be going on around her.

Martin responded not to his master's summons. But still the old gentleman cried:

"The precious villain! Oh, that my family should thus be insulted and disgraced. I saw him press his lips to my ward's cheek, and the sound of the kiss still sounds in my ears."

At this moment Martin appeared and mildly asked:

"Did you call, sir?"

Whereupon the enraged old gentleman rushed upon him, and cried:

"Zounds, you scoundrel! what do you mean by kissing my ward?"

"I, sir?" exclaimed Martin, with a surprised and innocent look.

"Villain! my own eyes have not deceived me. I saw you not ten minutes ago steal behind Miss Millie and—and ——"

"Sir, sir," exclaimed Martin, writhing in Barby's grasp. "It is impossible."

And thus saying, he struck his hand upon his forehead. As a sudden thought occurred to him he continued:

"Sir, a thought strikes me which may justify your suspicions. There is some strange mystery in this."

"Mystery!" quoth the old gentleman, in an enraged voice. "I think there is."

"I confess sir," said Martin, with a tone and look of shame, "that I did steal into the garden just now and take a chaste salute; but on my honor, sir, I believed the person to be Miss Winter's maid, the worthy Julie, to whom I have the honor of paying my addresses."

"Villain!" repeated the old man, stamping his foot, but Martin interrupted him.

"You know what bad sight I have, sir," he said. "One eye entirely gone and the other very treacherous, as it is now proven to be, seeing that I mistook the mistress for the maid, and have thus insulted a lady and offended a worthy gentleman, whom my inclination and duty have ever prompted me to regard with profound respect and veneration."

Mr. Barby was compelled to admit that, owing to the defective sight of Martin, it was possible for such a mistake to have occurred, and the "precious villain" was called a "careless fellow."

Wishing perfectly to retrieve his character, he explained to his master that he and Julie were about to be married—that she had obtained Miss Winter's consent, and that he was thinking of asking Mr. Barby that very morning.

The old gentleman expressed his surprise that a spruce little dandy like Martin should wish to unite himself with the old humpbacked Julie; but Martin clasped his hands, and with rapture declared her the woman of his choice and a paragon of womankind, and Mr. Barby, not wishing to wound the honest fellow's feelings, contented himself with saying:

"Well, there's no accounting for tastes."

In the course of the day, Mr. Barby accidentally met Julie in the garden.

"Well, Julie!" he exclaimed; "I wish you joy in the new situation you are going into."

"Law, sir," said Julie; "I ain't going into no new situation."

"Why, yes, you are; you are going to be married."

"Married, sir!" echoed Julie, in astonishment. "I a-going to be married! Law, sir, I wish I was."

"What's the use, old woman, of your standing there counterfeiting such surprise? I know all about it."

"All about it," squealed Julie, unable to comprehend her master's meaning. "All about it, sir?"

"Yes, to be sure, all about billing and cooing. Why, how you look! He told me so himself."

"He!" cried Julie. "Who?"

"Why, Martin, to be sure."

"Oh!" exclaimed Julie, and hung down her head, after affecting to blush.

"What a fool the old woman is!" said Barby. "If you were a young girl there might be some excuse for this shyness and tom-foolery. There, get along with you and be a good wife," and so saying, the old gentleman went his way, chuckling to himself at having discovered the little love affair between Martin and Julie.

The servant who attended the summons he desired would inform Julie that he had been waiting full half an hour for her mistress; a quarter of an hour again elapsed, and the old gentleman again rang.

"Send Julie to me!"

Julie slowly appeared.

"Julie, where is your mistress?"

"Mistress has gone out, sir."

"Gone out, sir," echoed Barby. "Gone out so early?"

"Yes, sir; they've been gone this hour and more."

"They! Who's they?"

"Mistress and Martin," said Julie, meekly.

"Mistress and Martin," roared the old man. "Fire and furies! What, your intended husband?"

"My intended husband? La, sir, how can you imagine anything so absurd!"

"What, didn't you confess——"

"I, sir; no, sir. You only made me blush by your observation!"

"That fellow is a villain, after all."

In a moment Barby summoned the whole establishment, dispatching them in all directions to go the round of all the churches in the metropolis. He had a shrewd notion of what had occurred; but they were spared further trouble by a carriage stopping at the door, and presently Martin and the late Millie Winters stood in his injured presence.

But strange to say, Martin was an altered man. He no longer wore a servant's dress; the hideous patches had disappeared from his face, and he was in all respects the perfect gentleman.

Barby gave vent to his rage; and when his emotions had subsided the ci-devant Martin informed him that when he found out that he had determined upon setting his face against all his ward's suitors, he had adopted the disguise, and served in the capacity of a menial, for the sake of her he loved, and proved, to Mr. Barby's full satisfaction, that his character and fortune entitled him to the lady's hand.

Barby was confounded, but knowing that what had been done could not be undone, he shook hands with his ward and her husband, and contented himself with exclaiming:

"What a fool I was that I should have believed it to have been a Kiss in Mistake."

NEW JERSEY'S EXHIBIT.

General C. H. Barney, commissioner from New Jersey to the New Orleans exposition, has come home, at Trenton, for a few weeks. He reports the New Jersey State exhibit as being complete, a fact which can as yet be said of only two or three other States. The display of this State, he said, is attracting much attention from visitors. The register for visitors shows already many New Jersey names.

MODIFYING THE CENTRAL LEASE.

As to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, it is proposed to modify the lease by reducing the rate of dividend to 3 per cent. per annum, for three years, and to give the holders 15 per cent. of the capital stock of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in scrip of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, bearing no interest, but redeemable out of the surplus earnings of the Central Railroad of New Jersey after paying all expenses.—Elizabeth Journal.

THE SINGER FACTORY.

The Elizabeth Journal says that on Monday, the 12th, the hundreds of men, women and girls who have been out of work at the Singer Factory for some time went to their usual employment, although it was reported that not the full complement of hands were taken on, as was supposed would be the case. This will probably occur in a week or two, however. It was stated also that a reduction of ten per cent. in the wages of all the employees of the factory had been ordered. For the present, the hours of labor will be only 9 hours, instead of 10 as heretofore.

WHISTLES INSTEAD OF BELLS.

For the past eight months the Pennsylvania road has been using upon its trains a newly patented device which establishes connection between passenger cars and the locomotive by means of air-tubes instead of a bell cord. It has now adopted the system permanently. The new system gives the best of satisfaction, and is not only more effective than the bell cord, but is more effective in a number of respects. If the passenger will listen when the conductor gives the signal to start, he will hear a little whistle, the sound issuing from the cab of the locomotive.—Elizabeth Herald.

THE SMALLEST CHILD EVER BORN.

Mrs. Charles Tracy, of Kingsbridge, N. Y., recently gave birth to a male child that promises to be a wonderful addition to the world of dwarfs and midgets. It weighs exactly 11 ounces and is but 6 inches in length, but as full of of life and gifted with as much lung power as is usually found in babies of a like age of larger dimensions. Its parents are well developed, and the three children born to them before the present youngster were of the regular size. The surprised parents and attending physician are unable to account for the strange freak of nature. The baby's body could be circled by a fourteen-year-old child's thumb and index finger. The head, perfectly formed, is about the size of a crab apple. Its mouth is so small that it is unable to partake of its natural nourishment, and it takes its milk through a small nipple, the size of a straw, attached to a small bottle.

BUSINESS LOOKING UP.

The tide of business has begun to turn. Mills and factories are starting up all over the country. Out at Pittsburg, the head-centre of the iron trade, half a dozen of the leading steel and iron works have begun business with a whirl. The men begin to think, and they say that the stoppages were uncalled for, and that the sole object intended was to coerce them into accepting a scale down in wages. Bad trade had nothing to do with it.

Something must of course depend upon what action Congress shall take upon certain questions. It will not undertake a wholesale revision of the tariff, that is certain; it will not repeal the internal tax laws; it may commence to be careful about expending by the millions; it will not accept the new Spanish treaty as it stands; it can lighten the burden of taxation by lifting one or two weights from the shoulders of the people; and it can revive labor by making cheaper and more easily accessible the materials out of which labor makes its profits.—Newark Journal.

The willow tree at Mount Vernon which overshadows the tomb of Washington was originally a clipping from a tree which overshadowed the tomb of Napoleon at St. Helena.

The veteran showman, Barnum, whose vast real estate possessions at Bridgeport were almost wiped out by the election of Cleveland, has written a letter to General Grant offering him the sum of $100,000 and a share in profits for the privilege of exhibiting his swords. Vanderbilt also has offered to cancel Gen. Grant's obligation to him of $150,000, but both the General and Mrs. Grant refuse the gift.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

With the new volume, beginning in December, Harper's Magazine will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new Magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine-making. In a word, the Magazine becomes more and more the faithful mirror of current life and movement. Leading features in the attractive programme for 1885 are: new serial novels by Constance Fenimore Woolson and W. D. Howells; a new novel entitled "At the Red Glove;" descriptive illustrated papers by F. D. Millet, R. Swain Gifford, E. A. Abbey, H. Gibson, and others; Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," illustrated by Abbey; important papers on Art, Science, etc.

THE CENTURY

In 1885.

A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

PAPERS ON THE CIVIL WAR.

The important feature of The Century Magazine for the coming year—indeed, perhaps the most important ever undertaken by the magazine—will be a series of separate papers on the great battles of the War for the Union, written by general officers high in command upon both the Federal and Confederate sides—General Grant (who writes of Vicksburg, Shiloh, and other battles), Generals Longstreet, McClellan, Beauregard, Rosecrans, Hill, Admiral Porter, and others. The series opens in the November Century with a graphically illustrated article on

THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN,

Written by the Confederate general, G. T. Beauregard. Brief sketches, entitled "Recollections of a Private," papers chronicling special events, descriptions of various auxiliary branches of the service, etc., will supplement the more important series by the various generals.

A strict regard for accuracy will guide the preparation of the illustrations, for which The Century has at its disposal a very large quantity of photographs, drawings, portraits, maps, plans, etc., hitherto unused. The aim is to present in this series, not official reports, but commanding officers' accounts of their plans and operations—interesting personal experiences which will record leading events of the war, and possess, at the same time, a historical value not easily to be calculated.

FICTION.

In this line The Century will maintain its prestige, and furnish the best stories by American writers that can be procured. In November begins

A NEW NOVEL BY W. D. HOWELLS,

author of "Venetian Days," "A Modern Instance," etc. This story deals with the rise of an American business man. A novel by Henry James, a novelette by Grace Denio Litchfield, and short stories by "Uncle Remus," Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, H. H., Julian Hawthorne, and other equally well-known writers will appear at various times.

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

Under this heading may be included a series of papers on the Cities of Italy by W. D. Howells, the illustrations being reproductions of etchings and drawings by Joseph Pennell; a series on

THE NEW NORTHWEST,

being an interesting group of papers by E. V. Smalley, Lieut. Schwatka, Principal Grant (of Kingston, Ontario), and others, descriptive of little-known regions; papers on French and American art—sculpture and painting, with some exquisite illustrations; papers on the first being by Professor Langley and others. Under Architecture are included those of Mrs. Van Rensselaer's articles on Churches, City and Country Houses, etc. Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., will describe

ASTRONOMY, ARCHITECTURE & HISTORY,

PROGRESS IN SANITARY DRAINING;

E. C. Stedman, Edmund Gosse and others will furnish literary essays; George W. Cable will contribute in various ways; several papers on sport and adventure will soon be published, and will write from time to time on outdoor subjects.

Readers of The Century may feel sure of keeping abreast of the times on leading subjects that may properly come within the province of a monthly magazine. Its circulation is now about 140,000 monthly, the November number exceeding that figure. Subscriptions should date from this number, beginning the War Series and Mr. Howell's novel. Price $4 00 a year, 35 cents a number. All book-sellers and news-dealers sell it and take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to the publishers.

A free specimen of The Century will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

THE CENTURY CO., New York, N. Y.

ST. NICHOLAS

FOR

ATTRACTIONS FOR 1884-5.

No printed periodical can take the place of parent, pastor, or school-teacher; but a good magazine can supplement their work and influence to a wonderful degree. In view of this, it is not extravagant to say that—instead of "Can we afford to take St. Nicholas?"—the question of every earnest household in English-speaking countries, to-day, should be "Can we afford NOT to take St. Nicholas?"

has grown familiar to hundreds of thousands of young readers; and their interest and intelligent enjoyment have constantly inspired the editor and publishers to fresh effort. To-day its strength is in its wholesome growth, its sympathy with young life, its hearty recognition of the movement of events, and its steadily increasing literary and pictorial resources. The following are some of the good things already secured for future numbers of St. Nicholas:

"His One Fault," a serial story for boys, by the popular author, J. T. Trowbridge.

"Historic Girls," a companion series to "Historic Boys." By E. S. Brooks.

"Ready for Business"; suggestions to boys about to choose an occupation,—based on personal interviews with prominent representatives of various trades and professions. By G. J. Manson.

"Driven Back to Eden," a serial. By E. P. Roe.

"Talks for Young Folks," a series of papers, by H. H. (Helen Jackson).

"Among the Law-makers"; recollections of a boy-page in the U. S. Senate,—containing much political information, both instructive and amusing. By Edmund Alton.

"Davy and the Goblin," a very funny serial story by a new writer, Chas. Carryl.

Short stories by Louisa M. Alcott.

"The Progress of Invention"; "From Palanquin to Parlor-car," "From Cross-bow to 100-ton Gun," etc. Descriptive papers, by Chas. E. Bolton.

"Art Work for Young Folks"; papers on decorative handicraft, by Chas. G. Leland.

"Sheep or Silver?" a story of Texas life. By the late Rev. William M. Baker.

"A Garden of Girls," being six short stories for girls, by Six Leading Writers.

"Tales of Two Continents"; stories of adventure, by H. H. Boyesen.

The Illustrations will be the work of the very best artists and engravers,—and there will be plenty of them. In the November and December numbers are beautiful

COLORED FRONTISPIECES.

Buy the November number for the children. It costs only 25 cents, and all book and news dealers sell it. The subscription price is $3 a year, and now is just the time to subscribe.

A free specimen copy of St. Nicholas will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A HOME DRUGGIST TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and amongst all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

POETRY

BITTER SWEET.

To the rink the dudelet hies,
O'er the polished surface flies
With an easy, graceful motion;
Ain't it fine?

But that dude all day to-morrow,
With a heart bowed down to sorrow,
Will be very busy rubbing
On his spine.

WHY SHE WOULDN'T.

"Grant me a favor before I go?"
Pleading Augustus soft and low;
"Lay your dear head upon my breast,
Encircling arms shall guard its rest,
And love in a kiss shall be expressed!
Ah, do not, do not say me no—
I die to be by your lips caressed!"

"Dear boy," she murmured, "not to-night;
Don't think me cool and heartless quite;
But I cannot kiss you before you go;
Not that I love you less, you know;
Nor that I wish caprice to show;
But simply because—I'll tell you right—
I hate the smell of onions!"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AUNT'S DISAPPOINTMENT.

BY M. O. H.

For a wonder Kate Burton's chattering tongue had been silent for the last ten minutes, during which time she had been watching Aunt Hetty's active movements in the clothes-yard below.

"Nellie, what do you suppose is the reason Aunt Hetty never married?"

Nellie did not raise her eyes from the book she was reading, but well knowing that Katie would give her no peace until she answered, said:

"I don't know. Perhaps she never had an offer."

"Pshaw! Nellie, there's no woman but what has offers."

"Well, then, perhaps she didn't have one that suited her."

"I don't believe it's that either. It's my belief—" here Kate dropped her voice to a low, mysterious whisper—"that she has been disappointed."

"As most girls set their hearts on being married, and she has failed to reach that height of earthly felicity, no doubt she has been," said Nellie, dryly.

"What nonsense; Nellie, you know what I mean—that she has been disappointed in love."

Knowing that it was useless to try to read, now that Kate had mounted her favorite hobby, Nellie closed her book in despair.

"I should think that even your active imagination would despair of making a heroine of romance out of so unpromising a subject as Aunt Hetty."

"You may laugh as much as you like, but I've watched her for sometime, and it's my belief that she's the victim of some deeply rooted sorrow."

"She don't seem to have wasted away much under its consuming influence."

"Well, no," returned Kate, regarding Aunt Hetty's portly figure with an injured aspect, as though she considered it in the light of a personal grievance that she had not wasted away to a shadow, after the most approved model of modern heroines; "but then grief don't affect everyone alike. Anyway, I am convinced that my conjectures are correct, from circumstances that have come to my knowledge."

"What circumstances?"

"Oh, a variety. Did you ever notice the ring she wears? She told me the other day that she had worn it twenty years, and that nothing could tempt her to remove it. I'm convinced that it is some love token. And then, one night, I opened the door of her room suddenly, and she seemed very much confused, hiding what looked like a piece of folded paper in her bosom."

"Most people would feel rather confused at having the door of her room opened so unceremoniously," retorted Nellie. "I believe that it is customary to knock on such occasions; but one can scarcely expect you to descend to any common-sense measure."

"I'll ask Aunt Hetty about it this very evening," said Kate with a toss of her head "and then we'll see which of us is right."

Kate was as good as her word.

After the tea things were cleared away, and Aunt Hetty brought forward the inevitable knitting work, with which she occupied her spare hours, Kate drew her chair close to the old lady's, putting her in the best of humor, by praising the soft white lambs-wool mittens she was knitting, and offering to hold the skein of yarn for her to wind.

"Aunt," she said, giving a significant glance at Nellie, to see if she was listening, "didn't you have a good many beaux when you was a girl?"

"No, child. When I was young girls didn't have so many fixings an' furbelows as they have nowadays."

"I didn't mean that kind, aunt," returned Kate biting her lips as she met Nellie's mischievous glance; "but young men admirers?"

"I wan't never troubled with them kind neither. You see, Bridgewater was a quiet sort of a place; most of the young men was either married or moved out West."

"But you must have had offers of marriage, aunt? Please tell me all about them."

"La, child! there ain't none of 'em worth mentioning. There was Joe Higgins, whose fust wife was a Parsons. You see he had a house full of children, as wild and certainly as unmanageable as so many cubs, and he wanted some one to look after 'em. But, sakes alive! I had no idee of makin' such a slave of myself."

"And that was all, aunt!" said Kate in a disappointed tone.

"Le' me see," responded the old lady, her round, good-natured face assuming a reflective air. "Yes, there was Zeke Underhill, he was sort o' sneakin' round after me when I was a gal. But father, he took a mortal mislikin' to him; said he was a poor, shiftless critter, and I guess, on the hull, he was in the rights on't. He married Jerushy Dean, as smart a woman as ever stepped, and I don't wish myself in her shoes. I hear that he loafs about the tavern the heft of the time, an' his wife don't know from one meal to another what they'll have to eat, or if they'll have anything."

"But where did you get the ring that you always wear?" persisted Kate.

"I earned it picking berries, I got most all my clothes that way when I was a gal."

"But why don't you ever take it off?"

"Oh! 'cause it ain't a good sign. Don't never take a ring off your finger unless you want to change your luck; an' on the hull, I'm pretty well satisfied with mine."

"It's nigh onto twenty-five years," resumed Aunt Hetty, "but I remember the first time I wore it as if 'twas only yesterday. 'Twas the day that Dan Quimby made his proposal."

"There, aunt, I've caught you!" interrupted Kate, shaking her fingers archly at the old lady. "So Dan Quimby proposed to you, did he? Please tell all about it."

"La, child, there ain't nothing to tell."

"Oh! yes there is, aunt—there must be. Now, commence at the beginning and tell me everything he said and you said."

"Lawful! sakes! how the child does run on! I never saw the beat on't, never! I'll tell you all that there is to tell, as nigh as I kin recollect it. You see, huckleberries were jest gittin' ripe, an' arter dinner I tuck a pail an' went out, calculatin' to be able to pick half-dozen quarts afore supper.

"Jest as I got to the foot of 'Huckleberry Hill,' who should I see but Dan Quimby.

"As soon as I sot eyes on him I knew he had something on his mind but he didn't say nothin', for he was sort o' bashful, but kept walkin' 'long side of me, pickin' berries, until he had got nigh onto a half-ful.

"Then he hemmed and hawed an' says:

"'Hetty,' says he, 'you know I've been thinking of getting married this long time.'

"Here he sort of stuttered, an' stopped."

"Didn't your heart palpitate, aunt?"

"No, dear; I wasn't troubled with the palpitation of the heart in them days."

"'Yes, Dan,' says I; 'an' I should say that you'd been thinkin' on't quite long enough.'

"'So I think,' says Dan, 'an' I've concluded that I might as well get spliced next Thursday as any time. She wanted me to ask you to stan' up with her. An' if it so be that you could, to come over to her house to-night, sure.'"

"Dear me! aunt," exclaimed Kate, opening her eyes widely at this unexpected conclusion, "didn't you feel terrible?"

"La, no, child! What was there to feel terrible about? I knew Dan Quimby an' Sue Prouty had been keepin' comp'ny for more'n a year; an' all the wonder was that they hadn't got married afore."

"And what about the letter, Aunt Hetty," said Nellie a little maliciously, "that Kate saw you hiding in your bosom when she opened the door on you so suddenly?"

"La, me, child! that wasn't a letter. It was a plaster that Dr. Cure-all gin me for my rumatiz; and it's dune me a heap of good."

Here Nellie burst into a hearty laugh, under the cover of which Kate beat a rapid retreat to her own room, where she had both time and opportunity to reflect, upon the terrible nature of Aunt Hetty's disappointment.

THE MISER'S BEQUEST.

"Please, sir, here's a letter."

"All right, Mary. Now, then," added Philip Acre, as the door closed behind Mary's substantial back, "let's see what my unknown correspondent has to say. A black seal, eh? Not having any relations to lose, I am not alarmed at the prognostic!"

He broke the seal, and glanced leisurely over the short, business-like communication contained within, with a face that varied from incredulous surprise to sudden gladness.

"Am I dreaming?" he murmured, rubbing his eyes, and shaking himself, as if to insure complete possession of his senses. "No, I'm wide awake, and in my right mind; it is no delusion—no part of my waking visions! But who would ever suppose that old Thomas Mortimer, whom I haven't seen since I was a boy of 16, and picked him out of the river half dead between cramp and fright, would die and leave me all his money? Why, I'm not the shadow of a relation; but then I never heard that the old man had any kith or kin, so I can't imagine any harm in taking advantage of his odd freak! Rich—am I really to be rich?—is my Aladdin vision to be an actual fact? Oh, Edith, Edith!"

He clasped both hands over his eyes, sick and giddy with the thought that the lovely, far-off star of his adoration would be brought near to him at last by the magnet, gold. All those years of patient waiting, which he feared were before him, were to be bridged over by the strange old miser's bequest; he might claim Edith now.

How full of heart sunshine were the weeks that flitted over the head of the accepted lover—brightened by Edith's smiles—made beautiful by the soft radiance of Edith's love!

There was only one alloying shadow—the almost imperceptible touch of distrust and suspicion with which stern old Dr. Wyllis regarded his future son-in-law.

Ah! he feared to trust his only child to the keeping of any man who had not been proved in the fiery furnace of trial!

It was precisely a week before the day appointed for the wedding, and the soft lights veiled by shades of ground glass were just lighted in Dr. Wyllis's drawing-room, where Edith sat among her white roses and heliotrope, working on a bit of cambric ruffling, and singing to herself.

She was a slender, beautiful girl, with violet eyes, a blue-veined forehead, and glossy abundant curls, of that pale gold that painters love to portray.

"I wonder if Mortimer Place is so very lovely?" she said to a silver-haired lady who sat opposite. "Philip is going to take me there when we return from our wedding tour, aunty; he says it is the sweetest place a poet's fancy could devise, with flowers and shrubberies, and delicious copses! Oh! shall we not be happy there?"

She started up with a bright sudden flush, for even while the words were trembling on her lips, Philip Acre came into the room, his handsome face looking a little troubled, yet cheerful withal.

Mrs. Wyllis, with an arch nod at her niece, disappeared into the perfumed perspective of the conservatory, leaving the lovers to themselves.

"You are looking grave, Philip," said Edith, as he bent over and kissed her cheek.

"And I am feeling so, darling. I have a very unpleasant disclosure to make to-night—our marriage must be postponed indefinitely."

"Philip! for what reason?"

"To enable me by diligent labor at my profession to realize sufficient means to support you, dearest, in a manner satisfactory to your father's expectations and my own wishes."

"But, Philip, I thought——"

"You thought me the heir of Thomas Mortimer's wealth! So I was, Edith, a few hours since, but I have relinquished all claim to it now. When I accepted the bequest I was under the impression that no living heir existed. I learnt to-day that a distant cousin—a woman—is alive, although, my lawyer tells me, in ignorance of her relationship to Thomas Mortimer. Of course I shall transfer the property to her immediately."

"But, Philip, the will has made it legally yours!"

"Legally it has; but, Edith, could I reconcile it to my idea of truth and honor to avail myself of old Mortimer's fanciful freak, at this woman's expense? I might take the hoarded wealth, but I could never respect myself again could I dream of legally defrauding the rightful heir. Nay, dearest, I may lose name and wealth, but I would rather die than suffer a single stain on my honor as a Christian gentleman!"

"You have done right, Philip," said Edith, with sparkling eyes. "We will wait, and hope on, happy in loving one another more dearly than ever. But who is she? What is her name?"

"That's just what I didn't stop to inquire. I will write again to my lawyer to ask these questions, and to direct that a deed of conveyance be instantly made out; and then, darling——"

His lips quivered a moment, yet he manfully completed the bitter sentence—"Then I will begin the battle of life over again."

And Edith's loving eyes told him what she thought of his noble self-abnegation—a sweet testimonial.

"Hem!" said Dr. Wyllis polishing his eye-glasses magisterially with a silk crimson pocket-handkerchief; "I didn't suppose the young fellow had so much stamina about him—a very honorable thing to do. Edith, I have never felt quite certain about Phil Acre's being worthy of you before——"

"Papa!"

"But my mind is made up now. When is he coming again?"

"This evening, sir," faltered Edith, the violet eyes softly drooping.

"Tell him, Edith, that he may have you next Wednesday, just the same as ever! And as for the law-practicing—why, there's time enough for that afterwards. Child, don't strangle me with your kisses—keep 'em for Phil!"

He looked after his daughter with eyes were strangely dim.

"Tried—and not found wanting!" he muttered indistinctly.

The perfume of orange-blossoms had died away, the glimmer of pearls and satin were hidden in velvet caskets and traveling trunks—and Mr. and Mrs. Acre, old-married people of full a month's duration, were driving along a country road in the amber glow of a glorious autumn sunset.

"Hallo! which way is Thomas going?" said Philip, leaning from the window, as the carriage turned out of the main road.

"I told him the direction to take, Phil!" said Edith, with bright, sparkling eyes. "Let me have own way just for once! We are going to our new home."

"Are we?" said Phil, with a comical grimace. "It is to be love in a cottage, I suppose?"

"Wait until you see, sir," said Mrs. Acre, pursing up her little rosebud of a mouth. And Philip "waited" dutеously.

"Where are we?" he asked in astonishment, when the carriage drew up in front of a stately pillared portico, which seemed not entirely unfamiliar to him. "Surely this is Mortimer Place?"

"I shouldn't be surprised if it was," said Doctor Wyllis, emerging from the doorway. "Walk in, my boy—come, Edith! Well, how do you like the looks of your new home?"

"Our new home?" repeated Philip. "I do not understand you, sir."

"Why, I mean that your little wife yonder is the sole surviving relative of Thomas Mortimer, although she never knew it till this morning. Her mother was old Mortimer's cousin, but some absurd quarrel had caused a total cessation of intercourse between the two branches of the family. I was aware of the facts all along; but I wasn't sorry to avail myself of the opportunity of seeing what kind of stuff you were made of, Phil Acre! And now, as the deed of conveyance isn't made out yet, I don't suppose your lawyer need trouble himself about it. The heiress won't quarrel with you, I'll be bound!"

Philip Acre's cheek flushed, and then grew pale with strong, hidden emotion, as he looked at his fair wife, standing beside him, when the sunset turned her bright hair to coils of shining gold, and thought how unerringly the hand of Providence had straightened out the tangled web of his destiny.

Out of the darkness had come light.

CANADA AS A WINTER RESORT.

From an illustrated article by W. George Beers, in the February Century, we quote the following: "How shall I hope to describe what has been done to make Canada as a winter resort better known to all the world? The first snow-fall is an intoxicant. Boys go snow-mad. Montreal has a temporary insanity. The houses are prepared for the visit of King North Wind, and Canadians are the only people in the world who know how to keep warm outdoors as well as indoors. The streets are gay with life and laughter, and everybody seems determined to make the most of the great carnival. Business goes to the dogs. There is a mighty march of tourists and townspeople crunching over the crisp snow, and a constant jingle of sleigh-bells. If you go to any of the toboggan slides, you will witness a sight that thrills the onlooker as well as the tobogganist. The natural hills were formerly the only resort; but some one introduced the Russian idea of erecting a high wooden structure, up one side of which you drag your toboggan, and down the other side of which you fly like a rocket. These artificial slides are the most popular, as they are easier of ascent, and can be made so as to avoid cahots, or bumps.

"Within the last few years a score of regular toboggan clubs have been organized. Everybody has gone crazy on the subject, and men, women and children revel in the dashing flight. The hills are lit by torches stuck in the snow on each side of the track, and huge bonfires are kept burning, around which gather picturesque groups. Perhaps of all sports of the carnival this is the most generally enjoyed by visitors. Some of the slides are very steep and look dangerous, and the sensation of rushing down the hill on the thin strip of basswood is one never to be forgotten.

"How did you like it?" asked a Canadian girl of an American visitor, whom she had steered down the steepest slides.

"Oh!" I wouldn't have missed it for a hundred dollars!"

"You'll try it again, won't you?"

"Not for a thousand dollars!"

A dollar of 1804 is worth $600. A dollar of 1884 is worth 85 cents.

SECOND THOUGHTS.

A STORY IN THREE CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER I.—WHICH IS IT TO BE?

"I am sure I don't know!" said Adelaide Berry crossly to herself, as she stood before the glass, hurriedly tying on her plain dark bonnet. * * * "And yet, after all, I suppose it must be 'Yes.' Most people would not be able to see why I should hesitate for a moment!"

But Miss Berry frowned more crossly than before as she said this; and then, having drawn on her gloves, she forgot that she had been in a hurry and stood still for a minute by the dressing-table to think. The truth was, that the worse part of her nature was trying hard to conquer the better; consequently she was feeling by no means happy or at her ease.

Words came to her, which she had read to Mrs. Mountebank only that morning—"No man is bound to be rich or great; no, nor to be wise; but every man is bound to be honest."

"And I am honest," she said to herself in a low, quiet tone. "Who dares to say that I am not?"

She was a young woman of seven or eight and twenty, dark-complexioned, and rather sharp featured; fairly good-looking, with black eyes and shining black hair—very nicely, yet, at the same time, very plainly arranged; for Mrs. Mountebank, with whom she lived as companion, would have found fault at once if the slightest sign of a curl or a braid had appeared, even on an afternoon like the present, when the two were going out together to drink tea at the vicarage.

"Miss Berry!" called a somewhat irritable voice now. "I hope you have nearly finished your dressing! I have been ready these five minutes!"

And Adelaide hurried out, thinking to herself:

"I should be foolish indeed if I said 'No.' I am getting more and more tired every day of this kind of life; and yet—"

But now she had reached the hall, and at the open door stood Mrs. Mountebank—a little old lady, with a pale face and white curls, and robed in rustling black silk, over which a white shawl with lavender border showed to advantage.

The two were soon in the lane; and there, only a few hundred yards distant, was the vicarage—a little, brown, old-fashioned building, almost hidden by trees.

And very near it was another house, also partially hidden by trees, a larger and certainly far handsomer house, with an imposing white front. More than once Adelaide glanced in its direction, but Mrs. Mountebank did not observe her.

The sky was dull, the air was chill, but the ground was dry; and both ladies felt that the short walk was refreshing and cheering them. But they spoke scarcely a word as they went; they saw so much of each other that they really had very little to say.

They arrived at the vicarage, and were presently seated at the table in the bright, cheerful drawing-room, and being talked to by the kind but absent-minded vicar occasionally; and by his busy, happy little wife continually.

And now Miss Berry felt that she might consider herself relieved for a time from her duties as companion, for Mrs. Mountebank, being an old inhabitant of the village, would find enough to talk about—with Mrs. Leigh—for some time; and very possibly would even forget her companion's presence.

As Adelaide (even more silent than usual this evening, Mrs. Leigh thought her) sipped her tea very leisurely and composedly to all appearance, the door was thrown open and Mr. Stapleton announced—a tall, thin gentleman, with a face as dreamy and gentle as the vicar's own. And Adelaide started visibly and spilt a few drops of tea upon the pretty, bright table-cover. But no one observed her, for all were busy in welcoming the new-comer, who was a person of no small importance in the village, being both rich and benevolent. He was also unmarried, and, as far as was known, disengaged.

As he went round shaking hands the gentleman was, in a slow, kindly voice, making his excuses for being late. But no one appeared especially to regard them; the wonder would have been had he been in time, for, as every one who knew him was aware, he was punctual only in being unpunctual.

"I am afraid I entirely lost myself in a box of new books which I received to-day," he said. "I am very much ashamed to own it; but it is better to tell the truth at once."

Adelaide did not feel pleased at this.

"Complimentary to me!" she was thinking. "He knew I should be here. However, everybody knows that he is always late. * * * And, besides, what can it signify to me? I have quite made up my mind now; and I shall not say yes!"

No one imagined for a moment that Mr. Stapleton had ever given a thought to Miss Berry; therefore Mrs. Leigh was not careful that he should have an opportunity of conversing with her as she otherwise would have been. And Mr. Stapleton did not feel inclined to make his opportunity. His time would come. And he engaged himself in conversation with the vicar, for the most part, and appeared quite content.

And Miss Berry sat holding wool for Mrs. Mountebank to wind—or looking through a collection of photographs with Mrs. Leigh—thinking her own thoughts the while; and, in a way, she was also content.

But the hours passed quickly away, and the evening seemed soon over; and bonnets were once more donned, and the two ladies were returning. And Mr. Stapleton had volunteered his services as escort, to Mrs. Mountebank's evident gratification.

And on the way he contrived to find an opportunity to whisper—gravely enough:

"Is it 'Yes' or 'No,' Miss Berry?"

And Miss Berry whispered hurriedly in return, "I'll write."

CHAPTER II.—NO.

And she did write.

And there sat Mr. Stapleton, the owner and occupier of the white house among the trees, on a dismal rainy day, in his little, dark, dull, dusty, study, whose one window was almost overgrown by a now fast-withering creeper—reading her letter.

He sighed as he finished it and laid it on the table before him. And then, rubbing his hands, for they were cold, he cast a forlorn glance at the black, smoky fire.

"I had thought—" he uttered, half sorrowfully, half resignedly. "But—never mind. So our dreams vanish."

And the wind moaned outside, and the rain, and the dying leaves of the creeper pattered dolefully against the window. And now a servant entered—an untidy girl, with a black face and dirty apron—and with a great noise and clatter she made up the fire and departed.

Next, Mr. Stapleton took up the letter again, and re-read it. It was a long one; and in it Adelaide Berry had told him all her mind. Part of it ran thus:

"I wished to be free—and to be mistress of such a house as yours. I thought how surprised everybody would be, and what a little triumph it would be for me. But—when I remember how good and honorable you were—though I tried to say yes from mercenary motives, I could not. And now I am glad and thankful that my better self conquered. The simple truth is that I had no thought of loving you; for I never dreamed, till I received your letter yesterday, that you would care for me. I thank—I respect—I honor you; but this would not be enough to make me the good, and true, and loving wife you deserve."

It was No, then.

Mr. Stapleton gave another long sigh, rose from his chair, thrust the letter into his breast coat-pocket, and left the room.

And then, taking his hat and an umbrella, but forgetting his overcoat, he went out into the rain.

In the course of an hour or so he returned, soaking wet through, but far more cheerful and hopeful than when he had set out.

"She is worth having," he said to himself, as he closed the hall-door behind him, and was proceeding to the study. "I will not give her up yet. But I must have patience; there is nothing like it. I will wait a year and see how she treats me. But, dear me!" suddenly observing how the rain was dripping from his drenched garments to the floor, "I had no idea that it was so wet!" And he turned again, and went into the direction of the kitchen.

CHAPTER III.—YES.

Autumn gave place to winter. And a very long, dreary winter it was, Miss Berry thought. However, it passed away at last, and the spring came again; but she even thought the spring dreary also. The flowers seemed so long coming out, the clouds were so many, the sunbeams so few.

At length the summer was advancing.

It was a warm, sunshiny afternoon, and Mrs. Mountebank and her companion sat in a neat, prim little parlor sewing, the latter lady moving her fingers rather listlessly. Neither had spoken for perhaps an hour, when Mrs. Mountebank said suddenly, almost sharply:

"Are you not feeling well, Miss Berry?"

"Yes, thank you, madam," returned Adelaide, the color mounting in an instant into her dark cheeks.

"Then why do you not speak occasionally? You get more and more silent every day, I do believe! And you are as pale, and dull, and dismal looking as it is possible for a person to be, I should think!"

Miss Berry was moving her needle energetically enough now. There was a moment's silence, then she rejoined, in a resolute, but quiet voice—

"I have no doubt but I am all you say, madam, and worse! * * * I do not deserve any further kindness or forbearance from you, for you have shown me both; and I might have been received into a far less happy home than this. I have long wished to speak, but I had not the courage. I had better leave you, if you please, a month from this. In a strange place, with only strange faces around me, I may have the good sense to be more contented. Forgive me—I am—"

"My dear Miss Berry!" in a tone of mingled concern and impatience, "what can possibly be the matter with you? Leave me! What do you mean? I don't want you to leave me! And what is more, I shall not take your notice! And so I tell you! Perhaps the hot weather has tried you. Put on your bonnet, and go out for a quiet stroll under the trees. That will do you good, I dare say; and don't let me hear any more nonsense about leaving!"

And Miss Berry dried her tears, uttered her thanks, and did as she was bid.

And, ten minutes later, she was slowly walking up and down a shady field-path, white hoary old oaks waved their green branches over her head, and whispered their sweet "leaf music" in her ear, and "clouds of bluebells" stretched away under the hedgerows, and dog-rose and bramble were flaunting their long streamers against the clear sky. And bees were humming, and grasshoppers chirping, and butterflies flitting hither and thither. And all together made up a happy, living picture of a golden summer day.

But Miss Berry herself was the center figure in the picture, of course; and she certainly did not look happy.

She had long ago discovered that she had made a great mistake last autumn. If she had been honest, she had also been hasty; and "too great caution, too much rashness, both alike are harmful." Honor and respect for Mr. Stapleton had by this time developed into something far deeper and stronger; but, sad to say, though she not unfrequently met that gentleman at the vicarage, or in the village, he seemed entirely to have forgotten the past, and simply treated her as the most commonplace acquaintance might have done.

But now she paused in her walk and listened. What did that sound of rushing and running mean? Were all the cows in the adjoining meadow setting out on a race?—or, what? Why, it was Farmer North's bull—the terror of the village! And after whom was it rushing? But he (the bull) could not leap the stile, and——

"Oh, it is Mr. Stapleton!" Adelaide exclaimed, aloud, in distress; and at the same moment the gentleman leaped the stile, and, only a little out of breath apparently, was proceeding, without much discomposure, on his way, when a trembling, shaking voice said:

"Oh! Are you hurt?"

Mr. Stapleton turned with a great start; and there, with flushed face and frightened eyes, stood Miss Berry.

"No," he slowly answered; adding then, "and if I had been, what would it have signified?"

The only answer was a deeper flush.

"Would you have cared?" coming nearer.

A low "Yes."

"Then you must think just a little more of me than you did last autumn?"

The question had to be repeated, and then came a still lower "Yes."

Mr. Stapleton heard the bull bellowing in disappointed rage on the other side of the stile, and in his heart he thanked him.

"Then—if I once more beg of you to become my wife—for, believe me, I have never forgotten you for a day—no, nor for an hour, during these past months—what will you say?"

And, is there any need to write, it was Yes after all?—The Quiver.

PIG IRON.

The Iron Era, of Dover, New Jersey, has seen proper to throw the following piece of pig iron at us:—

"Like most Democratic papers, the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST talks upon the tariff question merely for the sake of being heard. When confronted with actual facts and figures and asked for straightforward answers to pertinent questions, it hauls down its flag and slips out of the dispute without a word in rejoinder, confessing tacitly that its position is defenceless. We say it is so with nearly or quite all Democratic papers. They make the most recklessly absurd statements in regard to the tariff and when put to the proof confess by their silence their inability to prove it."

It came whizzing along, but did no more harm than a pop-gun at the battle of Waterloo.

Our esteemed pig iron friend is dying for tariff controversy. In his apparent opinion pig iron is the idol for universal worship, the beginning and end of human regard, the grand object of protection, regardless of the millions of farmers, mechanics, laborers, manufacturers, artisans, merchants, traders and producers whom, we think, have as many and as just rights as Dover pig iron masters.

As we said before, our friend of the Iron Era is itching for a fight over the tariff question. He struts around with a chip on his shoulder and dares the whole Democratic editorial fraternity to knock it off. So far as we are concerned, we wish the belligerent editor to know that life is too short and important matters are too pressing for any such senseless conflict.

We have more than once given our idea of an honest protective tariff and in plain language. We do so again as follows:—

"A tariff framed for the raising of ample revenue to meet the demands of public indebtedness, and the wants of a government economically and honestly administered, but not one dollar for a surplus corruption fund. A tariff so adjusted that labor of all kinds, and business interests of every grade, shall be fairly, equitably and practically protected, both from the pauper system of foreign countries and from the Shylock mercenaries of our own."

There we stand, and any man who cannot comprehend the meaning of our words, must possess a skull fabricated out of that precious metal called pig iron.

Our flag is nailed to the mast.

It floats for the real welfare of all, not for the gain of subsidized favorites.

SPLEEN.

The Grand Jury of Union county has found indictments for criminal libel against ex-Judge William Gibby, Robt. D. Gibby, former "local" of the Rahway Advocate, Street Commissioner R. W. Hughes, of Rahway, and Henry Ritter, a Middlesex county farmer, residing near Woodbridge, N. J. Previous to the late election a circular was sent out charging ex-Senator Benjamin A. Vail with attempting to defraud Ritter, who was his client, of a farm. The "ex"-Senator thinks this circular was a powerful factor in securing his defeat by our present Democratic Senator, Robt. L. Livingston. The case will come up for trial on Feb. 24, in the Union County Courts at Elizabeth. The "ex"-Senator will receive his "consolation" after that date. It was not the circular that defeated "Benny". It was—popular opinion.

The thermometer on January 22d recorded 50 degrees below zero, at Mt. Washington, N. H., which is one degree colder than the lowest temperature ever experienced here.

Comptroller Carlton, of Elizabeth, has notified the Singer Sewing Machine Company that they must pay to the city their back taxes of $46,000, or he will proceed to enforce the law and collect them.

On Monday last the U. S. Senate adopted Senator Bayard's denunciatory resolution against the recent attempt to blow up public buildings in London. The bill denounces the attempt as uncivilized, cruel and barbarous. Senator Riddleberger was the only person voting against its adoption.

The Liberty Bell arrived safe at the New Orleans Exposition on Monday evening last. When near the residence of Jefferson Davis, an invitation was extended him by the Commissioners having the bell in charge, to join them and proceed to New Orleans. The invitation was accepted, and immense enthusiasm was manifested upon the arrival at the Exposition Grounds.

The Monmouth County Grand Jury have returned 65 true bills, including 6 new ones, against Frank Patterson, of Long Branch, for forgery. Henry Nyse Hendrickson, Assessor of Holmdel township, was indicted for an alleged alteration of the assessment lists. Counsellors Lanning and Durand were indicted on complaint of Minnie Cummings, the actress. The charges in the latter case grew out of her difficulties in disposing of her cottages at Elberon and Long Branch.

Col. Edwin F. Applegate, editor and proprietor of the Monmouth Inquirer, died at his home in Freehold, N. J., on Friday night last, at the age of 60 years. He served with honor in the civil war as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fourteenth Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers, being in active service for nearly four years. He was Postmaster of Freehold for nearly eight years, and was a prominent member of the New Jersey State Editorial Association, the Grand Army of the Republic, and a number of civic societies.

Dynamiters attempted to blow up the Parliament buildings in London, Saturday afternoon last. While the buildings were crowded with visitors, dynamite bombs were simultaneously exploded in the vestibule of the House of Parliament, the lobby of the House of Commons and the Tower of London. Sixteen persons were seriously injured, and intense excitement existed. Two policemen named Cox and Long were probably fatally injured. The amount of damage done was immense. No clue to the perpetrators of the crime have been discovered. It is conjectured that the explosive packages were conveyed into the buildings by women.

SENATOR DOUGHTY CONFIRMED.

In executive session of the Senate last Monday night, ex-Senator E. S. Doughty, of Somerset, was confirmed for Commissioner of the State Sinking Fund. Senators Ezra and W. B. Miller, Democrats, were absent. Senator Fish, Republican, did not vote. Senator Vanderbilt, of Mercer, is understood to have voted in the negative. The others all voted to confirm the Governor's nomination.

THE NEW JERSEY LUNATIC ASYLUM.

The report of the State Lunatic Asylum at Trenton for the past year shows that since the opening of the institution in 1834 there have been treated 5,963 patients, of whom 1,263 died—694 men and 569 women. There were discharged recovered 2,231; improved, 1,569; unimproved, 241; escaped, 20; not insane, 15; removed to other institutions, 363. During the last year there were received 175 patients, of whom 52 were discharged recovered, 12 improved, 11 unimproved, and 64 died. There are now in the asylum 333 male and 330 female patients.

THE STATE LIBRARY.

State Librarian Morris R. Hamilton, in his annual report laid before the Legislature, says: "According to the last annual report the whole number of books in the library was 28,861, to which the following additions have been made during the year: By purchase, miscellaneous books, 15; by purchase, law books, 87; by subscription, papers and magazines, 18; by individual donations, books, 30; by individual donations, papers, 34; from United States, bound volumes, 199; From State Treasurer, bound volumes, 190; from other States, 267; total additions, 840. Making the whole number now in the library, 29,701.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION IN NEW JERSEY.

The report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction has been filed. It states as the amount of money appropriated by the State for the support of public schools, $1,496,908; the township school tax, $35,960.05; surplus revenue, $32,551.31; district and city tax for teachers' salaries, $823,386.92; district and city tax for building and repairing school houses, $524,845.14; total amount for all school purposes, $2,413,876.10. The value of school property is $6,350,807; the number of school districts, 1,356; the number of school houses, 1,596; the number of private schools, having 25 pupils or more, 218; the number of teachers—male, 837; female, 2,850; average salary per month paid to male teachers, $61.63, and to female teachers, $35.64; cost of education, per pupil, based on total school census, $5.36, and the number of children the school houses will seat, 193,803.

OUR VIEWS EXACTLY.

Ex-Senator Vail does not at all relish the "Ex." His game was so well set up for re-election, and he was so liberally supplied with funds by the Republican State Committee and the several candidates for United States Senator, that he finds it difficult to account to his backers for his defeat. With a view of providing an excuse, he has appeared before the Union County Grand Jury, and secured an indictment against several prominent gentlemen of Rahway, charging them with libel in circulating a paper which charged him with attempting to deprive a young man of a piece of property. Vail claims that this helped to defeat him, but as nobody heard of it until after election, this may be considered more as a pretence than a claim. The fact of the matter is, that there never was any reason for his election in a Democratic county, except that he has always been able to make a trade with the candidate for Sheriff, and so run himself in at the expense of his associate on the ticket. He was beaten this time because of a failure to work the usual scheme, and because of the strength of the Democratic nominee, the present Senator Livingston. Mr. Vail would have done better if he had swallowed his defeat more gracefully.—Trenton True American.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The State Legislature has now got down to active work. On Monday evening last a number of bills were introduced into both branches, none of which apply particularly to this section. Ex-Senator Doughty, of Somerset, was confirmed as Commissioner of the Sinking Fund in joint session. Senator Vanderbilt, of Mercer, was the only "kicker" against the confirmation of Governor Abbett's nominee.

Among the bills introduced in the House Monday night was one contributing $500, the amount of the bribe made to Assemblyman Slinn, to the State Asylum for Deaf and Dumb; one making the punishment for slander the same as for disorderly conduct; another making wages to employees by corporations due daily, and another regulating burials in cemeteries by providing that all bodies shall be covered with four feet and one-half feet of earth, that there shall be no disinterment between May 1 and Nov. 1 except by order of the courts, and that the body of no person who shall have died from small-pox, yellow fever or other infectious disease shall be disinterred unless it shall have been buried in a metallic casket.

At the meeting of the House of Assembly Tuesday afternoon a resolution from the Democratic side asking the New Jersey Senators and Congressmen to support Congressman McAdoo's bill making land gifts to soldiers of the late rebellion forced the Republican majority to the wall. They were not anxious, on the one hand, to sustain McAdoo, and on the other they dared not vote against the soldiers, and to escape a direct vote the House adjourned for the day. In the evening there was a joint caucus called, not so much for agreement as to action upon that resolution because it had been called the day before as to consider other matters.

A current rumor represents that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company proposes to make an aggressive fight for water front privileges at Jersey City. The company contemplate an alliance, it is said, with the Philadelphia and Reading or the New Jersey Central that will admit it to terminal privileges at Communipaw. One of the things the Pennsylvania Company would not like to see is the Baltimore and Ohio with a station at Jersey City. It is said that bills are to be introduced next week that will create a deal of excitement in railroad circles.

Governor Abbett renominated Edw. Bettle, of Camden, on Tuesday, one of the State Tax Commissioners, and he was honored by an immediate confirmation by the Senate, by a unanimous vote. In the House Mr. Alcott's bill to require teachers in public schools to instruct their pupils particularly with reference to the effect of alcohol on the human system, and take from the public school that neglects the direction the appropriation allotted to it out of the school fund, was discussed. This was regarded as a temperance move, and the Republicans, as well as some of the Democrats, were up in arms against it at once. On motion of Mr. Baird the penalty was stricken out, and the bill was ordered to a third reading.

Speaker Armstrong's bill making the widow the heir-at-law to all her husband's personal property met with opposition from Messrs. Besson and Keasbey on the ground that it would open the way to endless litigation.

Besides the consideration of the McAdoo resolution, the joint caucus Tuesday evening considered the proposition to cut Gov. Abbett out of his honor of appointments and to have them rest in joint meeting. The Republicans of the two Houses are afraid that the Governor will make partisan appointments. The joint meeting on the other hand will be controlled by the joint caucus, and appointments in joint meeting will be as partisan the other way as the Governor's would be. No definite action was taken, and it is very doubtful whether, if such a bill be drawn, it can get through the Senate.

The Senate wrangled Wednesday morning over the bill appropriating $10,000 to defray the expenses of New Jersey's official share in the New Orleans Exposition, but the bill was finally recommitted and undoubtedly will pass. The bill which authorizes railroad companies to pay their taxes quarterly instead of annually was amended so as to make the act amendable or repealable by any future Legislature. It was then passed.

A death-blow to ticket scalping will probably be effected by the bill just introduced, which forbids, under a fine of $500 or a year's imprisonment or less, anyone to sell a railroad or steamboat ticket unless he be furnished with a certificate from the proper authorities authorizing him to do so.

Mr. Chapman, of Hudson, called up in the House his concurrent resolution under discussion Tuesday, which instructs the New Jersey representatives in Washington to favor Congressman McAdoo's bill relating to unadjusted claims of soldiers and sailors of the late war. Mr. Keasbey, of Newark, saw what he thought was a fine chance to make some political capital, and he proposed amendments censuring the employment of ex-Confederate soldiers and preferring the use of Union veterans in all civil offices and forbidding their removal to make room for their old opponents. The resolution was passed by a party vote. The Senate adjourned at noon for the week.

A defective flue, or some other cause, created a slight fire in the Capitol at Washington, on Monday last. The damage is about $300.

Whose roosters whipped on Monday night? Some one knows.

Joseph Perry has the past few days been filling his ice house at Echo Lake.

James M. French lost a valuable horse on Tuesday last from heart disease.

Who will be chief of our fire department? The first election will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 10.

James H. Manning has rented for the present year Clark's ice house and is engaged in filling it.

Frederick Baldwin sold on Wednesday last his house and lot on Central avenue to a gentleman from Philadelphia.

William O. Morton has purchased the entire stock and contents of the grocery store recently occupied by T. R. Sloan.

Our residents should not forget the treasury of the lamp lighting committee. It is sustained by voluntary subscriptions.

An Englishman made a red-headed girl awful mad the other day by asking her if she wasn't glad the rain had cooled the hair.

J. N. Wilcox, carpenter and builder, is engaged in renovating and repairing the dwelling house and buildings on Broad street recently purchased by John Darsh.

Elizabeth Clark, eighty-four years of age, died on Saturday last at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Kate B. High. The funeral occurred on Monday. Interment in Fairview Cemetery.

On Thursday evening, Jan 21st, a masquerade party was held at the residence of Addison S. Clark, Esq. Twenty couple were present and a very enjoyable time was had. A. E. Wilcox furnished the music.

The town committee will have to publish their annual statement, together with the list of delinquent taxpayers early in the month of February. Those who do not like to see their names in print can stop it by calling on Collector Pierson and paying the amount of their taxes.

Application was made by William G. Peckham, Esq., as attorney on behalf of the applicants to the Court of Common Pleas on Wednesday last for the appointment of six surveyors of the highway to lay a public road from a point in the Mountain road, near the late residence of Jacob Norvery, running westerly up the mountain until it intersects the public road near the residence of George Long. This is a road where there cannot be much, if any opposition to it, as it follows nearly the whole length of an old public lane or driftway, which has been used for a number of years and belongs to the public. It will open up some very fine building sites, equal, if not better than those on the Orange range of mountains.

Not A Member.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Permit me to use your established journal to deny any connection with the "Scarlet Knights of Temperance." While this organization may be actuated by the best of motives, still I do not desire to appear as a member as has been asserted through the press.

Respectfully,
N. W. PIKE.

The Park Avenue Entertainment.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The second entertainment of the Park avenue course took place last Thursday evening. Ordinarily in such a combination the music is but the background. But in this instance the honors of the evening were fairly divided between the brilliant and experienced reader, and the piano soloist, Miss Katharine Howland of New York. It was this lady's first appearance, and the audience were delighted with the manner in which she performed her part. Her principal selections were classic, and were rendered with an ease, elegance, precision and feeling which are rare. Her response to the encore accorded to her second selection, was that sweet Scotch air, "Bonnie Dundee," which will always find a responsive chord in every listener's heart. The young lady should be congratulated upon her successful appearance, under embarassing circumstances, and a simple desire to give real merit its meed of praise has inspired this communication.

AN ATTENDANT.

OBITUARY.

REV. LEWIS BOND.

An unusually large congregation was in attendance at the funeral of the Rev. Lewis Bond, in the First Presbyterian church of this city last Monday, at 11 o'clock. Mr. Bond had been the officiating minister of that church for more than 35 years, and a resident of the place for 60 years. Had he lived until next October, he would have been 90 years of age, having been born in Elizabeth in 1795. He remained with his father on the farm until twenty-one years old, when having been converted and received into the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, he began his studies for the ministry. After three years preparatory studies in the school of Moses Smith of Elizabeth, he entered Union College in 1820, and the Princeton Theological Seminary two years later. After the usual three years course at the Seminary, he was licensed by the Presbytery of Elizabeth, Oct. 7, 1825, and at once began a six weeks' missionary tour in the neighborhood of Hackettstown and Newton, under the auspices of the Princeton Ladies' Missionary Society. He came to Plainfield as stated supply of the First Presbyterian church, in the fall of 1825, and continued as such until April, 1829, when he was installed as the regular pastor of the church, and so continued in a career of quiet but increasing usefulness, until the year 1857, when at his own request, the pastoral relation was dissolved. As was remarked at the funeral service, he died an old man and abounding in sacred memories, sacred culture, and sacred hopes, to live still in the reference and affection of not a few families of even this rapidly growing and changing city.

HARRY F. READ.

On the 14th instant, Mr. Henry F. Read, of Brooklyn, L. I., died suddenly from disease of the heart. Mr. Read was one of the best known inventors in the country, and devoted his talents to the improvement of labor saving tools and machinery. He was the patentee of meters, wrenches, pipe cutters and vices. It was said most truly of him, that no one ever improved upon any tool that he had perfected. His funeral was largely attended by the machinists and inventors of New York and Brooklyn. He was well known in Plainfield, and often spoke of removing his factory to this place.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.
Union County, Surrogate's Office,
January 13th, 1885.
Charlotte D. Woodruff, the Administratrix of James H. Woodruff, deceased.
On application of the above named Administratrix, it is ordered that said Administratrix give public notice to the creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the county of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Administratrix.

ABSOLUTE AUCTION SYSTEM
IN
Horses, Carriages, Harness, Etc.
NEXT SALE
Thursday, Feb. 5, 1885, at 10 o'clock.
AT THE AMERICAN HORSE EXCHANGE [Limited]
Broadway and 50th st., N. Y.
(Office, 107 John St.)
ALL THE PROPERTY IS PLEDGED TO ABSOLUTE SALE.
Among other attractive offerings will be included a valuable consignment by the executor of the estate of the late Frederic Sherman, of New York—the complete contents of a first-class private stable.
Coach Horses, Saddle Horses, Brougham, Mail Phaeton, (both by Peters, of London), Dog Cart, Village Cart, Covered Depot Wagon, heavy brass mounted Carriage Harness, London make, Tandem Harness, Brown Village-Cart Harness, Saddle and Bridle, Horse Clothing, Bear Robe, Driving Aprons, Suit Livery, Muzzles, Buckets, and stable trappings generally, all in the finest condition.
Buyers for use or speculation should not fail to attend this and the subsequent sales (first Thursday in each month, and oftener if necessary). No property is admitted except for absolute sale without limit. It often happens at this season of the year (as in this case) that owners find it expedient to consign very valuable property to peremptory auction sale. By examining beforehand buyers can purchase as safely at auction as by private negotiation.
Entries for absolute sale only (all others respectfully declined) should be made at the Exchange or at our business office, 107 John street; the earlier the better for advantageous advertising. Property entered will be expected to be delivered at the Exchange on Monday preceding the sale, in order that buyers may have ample time to inspect it before before bidding.

To Dyspeptics.
The most common signs of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, are an oppression at the stomach, nausea, flatulency, water-brash, heart-burn, vomiting, loss of appetite and constipation. Dyspeptic patients suffer untold miseries, bodily and mental. They should stimulate the digestion, and secure regular daily action of the bowels, by the use of moderate doses of Ayer's Pills.
After the bowels are regulated, one of these Pills, taken each day after dinner, is usually all that is required to complete the cure.
AYER'S PILLS are sugar-coated and purely vegetable—a pleasant, entirely safe, and reliable medicine for the cure of all disorders of the stomach and bowels. They are the best of all purgatives for family use.

A regular meeting of the Democratic Association will be held at their rooms on Tuesday evening, Feb. 3d next at 8 o'clock, p. m. Per order

JAMES E. MARTINE, President.
LOUIS F. WADSWORTH, Secretary.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday night.

THE two very handsome new signs on Front street at the head of Park avenue, are the work of Mr. J. Q. Miles, the artist.

MISS NELLA BROWN added to her reputation and success as a reader, in the Park avenue church, Thursday evening of last week.

NIECE'S Orchestra of Newark will furnish the instrumental music upon the occasion of the G. A. R. dramatic entertainment, next Tuesday evening.

AMONG the appointments made at Trenton last week for Commissioners of Deeds, were those of Louis F. Wadsworth and James S. Pope of this city. Both good.

THE Scarlet Knights of Temperance are negotiating for rooms in the Ryder building. This makes another organization for Plainfield working in the good cause.

MR. ANDREW VANDERBEEK of this city, is one of the Freeholders appointed by the Board to look after the interests of Union county in the present Legislature at Trenton.

THE Y. M. C. A. has secured Van Deventer Hall on a lease, for its future headquarters. It will be altered to suit the conveniences of the Association, and possession will probably be had by May 1st.

THE suggestions made by Mayor Rockfellow, that we have a poor farm, where the city's paupers may be made to earn their living, is a good one. The city's money would be well invested if such idea were carried out.

ANY one having a second-hand carpet, and willing to give it for the comfort of a young girl who has consumption, will please leave word at the "Relief Rooms" on Second street, corner of Madison avenue, and it will be sent for.

THE brick store and residence buildings at Nos. 34 and 36 Park avenue, opposite the Y. M. C. A. rooms, were recently purchased for $15,000 by Mr. Wm. Kelly of Asbury Park, who intends to erect an addition at No. 38, the present site of the florist.

CHAS. BOCK received his license on Monday evening last, and on Tuesday morning moved into his new brick building, No. 7 East 2d street, where he would be pleased to see all his old customers, and all others who appreciate a first-class article in his line.

THE minutes of the W. C. T. U. of New Jersey—Eleventh Annual Convention—have been published in a pamphlet of 116 pages, that reviews a past of effective and gratuitous christian work for the cause of temperance. The next convention is to be held at Trenton, Oct. 7th, 8th and 9th.

THE third of a series of novelty concerts now in progress at Steinway Hall, New York, under the direction of Mr. Frank Van Der Stucken, will be given to-morrow evening at eight o'clock, and the public rehearsal will take place this afternoon at two. Miss Fannie Bloomfield will make her first appearance as a soloist.

THE degree of perfection with which "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be mounted and cast at Music Hall, Monday evening, Feb. 2d, has seldom been attained before. W. Davidge, Jr., who will be playing "Marks" in New York city at the time, will engage a substitute there and assume the part for the special occasion in this city.

SOME of the careless tenants of this city's residences, who so culpably and criminally neglect, to remove the ice and snow from their sidewalks, will be brought up suddenly to pay the fine required for such violation of law and decency. They have been often warned—and, it is our opinion, the present Mayor won't warn them again.

ACCORDING to some of the street rumors, Mr. Alex. Gee, when thawing out the fire-well cover at Front and Somerset streets, blew the heavy iron plate about forty thousand feet up in the air. This is a mistake. If the cover went ten feet, it went a good ways. The cause is believed to have been the explosion of a quantity of gas that had leaked into the well. Mr. Gee uses salt, now.

WE expect that by the time of our next issue the plans for the grand hotel at Washington Rock will be so far advanced that we can give the public a satisfactory idea of the size and style of the building. It is now the intent of those interested in the scheme to begin work by April, and a structure 400 feet long, four stories high, with a ninety-foot tower, is the outward appearance at present of this castle in the air.

A YOUNG man named William H. Buckstein attempted to cross the P. & R. railroad track at Dunellen, on Friday morning last, while a fast Philadelphia train was approaching. The horse was struck by the locomotive and instantly killed, the wagon mashed into kindling wood, and the young man thrown a considerable distance. Singular to relate he escaped with only a couple of broken bones. He stated that he saw the train and heard the whistle, but his horse became unmanageable.

"SEVEN-TWENTY-EIGHT" was presented at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week by Arthur Rehan's company in a very satisfactory manner under the circumstances. On account of the serious illness of Mrs. Maeder, the part of "Mrs. Bargiss" was read by Mrs. Russell, to whom much credit is due for overcoming to some extent the difficulties of so perplexing a situation. Messrs. Hotto, Russell, Bartram and Hawey were particularly good in their respective roles, while the orchestra was particularly bad in many instances.

MR. ANTHONY KREGOR, son-in-law of Prof. Samuel G. Frazee, of this city, had a narrow escape from being burned to death, with his entire family, at Elizabeth on Thursday evening last. A fire occurred in a stove beneath the rooms occupied by Mr. Kregor, who was awakened only when the bed on which he was lying was on fire. He had great difficulty in escaping from the rooms, with his wife and two children, in their night clothes, on account of the smoke. Returning to secure some clothing, he found his escape cut off by flames, and was rescued from the window of the second story by the firemen. His goods were insured for $300, which will cover his loss.

THIS (Thursday) evening is possibly the last time a Plainfield audience will listen to John B. Gough.

PHILADELPHIA chuckles over the prospect of getting its gas for $1.50 per thousand, but why should not this happiness be more widely spread.

MISS LIZZIE HINES formerly of this city, was recently endorsed by an Elizabeth jury as not guilty of stealing a brace of ostrich feathers from a rival's hat.

THE handsome furniture on the stage of Music Hall at the play of Victor Durand last Thursday evening came from the furniture store of Green & Co., whose advertisement appears in the columns of this paper.

THE stockholders of the Music Hall are to meet therein, Monday evening, Feb. 9th, to consider the "propriety" of authorizing the execution of a bond and mortgage to liquidate the indebtedness of the association. They still owe for an Opera House.

OFFICER MCCUE—the most efficient and faithful of the Plainfield police force—recently arrested a perambulating book canvasser for peddling without a license. For such act Officer McCue was brought before the court at Elizabeth, Tuesday, on an indictment by the Grand Jury for assault and battery. Officer McCue, however, was speedily acquitted, and is again on the watch along our streets for violators of the peace, good order and morals of Plainfield.

THE lecture of Chaplain McCabe before the comrades of the G. A. R., in this city, Monday evening, was to some extent interesting, although its pleasing effect as a whole was marred by partisan opinions and the waving of that sanguinary undergarment. Of the tableaux that preceded it, however, but one verdict is deserved, and that the most commendable in our power. The pictures were perfect in their grouping and lighting, their surroundings and accessories, and the scenes and sentiments they portrayed.

Coming.

It is announced that Dion Boucicault, his son and daughter, with a strong combination have been secured by the Music Hall management, and will appear here next month in either "Shaughran" or "Colleen Bawn." The management desires an expression from the public as to which of the plays shall be produced.

Personalia.

County Collector Sheridan is still confined to his home in Elizabeth with inflamatory rheumatism.

We are pleased to say that L. T. Greenfield called on us a few days ago. He is well acquainted here and has many friends. The house he represents, Carstairs, McCall & Co., of Philadelphia, is one of the largest liquor houses in the country.

Meg's Diversion.

The Winfield Scott Post G. A. R., of this city, will close its very pleasing and instructive Course of entertainments, next Tuesday evening, with a Diversion by name and a diversion by nature, that should command the patronage of our best people and most of them. The Gilbert Dramatic Association of Brooklyn, a semi-amateur organization of ladies and gentlemen—artistically and personally of the highest character—will present upon that occasion the enjoyable melo-drama entitled "Meg's Diversion." The cast of the play and the evening's programme as published on our second page, will give some idea of the very satisfying treat that will be offered. Choice elocutionary selections before the play with fine orchestral music interspersed, will as a whole constitute probably one of the "biggest bills" the public have had or will have the opportunity of enjoying for some time. The general admission will be 35 cents in the gallery, and 75 cents for a single ticket with reserved seat. Diagrams of the Hall may be seen and seats secured at Reynolds' and Shaw's drug stores.

The Finest Rink in New Jersey.

The erection of the new Plainfield rink, which we described in a general way two weeks ago, is to begin at once. The working plans and specifications are now complete, and so soon as the contracts are awarded to the successful bidders, the building will be pushed rapidly towards completion. The owner is Mr. Clark W. Evans, a young citizen of means—son of ex-Mayor John H. Evans—and a gentleman of good judgment and advanced tastes, with generous views of the public's requirements and the proper idea of the demands of the times. The architect is Mr. Charles H. Smith, now building the handsome Episcopal parsonage at Somerville, and to whose credit are noticeable in this vicinity such admired evidences as the Park avenue church, the residence of Jos. J. Henderson, Esq., on Rockview avenue, and many other structures of equal merit.

The proposed location at the corner of Broadway and Fourth street, could not be excelled in this city. It is almost the very centre of that section most thickly strewn with the residences of the best people, besides being so conveniently situated for patrons from adjacent towns arriving and departing by rail. Standing, too, on a corner it can be better seen, and its handsome appearance will undoubtedly attract many. The lot is 254 feet front on Broadway and 281 feet on Fourth street. On the extreme corner will be situated the principal building, devoted to roller-skating and its disciples. It will have a frontage of about 125 feet and a depth of 250 feet. The skating surface is to be of the best material known for the purpose, 80 by 200 feet, without a break and with a height of 40 feet to roof girders—thereby allowing for the playing of tennis, with four courts if desired. The platform around the entire floor will be raised twelve inches above the surface, and will contain chairs for 500 sitters with ample passage ways. A gallery over the vestibule will give seats for 250 more.

There will be large toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen—the former connected by itself with a cloak room 13 by 25 feet, in which garments will be hung up and not crushed into small boxes. There will be a smoking room, a commodious skate room stocked with the best rink-skates made, a large refreshment room and the usual ticket and private offices. The band will be placed in a suspended balcony in the centre of the building on the left. The entire interior as well as the different rooms will be thoroughly heated by steam, and the skating floor will be lighted by hundreds of little gas jets surrounding it.

The exterior will be of red brick and quite ornamental. The entrance will be through a covered porch into a roomy lobby and vestibule. On the corner of the building towards the railroad station will be placed a tower 75 feet high. Daylight will be let in through low arched windows, set close together, around the whole building. On the western corner of the lot is to be erected another building, in which are to be bowling alleys, and club and storage rooms for the Plainfield Bicyclists. The grounds between the buildings will be laid out, at the proper season, in walks, beds of flowers and shrubbery.

It is the aim of the owner to bring together at this rink the best classes of society. Courtesies and favors will be generously extended to the tennis, bicycle, polo and other clubs, with a view of persuading such organizations and their friends to make the rink their headquarters. Although prices of admission are not now, of course, decided upon, it is possible that for two evenings of the week special tickets at 50 cents each will be issued.

Death of a Soldier.

George M. Hines, well known in this vicinity, died at his home in Elizabeth last Friday night, from injuries sustained about the head by reason of a fall in that city some days previous, said injuries producing congestion of the brain. Deceased responded to the call of his country for volunteers at the breaking out of the war, enlisting in Co. C. of the Third New Jersey Volunteers. He was wounded in one of the peninsular battles, and had recently received a pension. His occupation was a miller, and for years he worked for F. M. French & Sons, in this city, and M. H. Acken, New Brooklyn and Milton. He never joined a Grand Army Post, but had sent an application for membership to Uric Dahlgren Post of Elizabeth, and desired that when he died he should be buried as a soldier. In accordance with this request his remains were interred in Evergreen Cemetery, Elizabeth, on Wednesday, with military honors by the above named Post. Deceased leaves a wife and two children.

The Judges.

A writer in the Central Times last week under the nom de plume of XX vents his spleen against the signers of license applications for hotels and saloons. Instead of coming out in print over his own name, he escapes the personal indignation that he would meet, under "his mark" of XX. He insults respectable and honest men and women by his remarks. This is a free country and every person is supposed to have the right to exercise their own judgment. Therefore, if a respectable man or woman chooses to sign an application for license, they should not be termed "persons of low order," "drunken negroes," "white Americans—who are hard drinkers," "ignorant foreigners," etc. Is it a crime for a poor Irishman, German or Negro, by his own industry, to accumulate property by the sweat of his brow, become a freeholder and pay his taxes? Must he be reviled because he cannot sign his own name? They pay their taxes, all the same, yet it has been asked of us, whether XX pays his. The Judges in his case are those to whom he applies his epithets.

The Latest Rinkles.

Rink, pretty creature, rink, is the customary salute of the young man of the day to his young lady.

The gentleman patrons of the rink justly feel affronted that such a pen should be called the "gentleman's room."

The Plainfielders defeated the "Elites" of New York city at polo, Wednesday evening. It was the first time the visitors had ever lost a game.

One possible reason for the continued improvement in the "music by the band," is that brand new $100 silver cornet—gold lined and elaborately engraved—that is used by Prof. Hermann, the fascinating leader.

Schneider, the contortionist skater, who was with the Denman combination, and who has appeared in this city several times, broke his neck Thursday evening while exhibiting at Pittston, Pa., dying instantly.

The Band of Hope Benefit of last Friday afternoon and evening, will undoubtedly result more financially successful than that of Muhlenberg Hospital. A large crowd was a feature of the evening's session.

People prefer skating in-doors to the open air, because there are so many more conveniences at the roller rinks, and there is not the drawback of having a poor skating surface, which is found so often on the ice.

New devices for skate rolls make their appearance almost daily—guttapercha, raw-hide, celluloid, leather, leatheroid, and patent compositions without number; but the rink managers still declare in favor of boxwood.

The second race for the fireman's medal was won last Thursday evening, by Mr. Frank Conger of Zephyr H & L Co., No. 1, beating by about a lap Mr. George Cobb, of Engine Co., No. 2, the winner of the previous contest.

Half an hour's observation of a company of roller skaters will convince any person that he can skate just as well as any of those skating; and when he puts on the rollers five seconds are sufficient to convince him that he can't do anything of the kind.

"Common Sense" boots, as they are called, are the best for ladies to use when skating. The boots have low heels and square cut toes and are very comfortable. The clamps of the skates also obtain a better grip than when attached to the pointed toed shoes.

This evening's entertainment is really the most amusing exhibition on the road. All who visited Barnum's show last summer will remember the fat policeman on skates, and will be sure to be present this evening with their friends. Don't miss seeing Ashley and Hess.

A prominent physician recently had a word to say about roller-skating. He complained of the constant motion in one direction around a circle, and said it was liable to cause headache, and in some cases vertigo. But in this city's rink the skaters reverse their direction upon the ringing of the bell.

Some old fogy announces that roller-skating makes lop-sided ankles. He would be nearer right if he said too much theorizing makes lop-sided heads. Eminent physicians declare the opinion of the fogy is all bosh. Roller skating in moderation is beneficial, and is strongly recommended as a hygienic measure.

As Mr. Granville C. Kingsley had appeared before on the floor of the Casino in an exhibition of his skatorial talent, he was disguised, last Friday afternoon and evening, as Miss Mabel Jackson, and in a costume of red and yellow silk and a blonde wig pleased a mystified audience. His feet, however, gave him away.

To preserve one's equilibrium on a pair of rollers is the easiest thing to do under the broad expanse of heaven, in one's mind, and the novice finds this to be the gospel truth the moment he attempts the trick and assumes a sitting posture without design. Then to his great dismay, the spectators have the bad manners to make merry over his humiliation.

A league of polo clubs has been formed in this State, made up of six of the strongest and best clubs in New Jersey: The Unions, of Paterson; Columbias, of Jersey City; Casinos, of Newark; Temples, of Elizabeth, Casinos, of Plainfield; and New Brunswicks, of New Brunswick. It is proposed to play a series of games for the State championship and gold medals.

The New England League has declared in favor of less slugging and more science at polo. Hereafter no player will be allowed to raise his stick above the shoulder, and any violation of this rule will constitute a foul. This will prevent the players from being struck in the head by the stick, and will necessitate more skillful passing and nursing of the ball on the floor.

More convenient skates could be made for novices. We suggest as an experiment that each beginner be furnished with four skates—one for each foot, one for the back of the head and a fourth for another valuable spot. In this way the new man could move right along with the procession, avoid being walked upon by everybody else and straighten up at his own sweet leisure.

JOHN W. MORRIS of New Brunswick is still offering at his exchange stables in that city, horses and mules of all descriptions. His advertisement on the opposite page, will attract the attention of purchasers.

A Good Play.

Music Hall was filled with an appreciative audience last Tuesday evening to witness the new play "Victor Durand" by Henry Guy Carleton, and produced under the management of Wallack's Theatre Company. The performance, in every way, met the anticipation and approbation of the select audience who witnessed it. Mr. Geo. Clarke, as "Victor Durand," admirably filled the role assigned him, as did Miss Sophie Eyre as "Ruth Favart." Mr. W. H. Denny as "Septimus Severus Tubb" provoked laughter by his "yas," "yas." His personation is an important one in the play, not appreciated by the audience until the closing scene. Every person should keep a "dwiary," like himself, if they wish to keep out of trouble. Messrs. Fred Corbett as "Paul Dean," and Harry Talbot the detective, did their parts in a creditable manner. J. Newton Pigott as "Baron De Mersac," Miss Agnes Elliot as "Mrs. Dudley," Miss Louise Dillon as "Violet," Chas. Wheatleigh as "John Vaughn," Max Freeman as "Dr. Randolph," all were good in their respective parts. In fact the whole troupe gave universal satisfaction, and the audience present desires to see them again in Plainfield.

Borough Goverment For North Plainfield.

The following circular issued for the information of the interested and those whom it may concern, answers a few of the questions that arise upon a consideration of the project of adopting the borough form of government by our neighbors over the brook. If even after a careful reading of the following, some undecided point should obtrude itself, we shall be happy to answer any question in relation thereto our readers may offer:

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of North Plainfield:

You are respectfully requested to take into careful consideration the question of incorporating a part of the township as a Borough. It is believed by many that the town can be more efficiently governed, its condition improved, its population increased and its general prosperity advanced—in short, it can have all the advantages of incorporated cities, without their disadvantages—by adopting the Borough system. This circular is intended to show what that system is and why it should be accepted by the people of North Plainfield.

1. What is the Borough system?

It is a plan of government, provided by general legislation adopted in 1878, and subsequently, for thickly-settled communities which have out-grown the township system, and yet are not large enough for the machinery of city government. Under it the people choose a Mayor and six Councilmen, the former for a term of one year, the latter for two years, two being elected every year.

2. What are its powers?

The Mayor is a magistrate and an executive officer, causing offenders against Borough ordinance to be arrested, tried and punished, managing, in connection with the Council, the financial affairs of the Borough, and exercising a general supervision and control over such matters of general concern as public order, public health, the condition of streets and side-walks, street lamps, nuisances, the licensing of peddlers, hackmen, etc., under such legislation as the Council may provide.

3. How are its expenses provided?

By a Borough tax levied and collected by the officers of the township. The people decide at the Borough election, held every Spring, how much money shall be raised for the year. This money may be used for Borough purposes only on vote of the Council. The Mayor and Councilmen serve without pay. Appropriations may be made for lighting the streets for legitimate expenses, such as clerk hire, the services of marshals or policemen, and janitor, the fees of election officers, rent of offices, etc.

4. Is the amount which the people may by ballot authorize to be raised by taxation, limited?

The law limits the sum which the people may vote annually to $1,500. They may vote less, but not more than that sum, under any circumstances.

5. Can a bonded debt be created under the Borough system?

It cannot.

6. Will the proposed Borough in North Plainfield supersede the township government?

It will not. The town committee, the assessor and collector and other officers continue as township officers, attending to the township finances, the care of the poor as at present, and to the care of the roads and the public health outside the Borough. The Borough becomes a government WITHIN the township, only disbursing such moneys as the people may vote for Borough purposes, not exceeding $1,500, and that portion of the road taxes which is assessed and collected within the Borough limits.

7. Is the Town Meeting done away with?

It is not. It elects officers and votes money as usual, all the legal voters of the township being entitled to vote as at present. The Borough election is held separately and only legal voters within the Borough may take part in it. The assessor and collector also assess and collect the Borough taxes.

8. Will the Borough cause a large increase in the taxes?

It will not. The value of the taxable property in the limits of the proposed Borough is $1,300,000. If the whole amount which the people of the Borough are authorized to vote, viz: $1,500, is raised yearly, the percentage of the Borough tax will only be 12 cents per $100; and as the total of the taxable property increases the rate must decrease. IT CANNOT BE INCREASED. Fines and fees for licenses to peddlers, hackmen and others may be applied to reduce the sum to be raised by taxation.

9. What are the boundaries of the proposed Borough?

The old Rock Road on the West; Prospect avenue at the foot of the mountains on the North; Raymond avenue on the East, and Green Brook on the South.

10. Is the Borough system a new and untried one?

No. It is in substance the town system which Princeton, Washington and other places have used for years, under special charters, which the Legislature no longer grants. Several communities have become incorporated under the Borough acts, and are well satisfied with the working of the system. The Mayor of Rutherford Park says that there was considerable opposition to the incorporation of that community as a Borough, but that the people, after a short trial of the system, are well pleased with its efficiency, and would not willingly return to a township government.

11. Why should North Plainfield be made a borough?

Because its size, location, and compactness, and the character of its population require that it have larger power of self-government. To induce men to buy property, build homes and settle here and thus add to the prosperity of North Plainfield we must provide some of the facilities and attractions which Plainfield holds out. Our new school house has been of great service in this direction. Improved side-walks, lighted streets and other necessary conveniences of a well-regulated community, which under the Borough system can be provided without burdening the taxpayer, will give to our beautiful town a larger and healthier growth than it has yet known. There is no reason for counting it longer as an appendage to a municipality of another county. It has a destiny of its own.

12. What advantages will a Borough give that the township does not afford?

The Borough is a compact system. The township is more suitable for farming and sparsely populated territory. The township lodges both executive and legislative power in the hands of the committee of three persons. The Borough confers larger executive and legislative powers, and separates them, lodging the one in the Mayor, the other in the Council. The Council enacts ordinances; the Mayor is responsible for their execution. A century of trial of theories of municipal government has shown that centralization is better than distribution, that one man with large power and consequent responsibility assures a more economical and efficient government than independent commissions. The history of New York and Brooklyn prove this. The complainant under the Borough system goes to one man, the Mayor; under the township system he must go to three men, the town committee. Such ordinances as a township may require are enacted by three men; a council of six insures for the Borough a more thoroughly-considered code.

It is hoped that every citizen will consider this Borough question very fully and carefully, and vote at the election (of which due notice will be given) called according to law to decide the matter.

Gentlemen who have studied the Borough system and its workings will be in attendance at the Old School House Friday evening, February 6th, to answer questions and give such further information as citizens may desire.

ROBERT SIMPSON has commenced excavating on the ground recently purchased by Mr. Daniel Roberts, on North avenue, where will be erected livery stables and sheds.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Jan. 26th.

The Council met in adjourned meeting.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Livingston, Love, Marsh, Simpson, Wadsworth, West—11.

Absent—None.

The minutes of adjourned meeting of the 12th, were approved as read.

The Clerk read the request of L. E. Hart to remove through the streets a two-story frame dwelling. Ref'd to Streets Com. with power.

Also the petition for the lighting of a lamp at Third and Union streets. Ref'd to Lamps Com.

Also the application for a hotel and liquor license by S. V. Woodruff, proprietor of Hotel Netherwood. Ref'd to License Com.

Also a communication from a number of ladies, protesting against the granting of liquor licenses as follows:

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Whereas, We, Christian women, having used our utmost endeavors to secure an election in favor of the $5,000 appropriation for the public streets; and

Whereas, In the event of such an appropriation having been decided in the affirmative by a popular vote, we were led to believe that no licenses would be granted in the City of Plainfield;

If we are correct, then we only ask and pray that you will act in good faith in carrying out this understanding.

Ordered filed.

A communication from Mayor Rockfellow was read and referred to Alms Com., calling the attention of the Council to scenes of debauchery in Pruden's alley, the participants in which were being supported by the city. The following is the communication:

To the Honorable, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—In connection with that portion of my Inaugural Message relating to the poor of the city, your attention is respectfully called to the lamentable condition of affairs in the house in Pruden's alley, leased by the city and used for the relief of the poor. This house containing six families, wholly or in part, supported by the city, has recently been the scene of rioting, drunkenness and debauchery, in which the participants were those ostensibly so poor as to require continual assistance from the City Treasury. Credible information has been furnished me that these debauches are of almost nightly occurrence. For all violations of City Ordinances, or of the laws of the State, of which evidence can be obtained, offenders will be summarily dealt with. The attention of your Honorable body is called to the matter that, if deemed advisable, action may be taken to annul the present lease of the building referred to; and with the further view of illustrating the necessity for speedy action in the matter of reforming our system of maintaining the city poor.

GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW, Mayor.
Dated Jan. 26th, 1885.

Mr. Goddard from the Lamps Com., reported as correct the claims of N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., and against the locating of a lamp at Central avenue and Fifth street. Claim referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Beguelin from the License Com., reported as follows on the communication of the W. C. T. U.:

Your committee to whom was referred the communication of the W. C. T. U., respectfully reports

That the Charter of the City grants to the Common Council the exclusive right and power to regulate or prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors within said City, as they deem most conducive to the public good. From the organization of the City Government until the present time, licenses have been granted with the exception of a single year. Prior to each Charter election, the question of "License or no license" has been freely discussed, and was generally considered to have been decided by the result of the ballot. To properly regulate the sale of liquors an ordinance has been framed, and amendments from time to time made thereto until now it is one of the most stringent in the State. A license fee of $300 for hotels, and $500 for saloons must be paid. The application requires the signatures of ten freeholders, with a description of their property, who shall certify to the character of the applicants. Each licensed individual is forbidden to sell to minors and intoxicated persons, under penalty of fine and forfeiture of license. Your Committee believes that the ordinance provides as far as possible for the public protection. It is the duty of the Executive and police to look after and report all violations of the ordinances, if any occur, that the offenders may be properly punished and their licenses revoked. Your Committee doubt that the evils complained of, would be materially lessened by a refusal of the Council to grant licenses. There might be a lesser quantity of liquor consumed, but would there not be more persistent drunkenness? The City embraces but a small area and in each adjoining township liquor is freely sold, where any of our citizens can purchase what he may desire. Those now licensed in our City could open places of business in North Plainfield, and deliver at pleasure within the City limits all orders of their customers, under the laws of the United States and the State of New Jersey, in quantities of one quart and over. Besides this there is no reason to doubt that large quantities of liquors would be illicitly sold. The licenses for the sale of liquors is no small source of revenue. The City can raise but a limited and specified sum for its support from taxation, unless authorized to do so by a vote of the citizens. That sum is now as it was at the formation of the City Government, and is insufficient to meet the necessary needs of the City. The present applications for licenses will provide $5,700, which exceeds considerably the cost of lighting the City. The needs of the City are continually increasing, and your Committee believes the money arising from the license fees to be absolutely necessary. Therefore your committee reports in favor of granting licenses, where the applications conform to the requirements of the law regulating the same until it shall appear that such course is distasteful to a majority of the citizens of Plainfield proven by their ballots at a charter election.

TELL A. BEGUELIN,
ANDREW LOVE,
ROBT. L. LIVINGSTON.

Rec'd and placed on file. Mr. Marsh voting in the negative.

The License Com. reported the application of Mr. Hugh O'Donnell as correct, and it was granted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Livingston, Love, Simpson and Wadsworth—8.

Negative—Messrs. Marsh and West—2.

President Coriell was excused from voting by the permission of the Council—Messrs. Marsh and Beguelin voting against his being excused.

The applications of Messrs. James Connelly, Wm. Sullivan, John Rafferty, Joseph R. Miller, Jacob Blimm, Fred Casper, Chas. Smith, Patrick Day, Jas. H. Force, Chas. Bock, E. P. Thorn, and M. Daly were granted by the same vote. Upon the application of Mr. Sullivan and thereafter, President Coriell voted in the negative, explaining that he did so for personal reasons.

Mr. Dumont from Streets Com., reported back the petition of L. E. Hart, as it did not state to where he desired to remove the building.

Mr. Marsh moved that the matter of the City against L. E. Clark be referred to the Laws Com., with full power to prosecute, compromise or adjust as might be deemed best. Carried

Also that the Corporation Counsel be instructed to bring suits against all parties that had made connections with the North avenue sewer, and had not paid the required charge. Carried.

Also that a committee of three be appointed to look into the matter of securing other rooms or more accommodation for the use of the Council. Carried, and Messrs. Marsh, Love and Dumont were so appointed.

Mr. Wadsworth stated that the Board of Education had expressed a readiness to pay its percentage of the fees for assessing and collecting its taxes. Also a statement in relation to the taxes due from Mr. James E. Martine and the effort he claimed against such amount. The latter matter was referred jointly to the Laws and Finance Committees for investigation.

Mr. West moved the different suggestions included in the Mayor's message, be referred to the proper committees. So ordered.

The attention of the Streets Com. was called to the ice on the sidewalks, and the absence of any covering over the streets under the bridges.

It was ordered that a bill be presented to the Railroad Co., for damages to the lamps, occurring during the recent re-building of the bridges.

The Auditing Committee reported as correct the claim of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Co., $157.20. Warrant ordered drawn.

The Council then adjourned.

Ammonia in Baking Powder More Injurious to Health than Alum. Dr. Witthaus, the celebrated Chemist and Professor, on the Subject.

I have made careful qualitative analyses of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder and of the Royal Baking Powder, and have also determined the amount of available gas yielded by each. I find that the substances which enter into the composition of the two powders are the same, with one important exception: the Royal contains carbonate of ammonia, whereas Cleveland's Baking Powder does not.

In my opinion a baking powder containing ammonia is much more liable to produce disturbances of digestion than one containing alum, concerning whose deleterious qualities so much has been said; particularly as it has been shown by direct experiment that carbonate of ammonia, if present in a baking powder, is not expelled during baking, but remains in the bread.

I consider Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as greatly preferable to the Royal Baking Powder, because:

1. It is free from the ammonia which contaminates the Royal;

2. It yields during baking a greater proportion of the only gas, carbonic acid, which should be produced by a baking powder.

THE ALARM.

"Burglars!" cried Mr. Jones.

"Burglars!" screamed Mrs. Jones.

"Burglars!" screamed the Misses Jones.

"Burglars!" screamed Master Jones, as one after the other lights flashed in the upper rooms, and hastily draped forms appeared at the bedroom doors like the signal figures of a barometer.

Jones and son followed each other down stairs, one with a poker and the other with a croquet mallet, and the street door was found open, and a silk umbrella and two hats had vanished from the rack. Jones senior believed that he saw two boys vanishing around the corner, and yelled "police," but only the echoes answered him; and, after a careful search of the house and some lamentations over the hats and umbrella, the Jones family returned to their pillows, though each one declared next morning that he or she had not closed an eye.

"And the worst of it is," said Mrs. Jones, "they'll be here again. When burglars determine to enter a house they always do it."

"I know a fellow who has a splendid dog that he'll sell," said Master Jones. "The fiercest fellow; bite a piece out of you as soon as look at you. I'll get him if you like, and we can turn him into the hall nights."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Jones. "I'd as soon have my throat cut by burglars as be torn to pieces by a savage dog."

"But he'd know us all in a few days," said young Jones. "Pa, don't you think it's the best plan?—the biggest fellow; you ought to hear him howl."

"A dog is impossible in a city house with four feet of garden ground," said Mr. Jones; "but I'll buy an alarm and a pistol, and keep it loaded under my pillow."

"Then I shall sleep elsewhere," said Mrs. Jones. "No, I'll sit up all night, every night, until I die, before that shall be done."

"All women are idiots," said Mr. Jones.

"All men are crazy," said Mrs. Jones. "But you shall have your way and shoot your family if you like. That always comes of having firearms about."

"Let them come in and murder us then," said Mr. Jones. "I suppose you object to the alarm, too."

But finally the alarm was decided upon and purchased and attached to all the doors and windows on the lower floor; and two days after this was done Mr. Jones, being obliged to leave home on business, congratulated himself upon his promptitude of action.

"With this alarm you are quite safe, my dear," he said, as he took his departure. "The minute you hear it, open the windows and scream for the policemen."

Mr. Jones then stepped into the carriage, which whirled him to a train which conveyed him to a distant city. There he became very much occupied with certain important affairs, and when he had been absent a month forgot all about the burglars, as well as all about the alarm.

The letters from home did not mention it, and so it passed entirely from his memory; and as at last he found himself on his homeward way, upon a night train which he had taken quite unexpectedly—for he had written the day before that he should not be back for a week—it occurred to him that his arrival would be a delightful surprise for the family. He had his latchkey with him, and he quite chuckled over the thought of letting himself in and being found snug in bed next morning.

"Won't there be a time!" said he to himself. "Ma'll scream. The girls—I can hear 'em laugh. And Sam will pretend not to be astonished—ha, ha, ha!"

So, with his portmanteau in his hand, Mr. Jones, having reached home, ascended the steps of his domicile and deliberately but softly proceeded to open his front door.

As he did so the alarm was sprung, a racket and jingle filled the house, and simultaneously Mrs. Jones, the Misses Jones, Master Jones, the cook, the chambermaid and the waiter thrust their heads out of their respective windows and screamed "Police!"

Almost as they did so two clubs struck the pavement and two giants in uniform seized Mr. Jones by the arms.

"Ah, got you this time," cried one of them. "We've been looking for you for some time, too."

"Let me go," said Mr. Jones. "I live here. It's a mistake."

"Yes, I've no doubt it's a mistake," said the policeman.

"But tell them—tell them; let me offer proof," pleaded Mr. Jones. "They all know me; tell them it's Mr. Jones."

"He says it's Mr. Jones," cried the policeman to a nightcap and shawl at the window.

"My husband is in Chicago," said Mrs. Jones.

But she peeped out nervously. However, she did not recognize her husband. Mr. Jones had left home in a tall hat and overcoat; but during his absence he had unfortunately purchased a traveling "ulster" that touched his heels, and a cap. He wore both, as was natural upon a midnight journey.

"No, I never saw that object before," said Mrs. Jones. "Do take him away."

"You'll appear to-morrow?" said the policeman. "You'll appear against him, ma'am?"

"Decidedly. I shall consider it my duty," said the lady, and shut the window.

Then Jones remonstrated with the policeman, and begged to have Mr. Smith next door called, and was told to hold his tongue. Jones was not a mild man. In a few minutes his wrath boiled over; he attacked the policeman with his umbrella bravely and was totally defeated. He arrived at the station house with a black eye and a bruise on his forehead, and frothing at the mouth with rage; and was locked up after having been recognized by several experts as "Tommy the Tapper," a noted burglar, for whose arrest a large reward was offered. His valise was taken away from him, also his watch and pocketbook. He was shut up in a cell with an intoxicated tramp who had arrived at that stage of delirium tremens at which snakes are the favorite delusion, and who took poor Mr. Jones for one or several of them, and insisted on treading on his head.

In argument and single combat with this gentleman Mr. Jones passed the hours until morning, when he was taken from his highly-perfumed sequestration and dragged through the bleak streets to a court of justice, where he attempted to explain matters once more, and was still explaining them without producing the slightest effect upon any one when his wife and son arrived.

Even then the ulster, the cap and the black eye deceived poor Mrs. Jones for a few moments, and but for Sam there is no knowing what might have become of the unhappy gentleman. However, Sam came to his rescue and the three went home together in a cab, Mrs. Jones moaning and wringing her hands all the way, and Mr. Jones threatening to sue for a divorce.

He forgave his wife at last, however, but he never forgave the alarm, which be demolished forthwith.—Boston Globe.

REMOVALS FROM OFFICE.

The Jefferson Idea of the Proper Method of Procedure.

[From the Philadelphia Record]

When Mr. Jefferson came into office the first time as President of the United States he found the Federalists in full possession of all places of emolument and trust. He was not a little embarrassed as to the proper course to pursue in consequence of the impatience of his own party and his desire to conciliate the good will of the people at large. In this conjecture, a vacancy having occurred in the office of Collector at New Haven, just at the close of the Adams administration, and Mr. Adams having appointed a Federalist to fill it, Mr. Jefferson removed him and appointed a Republican in his stead. To a remonstrance against this procedure on the part of New Haven merchants, Mr. Jefferson replied in a letter, intended for general information, setting forth the principles which governed him in the exercise of the appointing power. The singular moderation and justice of his views gave them a present interest when a change of administration will find the office-holding condition of the country very much in the situation it was in 1801. We append Mr. Jefferson's letter:

WASHINGTON, July 12, 1801.

To Elias Shipman and Others, a Committee of the merchants of New Haven:

GENTLEMEN:—I have received the remonstrance you were pleased to address to me on the appointment of Samuel Bishop to the office of Collector of New Haven, lately vacated by the death of David Austin. The right of our fellow-citizens to represent to the public functionaries their opinion on proceedings interesting to them is unquestionably a constitutional right, often useful, sometimes necessary, and will always be respectfully acknowledged by me. Of the various executive duties no one excites more anxious concern than that of placing the interests of our fellow-citizens in the hands of honest men, with understandings sufficient for their stations. No duty, at the same time, is more difficult to fulfill. The knowledge of characters possessed by a single individual is, of necessity, limited. To seek out the best through the whole Union we must resort to other information, which, from the best of men, acting disinterestedly and with the purest motives, is sometimes incorrect. In the case of Samuel Bishop, however, the subject of your remonstrance, time was taken, information was sought, and such obtained as could leave no room for doubt of his fitness. From private sources it was learned that his understanding was sound, his integrity pure, his character unstained. And the offices confided to him within his own State are public evidences of the estimation in which he is held by the State in general and the city and township particularly in which he lives. He is said to be the Town Clerk, a Justice of the Peace, Mayor of the city of New Haven, an office held at the will of the Legislature; Chief Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for New Haven county, a court of high criminal and civil jurisdiction wherein most causes are decided without the right of appeal or review, and sole Judge of the Court of Probates, wherein he singly decides all questions of wills, settlement of estates, testate and intestate; appoints guardians, settles their accounts, and, in fact, has under his jurisdiction and care all the property, real and personal, of persons dying. The two last offices, in the annual gift of the Legislature, were given to him in May last. Is it possible that the man to whom the Legislature of Connecticut has so recently committed trusts of such difficulty and magnitude is "unfit to be the Collector of the district of New Haven," though acknowledged in the same writing to have obtained all this confidence "by a long life of usefulness?" It is objected, indeed, in the remonstrance that he is seventy-seven years of age; but at a much more advanced age our Franklin was the ornament of human nature. He may not be able to perform in person all the details of his office; but if he gives us the benefit of his understanding, his integrity, his watchfulness, and takes care that all the details are well performed by himself or his necessary assistants, all public purposes will be answered. The remonstrance, indeed, does not allege that the office has been illy conducted, but only apprehends that it will be so. Should this happen in event, be assured I will do in it what shall be just and necessary for the public service. In the meantime, he should be tried without being prejudged. The removal, as it is called, of Mr. Goodrich forms another subject of complaint. Declarations by myself in favor of political tolerance, exhortations to harmony and affection in social intercourse and to respect for the equal rights of the minority have, on certain occasions, been quoted and misconstrued into assurances that the tenure of offices was to be undisturbed. But could candor apply such a construction? It is not, indeed, in the remonstrance that we find it, but it leads to the explanations which that calls for. When it is considered that during the late administration those who were not of a particular sect of politics were excluded from all office; when, by a steady pursuit of this measure, nearly the whole offices of the United States were monopolized by that sect; when the public sentiment at length declared itself, and burst open the doors of honor and confidence to those whose opinions they more approved, was it to be imagined that this monopoly of office was still to be continued in the hands of the minority? Does it violate their equal rights to assert some rights in the majority also? Is it political intolerance to claim a proportionate share in the direction of the public affairs? Can they not harmonize in society unless they have everything in their own hands? If the will of the nation, manifested by their various elections, calls for an administration of government according with the opinions of those elected; if, for the fulfillment of that will, displacements are necessary, with whom can they so justly begin as with persons appointed in the last moments of an administration, not for its own aid but to begin a career at the same time with their successors, by whom they had never been approved, and who would scarcely expect from them a cordial cooperation. Mr. Goodrich was one of these. Was it proper for him to place himself in office without knowing whether those whose agent he was to be would have confidence in his agency? Can the preference of another, as the successor to Mr. Austin, be candidly called a removal of Mr. Goodrich? If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are vacancies to be obtained? Those by death are few; by resignation, none. Can any other mode than that of removal be proposed? This is a painful office; but it is made my duty, and I meet it as such. I proceed in the operation with deliberation and inquiry, that it may injure the best men least and effect the purposes of justice and public utility with the least private distress; that it may be thrown, as much as possible, on delinquency, on oppression, on intolerance, on ante-Revolutionary adherence to our enemies. The remonstrance laments "that a change in the administration must produce a change in the subordinate officers;" in other words, that it should be deemed necessary for all officers to think with their principal. But on whom does this imputation bear? On those who have excluded from office every shade of opinion which was not theirs? Or on those who have been so excluded? I lament sincerely that unessential differences of opinion should ever have been deemed sufficient to interdict half the society from the rights and the blessings of self-government, to proscribe them as unworthy of every trust. It would have been to me a circumstance of great relief had I found a moderate participation of office in the hands of the majority. I would gladly have left to time and accident to raise them to their just share. But their total exclusion calls for prompter corrections. I shall correct the procedure; but, that done, return with joy to that state of things when the only questions concerning a candidate shall be: Is he honest? Is he capable? Is he faithful to the Constitution? I tender you the homage of my high respect. THOMAS JEFFERSON.

THE CLARKSON-ST. JOHN CONTROVERSY.

Statement by the Chairman of the National Prohibition Committee.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR:—In your paper of January 16 you notice the Legate-Clarkson correspondence in regard to the Hon. John P. St. John. Will you kindly allow me to state certain facts bearing on this correspondence to show why it should be disbelieved?

1st. In the statement first made by Mr. Clarkson and the Republican press, they claimed to have letters and telegrams from St. John which would sustain their charges. As Chairman of the National Prohibition Committee I at once asked for the publication of these telegrams and letters; for, if the charges were true, the Prohibitionists had no reason for defending a man who had attempted to betray them. At least six times I made this demand. They then changed their claim, saying they had letters from a leading Prohibitionist, who was an intimate friend of St. John. This convinced me that they had neither letter nor telegram from St. John. I then called for the letters of the prominent Prohibitionist, and instead of a prominent Prohibitionist the name of James F. Legate, a Blaine Republican, is given. Mr. Legate is not a member of the Prohibition party, and is a stranger to the members of the National Prohibition Committee, and seems to have been simply the agent of the Republican National Committee to induce St. John to betray the Prohibitionists. The only evidence yet furnished is the letter of this Republican bribery agent, and if there were no other reasons to show the nature of the plot, I should believe St. John in preference to Legate. The Republican National Committee must produce other evidence or stand convicted as would-be bribers.

2d. Mr. Clarkson states that the National Republican Committee did nothing but discuss Legate's propositions. Mr. McCullough says that they agreed to give St. John $25,000, and that Senator Plumb, of Kansas, was the man who inaugurated the plan to induce St. John to betray us. A consistent story must be told about this bribery matter to make me believe that any one knew of it except Legate and the Republican Committee.

3d. Legate says that a part of the letters printed are forgeries, and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the paper which published the letters, says that Mr. Legate is a liar. So the only witness against St. John, in this case is branded as a liar by the paper which calls him as a witness.

4th. Mr. Legate says that St. John knew nothing about the negotiation. Mr. Legate either lied when he wrote the letter or he lies now, and he is the only witness in the case.

5th. St. John's appointments were made in August, and were not changed until the last two weeks of the campaign. These changes I made myself without consulting him. St. John was wholly in charge of my committee. He stayed in Ohio in October simply to fill his appointments. His last speech was in Oberlin, O., his next in Adrian, Mich. He could not have remained a day longer in Ohio if he had desired. These appointments were made weeks before, and the statement that he left Ohio or was sick, to avoid appointments in that State is an absolute falsehood. From Michigan he was sent to Philadelphia, Baltimore, and New England. These appointments were made at the same time as the others, and the statement that he went there to meet bribery agents is another lie without even a coating of truth. The statement that he met Legate in Pittsburgh is another lie. He was accompanied by George B. Scott of the New York Witness, and neither of them went to Pittsburgh.

6th. It would not have benefited the Republicans to have bought St. John if *they could, for another equally promin*ent leader would have at once been placed on the ticket, and the knowledge of betrayal would have only consolidated our forces.

7th. At all places visited by St. John he was entertained by Prohibition committees, and it was practically impossible for such negotiation to have gone on without my Committee being notified, and we never heard a thing of it until after election. The interest I have in this matter is that justice be done an honest man. St. John has been in public life for years and has come up to the present without the smell of corruption on his garments, and I object to the honest record of a lifetime being wrecked by the false and contradictory statements of would-be corruptionists and their agents. To me it is plain that the Republican National Committee feared the Prohibition movement, and desired to destroy it. Legate, finding this out determined to bleed the Committee, and his "cock and bull" stories were all made up for that purpose. He had no communication with my Committee, except to write me a letter in September, insisting that St. John must be withdrawn in the interest of the Republican party. In this letter he vaguely hinted at being the representative of the National Republican Committee, and asked me to meet him in Leavenworth to talk over matters. I replied that St. John was the candidate of a party, and could not be withdrawn under any circumstances. I did not hear from him again. If Mr. Legate will publish my letter to him, he will show the public just how far he succeeded in negotiating with the National Prohibition Committee.

In closing let me say the National Prohibition Committee did not receive either directly or indirectly one cent from either the National Democratic or Republican Committee, and no person has a letter or telegram either directly or indirectly from the Committee looking to any negotiation to withdraw our candidates for money or any other consideration. I accept the statement of St. John as true in regard to the charges against him, and think the case as at present proved simply convicts the Republican Committee of a desire to be knaves while in reality they were only fools.

ILLUSTRATED.

With the new volume, beginning in December, Harper's Magazine will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine-making. In a word, the Magazine becomes more and more the faithful mirror of current life and movement. Leading features in the attractive programme for 1885 are: new serial novels by Constance Fenimore Woolson and W. D. Howells; a new novel entitled "At the Red Glove;" descriptive illustrated papers by F. D. Millet, R. Swain Gifford, E. A. Abbey, H. Gibson, and others; Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," illustrated by Abbey; important papers on Art, Science, etc.

THE CENTURY
In 1885.
A GREAT ENTERPRISE

PAPERS ON THE CIVIL WAR.

The important feature of The Century Magazine for the coming year—indeed, perhaps the most important ever undertaken by the magazine—will be a series of separate papers on the Great battles of the War for the Union, written by general officers high in command upon both the Federal and Confederate sides—General Grant (who writes of Vicksburg, Shiloh, and other battles), Generals Longstreet, McClellan, Beauregard, Rosecrans, Hill, Admiral Porter, and others. The series opens in the November Century with a graphically illustrated article on

THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN,

Written by the Confederate general, G. T. Beauregard. Brief sketches, entitled "Recollections of a Private," papers chronicling special events, descriptions of various auxiliary branches of the service, etc., will supplement the more important series by the various generals.

A strict regard for accuracy will guide the preparation of the illustrations, for which The Century has at its disposal a very large quantity of photographs, drawings, portraits, maps, plans, etc., hitherto unused. The aim is to present in this series, not official reports, but commanding officers' accounts of their plans and operations—interesting personal experiences which will record leading events of the war and possess, at the same time, a historical value not easily to be calculated.

FICTION.

In this line The Century will maintain its prestige, and furnish the best stories by American writers that can be procured. In November begins

A NEW NOVEL BY W. D. HOWELLS,

Author of "Venetian Days," "A Modern Instance," etc. This story deals with the rise of an American business man. A novel by Henry James, a novelette by Grace Denio Litchfield, and short stories by "Uncle Remus," Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, H. H., Julian Hawthorne, and other equally well-known writers will appear at various times.

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

Under this heading may be included a series of papers on the Cities of Italy by W. D. Howells, the illustrations being reproductions of etchings and drawings by Joseph Pennell; a series on

THE NEW NORTHWEST,

being an interesting group of papers by E. V. Smalley, Lieut. Schwatka, Principal Grant (of Kingston, Ontario), and others, descriptive of little-known regions; papers on French and American art—sculpture and painting, with some exquisite illustrations; papers on the first being by Professor Langley and others. Under Architecture are included more of Mrs. Van Rensselaer's articles on Churches, City and Country Houses, etc. Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., will describe

ASTRONOMY, ARCHITECTURE & HISTORY,

PROGRESS IN SANITARY DRAINING;

E. C. Stedman, Edmund Gosse and others will furnish literary essays; George W. Cable will contribute in various ways; several papers on sport and adventure will soon be published, and will write from time to time on outdoor subjects.

Readers of The Century may feel sure of keeping abreast of the times on leading subjects that may properly come within the province of a monthly magazine. Its circulation is now about 140,000 monthly, the November number exceeding that figure. Subscriptions should date from this number, beginning the War Series and Mr. Howell's novel. Price $4 00 a year, 35 cents a number. All book-sellers and news-dealers sell it and take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to the publishers.

A free specimen of The Century will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

ST. NICHOLAS

FOR

ATTRACTIONS FOR 1884-5.

No printed periodical can take the place of parent, pastor, or school-teacher; but a good magazine can supplement their work and influence to a wonderful degree. In view of this, it is not extravagant to say that—instead of "Can we afford to take ST. NICHOLAS?"—the question of every earnest household in English-speaking countries, to-day, should be "Can we afford not to take ST. NICHOLAS?"

has grown familiar to hundreds of thousands of young readers; and their interest and intelligent enjoyment have constantly inspired the editor and publishers to fresh effort. To-day its strength is in its wholesome growth, its sympathy with young life, its hearty recognition of the movement of events, and its steadily increasing literary and pictorial resources. The following are some of the good things already secured for future numbers of ST. NICHOLAS:

"His One Fault," a serial story for boys, by the popular author, J. T. Trowbridge.

"Personally Conducted," illustrated papers on famous places in Europe. By Frank R. Stockton.

"Historic Girls," a companion series to "Historic Boys." By E. S. Brooks.

"Ready for Business;" suggestions to boys about to choose an occupation,—based on personal interviews with prominent representatives of various trades and professions. By G. J. Manson.

"Driven Back to Eden," a serial. By E. P. Roe.

"Talks for Young Folks," a series of papers, by H. H. (Helen Jackson).

"Among the Law-makers"; recollections of a boy-page in the U. S. Senate,—containing much political information, both instructive and amusing. By Edmund Alton.

"Davy and the Goblin," a very funny serial story by a new writer, Chas. Carryl.

Short stories by Louisa M. Alcott.

"The Progress of Invention"; "From Palanquin to Parlor-car," "From Cross-bow to 100-ton Gun," etc. Descriptive papers, by Chas. E. Bolton.

"Art Work for Young Folks"; papers on decorative handicraft, by Chas. G. Leland.

"Sheep or Silver?" a story of Texas life. By the late Rev. William M. Baker.

"A Garden of Girls," being six short stories for girls, by Six Leading Writers.

"Tales of Two Continents"; stories of adventure, by H. H. Boyesen.

"Cartoons for Boys and Girls," funny pictures, by St. Nicholas Artists.

The illustrations will be the work of the very best artists and engravers,—and there will be plenty of them. In the November and December numbers are beautiful

COLORED FRONTISPIECES.

Buy the November number for the children. It costs only 25 cents, and all book and news dealers sell it. The subscription price is $3 a year, and now is just the time to subscribe.

A free specimen copy of ST. NICHOLAS will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of Scrofula about you, SCROFULA AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system.

For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

ULCEROUS SORES "Hutto, Tex., Sept. 28, 1882. "At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with ulcerous running sores on its face and neck. At the same time its eyes were swollen, much inflamed, and very sore. SORE EYES Physicians told us that a powerful alterative medicine must be employed. They united in recommending AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A few doses produced a perceptible improvement, which, by an adherence to your directions, was continued to a complete and permanent cure. No evidence has since appeared of the existence of any scrofulous tendencies; and no treatment of any disorder was ever attended by more prompt or effectual results.
Yours truly, B. F. JOHNSON."

Gray's Specific Medicine.

TRADE MARK The Great English Remedy. An unfailing cure for Impotency, Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to Insanity or Consumption and a premature grave. TRADE MARK

BEFORE TAKING.

AFTER TAKING.

Beware of advertisements to refund money, when druggists from whom the medicine is bought do not refund, but refer you to the manufacturers, and the requirements are such that they are seldom, if ever, complied with. See their written guarantee. A trial of one single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most skeptical of its real merits. On account of counterfeits, we have adopted the Yellow Wrapper, the only genuine. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to every one. The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or six packages for $5, or will be sent free by mail on receipt of the money by addressing

POETRY

THE GROCER'S WOOING.

"My dear Miss Sally Raisin," sighed
The grocer on his knee,
"I canned-corn-ceive no better bride
Than you would beef for me."

"You are a silly man," replied
The maid, "as one mace see—"
"A vermecill man," he cried,
"I mustard-mire thee."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A CURIOUS OVERSIGHT.

"Price!"

"Yes, Major."

"Where's Mr. Douglass?"

"Gone to the Priory, sir. Back at ten o'clock."

"You've put the whisky out?"

"Yes, sir."

"And the cigars?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you've put the kettle on?"

"Yes, sir."

"That's all, I think. You may turn in, Price, if you like."

"Thank you Major. Good night." And Price with a stoniness of visage and a setness of figure when under examination by his superior officer strongly suggestive of pipe-clay in the present or the past, stalked from the room and left the Major alone. The latter walked to the window and looked across the landscape to where, seen through a gap in the encircling woods, the spires and pinnacles of Okenham Priory bulked black against the last few fading gleams of sunset color in the west.

"Gone to the Priory—eh? Where else should he have gone? Why didn't he go there six months ago, and stay there? She wouldn't object. And it would be a better bivouac than this, I think. The boy used to have pluck enough. What's gone with it all?"

"This" was Oakenham Cottage, a small two-storied edifice, standing in its own strip of garden. It had been a pretty place not so long ago, and perhaps was so still, though its every detail showed neglect. The garden was flowerless and its trees looked ragged and forlorn—sympathizing, as vegetation has a knack of doing, with the decay about them.

The room in which the major sat showed signs of kindred to those which marked the exterior of the house. Its furniture was battered and rheumatic, but the books, papers, whips, foils, fishing-rods and heterogeneous lumber of a bachelor menage scattered carelessly about it, gave it something of the air of cheerfulness which every constantly-used haunt of humanity is sure to acquire. Over the mantel hung a water-color sketch of a girl's head, flanked by two pen-and-ink sketches. The first of these represented the present tenant of the room, planted in a frantically theatrical attitude on a bastion, waving on his followers, who were omitted for want of space. The second represented a young man, clad in wig and gown, harranguing, with an ineffable, dandified air of self-complacency a sleeping jury, and a judge, who held a trumpet to his ear with one hand and an opera-glass to his eye with the other. The first of these efforts bore the inscription, "My Friend, the Major," and was signed "R. D.," and under the second was inscribed "Dick Douglas a doing of it," and the "J. M."

The Major shook his head at the centerpiece of this decoration, lit the lamp and a cigar and betook himself to the study of a chart which lay upon the table. He was a small, fat man, with a ridiculous likeness to the conventional cherub, a likeness which a bald head, an eyeglass and a pair of mustaches of military pattern, uncherubic as are those accessories, failed to destroy. His nose had that tinge of red which, as an acute and learned physiognomist of the present day has observed, is just sufficient to impart benevolence of aspect. He remained absorbed in the examination of the chart until his study was interrupted by the arrival of the original of the second caricature over the mantel.

"Well, Dick," said the Major.

Dick nodded with a countenance of gloom and took his seat beside the fireless grate, contemplating the portrait at which the Major had shaken his head half an hour before. Then he began a whispering whistle, and finally, lighting a pipe, went to the table and sat upon it.

"Tell me something more about Upopo," he said.

The Major smiled a smile of doubtful meaning, and with a finger on the chart began:

"The nearest port is Sydney, which is five hundred miles away—call it a three days' run; lovely climate, beautiful soil. Coasts rich in coral and beche de mer. Forests—oak and teak principally—alive with game—boar, deer and birds. Rivers swarming with fish. I'm sure there's gold, and I'm more than half inclined to think there's oil. It's a perfect little paradise, my boy, and there isn't a snake nor an alligator, nor a white man, nor any other kind of vermin, within five hundred miles."

"Natives?"

"Yes; quiet and peaceable and beautifully ignorant."

"What's the size of the place?"

"About as large as England, omitting Wales."

"Why don't we take?"

"We? Meaning England—the Government?"

"Yes."

"My dear boy, England never takes anything. Never did."

"Oh! What about America, for instance? Or India?"

"If you will read history, you will see that America was positively forced upon us for years before we took it. Had Spain and Portugal allowed our men to do all they wanted to do, namely, to trade with the settlements there, they might have been masters of America till this day, barring perhaps a few insignificant colonies; but like the greedy fools they were, they wouldn't, and we had to fight. For a long time we simply fought for freedom of trade, and when we found that would be too long a job, we kicked the Spaniards out altogether and took the country."

"And India?"

"The same story, rather different in detail. I believe, in spite of the awful name we've got, that England is really the least predatory nation in the world."

"That's a novel view, at least."

"And a true one. Why, look at our conduct in Egypt now! Germany actually wants us to take it. France can't prevent us and we won't. We shall at last, of course—we always do ultimately; but it will have to be crammed down our throats before we swallow it. And as for this little scheme of mine, the Foreign Office would stop it in a twinkling if they knew; but they don't, and what's more, they shan't till I'm there."

"And then?"

"And then—we'll see."

"Annexation, once began,
Bequeathed by pirate, sire to son,
Though to the end, is ever won."

And the Major smiled, well pleased with his impromptu parody.

"Is it piracy?" asked Dick.

"Don't know. Perhaps. We must take the risks."

"Yes," echoed Dick, "we must take risks."

The Major looked at him inquiringly.

"I'm coming with you," said Dick simply. After which they were both silent for a while. "Yes," said Dick again presently, "I'll go with you. It will be work and excitement, and change of scene, and it will be better, at all events, than eating my heart out here. And look here, Morton, you might give me some work to do, connected with the expedition in town or somewhere. I want to get away. I think I shall sell the place. It won't fetch much; but it's no use to me now. Yes, I'll go over to-morrow, and say—say good-by to—to her, and then I'll go up to town. Wood will find me a purchaser, or, perhaps, buy it himself."

He brightened up a little under the idea of active work; but his face saddened again as he ceased speaking, and his chin dropped on his breast.

The Major smoked on in silent sympathy, and presently rising, patted his friend soothingly on the shoulder once or twice.

"It's hard lines, Morton," said Dick, with a break in his voice; "it's hard lines."

"I know, my boy—I know," said the Major, still with that soothing hand upon his shoulder. But you will get over it, like the rest of us. I had it myself once, real bad."

"You?" said Dick. He had never thought of connecting such a confirmed old bachelor with the hot hopes and sick despairs under which he suffered.

"Being mortal, I have made a fool of myself in many ways," responded the Major, "and in that, among others. You know her, too."

"I know her? Who was it, Major?"

Microscopic investigations might have discovered something like a blush under the deep tan of the Major's face.

"It was Mrs. Frump," he said.

"Mrs. Frump?" shrieked Dick indignant. "Why, she's fifty-five, and has a figure like a kitchen poker."

"Yes. But she was twenty, five-and thirty years ago, and so was I," said the Major. "And she had the figure of Diana, then. My case was worse than yours, Dick. We were actually engaged, and she threw me over for old Frump and his yellow boys. I got over it better than she did. Frump used to allow her fifty pounds a year for dress, and swore if she had a candle to go to bed. Told me so herself. Poor little Kitty!" The Major sighed, and blew his nose thoughtfully.

"Was that the only attack you ever had?"

"Yes, I am sorry to say. Ah, Dick, my boy, it's better to be in love, even hopelessly, than out of it. You think you're precisely ill used, don't you, now? And when you're my age you'd give all you've got to be able to go through it again. I would, though that isn't saying much, begad!" he added, with a fretful grope in his pockets.

"Good night!" growled Dick, as disgusted as any hopeless lover would be at being told that he was a happy man, and the Major echoing him placidly, they parted for the night.

Next morning, after a silent and scarcely tasted breakfast, through which Dick sat with a countenance as of a condemned criminal resolved to face the inevitable with all possible calm, he betook himself to Okenham Priory. The Major watched his diminishing figure from the window till he was lost in the gloom of the encircling trees, and shook his head as he returned to his beloved chart.

"Poor beggar!" said the Major.

Dick passed the lodge of the Priory with gloomy nod, addressed to the venerable rustic who guarded it, and strode along the avenue, feeling his courage oozing from him faster at every step, and at a sudden turn of the drive he came across a spectacle at which it evaporated all at once, and left him limp and shamefaced. It was nothing very terrible after all, only a young lady in a plain white morning-dress, with a thread of scarlet at the throat, and a broader band of the same color at the waist. If she was not as lovely as Dick thought her, it was only because that would have been beyond the power of any mortal woman. She was tall, and straight, and lithe, and, seen through the halo of lover's fancies with which he surrounded her, she seemed majestic. But Dick was a singular young man for the nineteenth century, and all petticoated things were sacred and mysterious in his eyes, and this especial girl a thousandfold more than any other. She had a basket on her arm, and a severely business-like aspect of face, which changed to one of patient suffering as she beheld the approaching Dick.

"Why will you come at this time?" she demanded, with the raised eyebrows of hopeless remonstrance one wears in addressing an incorrigible child. "You know I'm always busy in the morning."

"I always do come at the wrong time!" groaned Dick.

"Then why do you?" asked the lady.

"I don't know," replied the hopeless one; "my luck, I suppose."

"I really can't talk to you now," said the pitiless girl. "I've got all these things to distribute, and I've got to call on Mr. Reredos about the sick club, and——"

"Can't they wait?" asked Dick, with an inward aspiration—that is hardly the word I fear—regarding the reverend gentleman, whom he had hitherto respected as a mighty oar and a slashing bat man.

"No, indeed, they can't. The idea of keeping a clergyman waiting while you talk nonsense. His time is valuable, if yours isn't. He takes a great interest in the poor."

"I've no doubt he does," said Dick, grown bilious at this reiterated mention of the cleric.

"It's a great deal better than taking interest in nothing, and mooning about with his hands in his pockets as some people do."

"Don't be too hard on a fellow, Nellie," said Dick plaintively. "Reredos is a very decent fellow, I know; but I didn't come to talk about him. I've come to say good-by, I'm going to—to London."

He tried to get out "Upopo," but, like Macbeth's "Amen," it stuck in his throat.

"Oh, good-by," she answered, holding out her hand.

"Is that all you have to say to an old friend who's going——"

"All the way to London," she broke in with a smile unbearable in its brilliance and its mockery.

"All the way to Upopo," said Dick. It was out at last, and he went on quickly as if fearing that he might recall the word. "To the other side the world, Nelly, and perhaps I may never see your face again. Say something more than 'Good-by.' Nelly—say a little more than that."

"What can I say?" she asked. Her face was pale, and all the scorn had left it now; but Dick, blinded by love and the moisture in his eyes, saw no change in her.

"Oh, Nelly, if you don't know, how can I tell you?" he broke out, passionately. Then, with sudden weariness: "Good-by, good-by, do, Nelly—there, we've said it now—good-by."

And with that word he was turning from her, when, by no conscious will of her own, her hand tightened on his, and all unwittingly she asked:

"Is that all you have to say, Dick?"

He turned swiftly. Not even his love-blinded wits could fail to read the meaning of the flush which crimsoned her from throat to forehead. He caught both her hands in his.

"No!" he shouted. And then the flood-gates of his lips were opened, and he spoke. And I am afraid that that excellent man and clergyman, Mr. Reredos, must have grown very tired indeed in waiting for the promised interview about the sick-club.

As Dick entered his little sitting-room three hours after the Major looked at him with so peculiar a regard that the fluent burst upon his lips remained unspoken, and he looked almost as sheepish as he had already looked once before that morning.

"Ah," said the Major, "you won't go to Upopo, young man."

"No," said Dick. And then followed the narrative of the events of the morning.

"And to think," said the beaming lover in conclusion, "to think that I might have had her for the asking six months ago! And I never dared ask her—I never even thought of it."

"Yes," said the Major. "It was a curious oversight."

NORA.

It is not needful to my story to explain how I grew acquainted with Wyley Carroll, nor how, on a brief acquaintance, we became close friends. Few, indeed, were proof against his winning address and insinuating manner. For myself I esteemed him as the soul of honor, one to whose keeping I might intrust my dearest secret, feeling it to be as safe as in my own.

It was to him alone that I confided the attachment I had long felt for Nora Worth and which I had never dared to whisper to herself, though there were times when I thought the confession might not have awakened her displeasure. But Nora's father was rich, proud and ambitious, and I knew he had higher aims for his daughter than an alliance with one who had both fortune and position yet to win, and so I determined to withhold an avowal of my feelings until such time as their expression would not expose me to be treated as a presuming adventurer.

I had a situation offered me in a foreign house, which I decided to accept. It would give me a start in life at any rate; and with courage and determination, I might hope, after a few years, to present myself to Nora's father, and speak my mind without blushing. All this my friend and I talked over together, and many a gorgeous castle in the air he helped me build.

"Here," said Wyley, whom I met while on my way to his lodgings the evening before I sailed, to get some letters he had promised me—"here is the key to my cabinet. You will find the letters in it, and you can hand me the key when we meet to dine together."

I went to his room, to which I had the entree, and found the letters as he had said.

Wylie had invited me to dine with him at his club that evening, where we once more discussed my plans and prospects, and put an addition or two to the air castles we had already built.

I wondered how my friend could be so merry, seeing we were to part so soon; but, then, I remembered, he was an old traveler, and likely didn't mind such things like my inexperienced self.

Once installed in my new abode, I gave myself to work and had little time to be homesick. But one thing both annoyed and puzzled me. Though I wrote letters to many friends announcing my arrival and relating such matters as I thought to be of interest, no answer came. Not even Wyley Carroll, who had promised to write me regularly, sent a line to say that I was not forgotten. My first feeling was of pain, then of resentment, till at last I forgot my friend's neglect in the occupation afforded by my duties.

Nearly a year had elapsed, when one day I chanced to meet Charlie Wythe, my chum at school, and one of the friends I had most esteemed.

"How are you, Charley?" I exclaimed, rushing up to take his hand.

"How are you, Mr. Ames?" he returned cooly, at the same time bowing stiffly.

I was struck with astonishment.

"What is the meaning of this?" I asked, with some warmth; "and why have you and the rest of my friends—at least I so accounted them—not deigned to reply to my letters?"

"I supposed you could surmise the reason," he answered, abating none of his stiffness.

"Surmise the reason! what reason?" I demanded, my temper still rising.

"I have been of those willing to admit the possibility of your innocence in spite of appearances," he replied, in measured tones; "and if you have never yet heard of the accusation, it is high time you were apprised of it."

"Accusation! against whom?" I exclaimed.

"Against yourself."

I felt myself stagger as under a blow.

"I demand to know it!" I cried, seizing his arm, "and more—the name of the accuser."

"You remember the evening before you left home?" he began.

"Perfectly."

"You visited Wyley Carroll's room that evening?"

"Yes."

"And unlocked his cabinet, of which he had given you the key?"

"And locked it again."

"Yes, after taking out the letters which Carroll had sent me for."

"In the cabinet," Charley resumed, "was a diamond ring, the property of Miss Worth, who had, it seems, given it to Carroll to have the setting repaired. It has never been seen since, and you——"

"And I am accused of stealing it!" I interrupted with fierce passion. "May I ask by whom?"

"Why, you see, Carroll says it is impossible that the cabinet, of which the lock is peculiar, could have been opened and locked again without the key, which was only out of his own possession while it was in yours."

"It is he, then," I managed to articulate through my clenched teeth, "who accuses me of being a thief. And Nora—Miss Worth—does she credit the base slander?"

"I can only say," Charley answered, "that it is rumored that she and Wyley Carroll, who lately returned from a tour abroad are to be married shortly; and it is hardly possible she would unite herself to one whom she believed to be a slanderer."

"Enough!" I said with what calmness I could muster. "I shall ask no friendly recognition till this foul lie is exposed and its author punished;" and I hurried away.

My homeward voyage was not freighted with as many hopes as had attended my outward bound, and was tedious enough besides.

But at last I set foot upon my native land. My purpose was first to see Miss Worth, from whom, if I could not disabuse her mind of the vile imputation cast upon me, I might at least learn with more exactness the circumstances which gave it rise. Of these I wished to be precisely informed before reckoning with Wyley Carroll.

Mr. Worth's residence was a retired suburban villa, surrounded by thickly wooded grounds, intersected by winding paths branching off from the main avenue, many of them almost hidden by overhanging vines and branches.

Into one of these I turned, and seating myself on a rustic bench, sought to compose myself for the interview, which, now that it was so near filled me with trepidation.

Soon I heard the rustling of a lady's dress, and through the interlacing twigs which separated me from an adjacent walk, I caught sight of a form which I immediately recognized as that of Nora Worth.

I hesitated at once to make known my presence, which my position concealed; and while debating the matter with myself, another female figure came forth suddenly, as if from some place of concealment, and stood in the path before Nora. The latter started, while the former, a dark-eyed, olive-complexioned woman, scanned her keenly.

"You are Miss Worth," said the strange lady, in a marked foreign accent.

Nora bowed, her face expressing a mixture of timidity and surprise.

"You are engaged to be married to Wyley Carroll," resumed the other.

"Madame, I——"

"Oh, I know all about it," interrupted the dark-eyed stranger; "but you shall never marry him. He is already my husband. We were married six months ago in Italy. I have the certificate here. But though he has abandoned me, he shall never be another's."

"I assure you——" Nora began.

"I intend to assure myself!" broke in the stranger fiercely: "I have come to kill you!"

She raised her hand in which was grasped a stiletto whose blade gleamed in the sunlight, and was in the act of springing on her victim, when I bounded forward and caught her arm. Nora fell swooning. I ran to her assistance and raised her in my arms. In a few seconds she was restored to consciousness. A piercing shriek at this moment drew attention. As we turned to look the Italian beauty buried the murderous weapon in her own bosom, and, as we hurried to her, fell, expiring at our feet.

"Poor thing!" murmured Nora, in pitying accents, taking the dying woman's hand in her own. It was a hand of delicate beauty, and on one of the fingers was a costly ring. Nora uttered a cry of astonishment as her eyes fell upon it. The ring was her own—the self-same that Carroll had accused me of stealing!

I called for help, and had the now lifeless body suitably cared for, and then led Nora away.

My own name was already vindicated. Carroll, on whose wife's dead body was found the marriage certificate of which she had spoken, did not wait to meet me, but disappeared never to return.

The rumor of his match with Nora, I soon learned, had been entirely of his own giving out. It was a marriage he had hoped to accomplish, and of which he had given confident assurance to certain importunate creditors.

Nor did I find Mr. Worth as stern as I had expected, when, at a later period, with Nora's permission, I came to claim her hand.

"Take her," said the old gentleman; "surely none can have a better right to her than the man who saved her life."

THE FLIRT.

Not that I think myself a flirt; no, indeed, my title is a neat little bit of sarcasm, I want you all to understand. Ever since I wore long dresses, and before that memorable epoch, for aught I know, everybody had called me a flirt. I am no such thing! Am I to blame, I want to know, because the opposite gender insanely persist in liking me? Can I help it if they will spend their evenings in our parlor?—common hospitality not allowing me to turn them out. Can I help it if they will ask me to dance and play and sing? Yes, of course, I might refuse; but, dear me! I hope one may be civil. As for riding, I haven't any horse of my own, and I'm not going to decline riding behind Bill Smith's or Tom Jones' for fear of being called a flirt; and as for skating, if the girls want the aforesaid Bill and Tom to skate with them instead of me, let them learn to skate with some spirit, and not pretend to be afraid and make such fools of themselves. I solemnly assert that I never was guilty of the meanness of encouraging "offers." I always stave them off before they come to the proposing point. And I take credit to myself for it, for it is a deal of trouble, I assure you.

So now I hope you understand me, and I'll proceed with my story. If any of my friends read it, they will never know who wrote it, or suspect that I am not as heartless as they like to call me.

Of all my masculine friends, who were at all eligible for that purpose, I believe Oliver Dent was the only one with whom I was never accused of flirting: and yet we were a great deal together at one time. It was in June, of course—I wonder if people's happiest days always come in June? Oliver did like me, I am sure. Such pleasant walks we have had together; such charming rides and delightful sails. But the very happiest, sweetest, silliest hour of all—shall I ever forget it?

It was the loveliest June evening I ever saw. I went to sail with him. How beautiful everything was—the dewy fields, the clover-scented air, the moonlight and the little lake, so smooth and still under its white sheen. And then the two boats, with Mollie Drew and Ellery Caswell in one, and Oliver Dent and I in the other. We kept together at first. Ellery Caswell had a guitar, and he played and we all sung. But after a little, we gradually separated and drew apart. Ellery rowed out into the middle of the lake, and we could hear his music, sweet and tender, interrupted now and then by Mollie's laugh. Mollie would laugh at anything; she was the incarnation of fun.

But Oliver and I kept in the shadow along the shore. I suppose we sentimentalized; indeed, I'm sure we did. But I can assure you that to me it was all earnest enough. I cared a great deal more for Oliver Dent than I wanted him or any one to suspect.

But he talked as I never knew him to talk before. And I began to feel a strange sort of half-frightened expectancy when he broke a bunch of blossoms from a vine overhanging the lake, and placed them in my hair, whispering something—as if there had been anybody to hear it!—which I did not clearly comprehend, only I knew it made my heart flutter and my cheek flush. Then he took my hands in his own, and I did not withdraw them; and he was just about to speak when up came the other boat, Ellery and Mollie!

Then there was nothing to do but join in their laughing and jesting, and there was no more sentiment, for we all walked home together.

When I met Oliver the next day my cheeks grew very red, and I must have looked conscious; but, to my astonishment, he favored me with the very coldest bow I ever received, and walked on without a word.

Twice after that I met him, and he did the same; and then I resolved to outdo him in rudeness, and so I just walked past him without a glance. And for weeks, whenever I encountered him, I treated him to a display of frigid indifference edifying to behold, which he fully reciprocated.

But oh, me! to think how I suffered all these long, bitter weeks! When he had just taught me how well, how very, very well I loved him, to grow so strangely, so cruelly cold!

But I did not give the world any chance to suspect it; of that you may be sure. I was never so gay; I suppose I did flirt then, but you know there are times when it is the most convenient cloak, and any girl would do it.

I went up into a backwoods sort of place, called Clearmont, away off among the hills, where I had some seventh cousin.

There I was besieged by two young fellows, of whom one was called Darley Rivers and the other Ben Morton. Darley was a little bit the greenest, and Ben a little bit the softest, and both became my devoted admirers.

I flirted recklessly with both until something occurred that put an end to it. It was only a trifle, but trifles are a great deal, after all.

They were both at my cousin's house one afternoon in September. I was hysterically gay, and, to quote cousin Sam, "carried on as if I was possessed." I was "possessed"—with a spirit of feminine Mephistopheles. My thoughts were full of Oliver Dent. I kept thinking of him, always of him; I could not drive away the haunting thought, try as I would. I felt so hard and bitter that I hated him! I hated silly Ben Morton and devoted Darley Rivers (who acted like a lunatic, I said to myself). I said bitter, hateful things to them both and to my cousin, and I took a fierce pleasure in seeing that they felt hurt.

By and by Sam carelessly took up my portfolio, which lay open on the table, and it falling open in his hand, out upon the floor dropped a withered rosebud—a white rosebud—that Oliver Dent gave me in June—that beautiful June that seemed so long ago. Darley Rivers picked it up and gave it back to me, singing sweetly:

"Here's him that's far awa', Willie
Here's him that's far awa'—
And here's the flower that I love best—
The rose that's like the snaw."

"I only laughed and said:

"Do you?" My favorite flower is the blue violet!"

Whereupon, Ben Morton declared that it was his, too!

It was well they did not see the tears that were blinding my eyes, and I left the room, under pretense of putting away the portfolio. The hateful Mephistophelian mood was gone, and oh! how my heart ached! I threw myself down upon the floor, and in my own room, and wept as I never wept before.

Then I heard Sam calling me, and I arose and bathed my eyes and smoothed my hair, and went back to the sitting-room.

I was full of wild excitement after that. I sang and talked and joked in a crazy manner; I laughed incessantly to keep from crying! for I was so hysterical, that very little would have turned my laughter into tears.

Ben Morton fairly convulsed me by the blunt declaration, that "I was real handsome, that was a fact. He didn't think I was, awhile ago, 'cause I was so cross, but when I was good-natured, I was pretty as a picture, he vowed I was!"

To which Darley Rivers, my loyal cavalier, retorted,

"She looked like herself now; but I never saw her when I didn't think she was pretty!" which, I venture, he had said at least fifty-nine times since he first met me.

Of course I laughed at that, and said all manner of silly things; but, oh, how I wished they would go. At last they went, and glad enough was I.

After that I kept them at a distance and left off flirting. I left off singing and laughing, too; and indeed I left off everything except moping, and being blue, and wishing I were dead.

One day Sam brought me a letter from Mollie Drew. I did not read it for some time; I was too miserable to care about any of Mollie's nonsense; but at length I mustered up interest enough to open the letter.

"DEAR KATE:—Can you ever forgive me? It was too bad, but, really, I had no idea I was spoiling a proposal that night on the lake when I coaxed Ellery to row back and stop your romancing. And I didn't mean anything but fun when I cautioned Oliver against you afterward. I thought it would be a good joke to remind him that you were a terrible flirt, and to tell him that you were reported engaged to your Cousin Sam. I laughed all that week to see how disconsolate he was and how you froze him. After that, you know, I went away, and when I came home you were up in Clearmont, and Oliver was actually distracted. So I just told him that I didn't believe you were such a dreadful flirt as people said, and that I knew it was only a report about your Cousin Sam.

"Then he was terribly angry, and asked me for your address—which I gave him—and then stalked away like an indignant Sultan. So I presume it is reasonable to presume that you will soon see him up there to finish that interrupted proposal. You had better accept him, my dear; he is a splendid match."

I had read so far when somebody came to announce a gentleman visitor for me. Of course I knew who it was, and, attiring myself in my prettiest clothes, and with my heart beating fast went down to meet him.

But don't suppose that I threw myself into his arms, declaring that I was all his own, etc. By no means. I just touched his hand, coolly, and inquired after his health, and wondered what had given me this unexpected pleasure.

But, after some little preliminary skirmishing, we settled it all to our satisfaction. I shan't tell you how; but you would find it difficult to convince Oliver that I am at all deficient in the matter of heart.

POSTSCRIPT.

A decided sensation is created in London to-day, by the reported capture of Kartoum. There are all sorts of reports in circulation as to the manner in which it fell and the fate of Gen. Gordon, but nothing definite can be learned.

CIVIL SERVICE.

We hear much in these days of abundant precept and meagre practice about Civil Service Reform.

Editors write and politicians prate about the subject as though it were a new and grand invention, just evolved from the brain of patriotism.

It is in fact as old as the Constitution. There cannot be a doubt that reformation in that particular department of the public service, as in almost every other, is greatly needed at the present time, but, it may be well asked, what is the real meaning and practical application of the term?

If we understand the virtue of Civil Service Reform it is that every needful public office, from the highest down to the lowest, shall be filled with rightly qualified men, and that no sinecure leeches or worthless drones shall be permitted to deplete the treasury of the people.

It is only necessary to refer back to the official declaration of President Jefferson, the father of the Democratic party, to find true advocacy of reform in the civil service of our country.

Jefferson was the virtual author of that measure, as he was of the declared principles of free government. It was he who, as Chief Magistrate of the United States, laid down the following three cardinal requirements for the appointment of public officers:—

Is he honest?
Is he capable?
Is he of good repute?

There we have the essentials of practical reform, and Congress could not by passing a score of bills on the subject more effectually cover the ground.

We want honest men in office.

Not corrupt politicians, not artful wire-pullers, not avaricious money grabbers, but men who will hold public place to be a sacred trust, and die rather than steal, either directly or indirectly, a dollar of public money.

We want capable men in office.

Men of sound business judgment, clear-headed intelligence, and qualified practically, not theoretically, to comprehend and faithfully discharge the details of official duty.

We want men of good repute in office.

Men whose established characters for morality and sobriety will be a sure guarantee of both public and private honor.

The Jeffersonian standard, faithfully enforced, will purify, dignify and make efficient the civil service. It does not seek to favor applicants for office merely because they are skilled partisans, or versed in fancy theoretical knowledge, but because they are known to possess the unsullied and priceless badge of HONESTY, CAPABILITY AND MORAL WORTH.

PARTISANSHIP.

The Republican majority in the Common Council exhibited their partisanship on Monday evening last by voting to confirm all the Mayor's Republican nominations and rejecting the Democratic nominees for Overseer of Poor and Police. A Democratic Mayor in this city is but a figurehead when he has a Republican majority in the Council to contend with. His Honor made nominations to suit the Republicans, and the Republicans voted for those candidates which suited them. Assurances made that all nominations sent in by the Mayor, would be confirmed, seems not to have been carried out. The Republicans get the cake and the Democrats the crumbs. The political status of the city officers confirmed last Monday night is a Republican Corporation Counsel, Street Commissioner, Captain of Police, two policemen, and Overseer of the Poor. The Democrats secure the City Physician, and one Democratic policeman, by reason of the latter holding over if he was not confirmed. His Honor, no doubt, acted according to his best judgment, in sending in such nominations as he did, and probably if there was a Democratic majority in the Council, that majority would do as the Republicans have done—get all the cake they could. Perhaps our turn will come soon.

The boom still continues for Attorney-General Stockton to be given a place in President Cleveland's Cabinet, and grows stronger every day. Senator McPherson is one of his staunchest advocates. Gen. Stockton has a large following in his party and is a man well qualified for a Cabinet officer. New Jersey should be recognized in the Cabinet portfolio, and the Attorney-General seems to be the choice of his party.

Unknown parties exploded dynamite cartridges against the plate glass windows in front of Barry Bros. Dry Goods store, on Grand street, New York city, on Sunday night last. The explosion blew in the front of the store causing considerable damage. Ridley's store, opposite, also suffered in the breakage of the large plate glass in its front. The dastardly act is attributed to striking workmen who were recently discharged by Barry Bros. Dynamite explosions are becoming too frequent in this country.

The Jersey City Journal gives the following sensible advice to Republicans:—"We do not think it will pay Republican office-holders to put forth any effort, or manifest much anxiety about retaining the offices they now hold. The Democratic administration is coming into power. The Democrats want the offices, they are going to get them, and the Republicans may as well make up their minds to go to the rear, and march without grumbling or whining. They have had possession of places, more or less desirable and profitable, for various periods, and now their time has come to give place to others. Why growl about it? Why complain any more than the other Republicans, who out-number them a thousand to one, who never had any offices at all. These non-office-holding Republicans have managed to get on somehow and the present office-holding Republicans ought to be able to do so as well when they become non-office-holders. It is nonsense and weakness to growl over the fortunes of war.

THE LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 2.—The Senate held a short, and the House quite a long, session Monday evening. The re-nomination by Governor Abbett of Chief-Justice Beasley was the only thing of note that transpired in either branch. The nomination was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The Chief-Justice is 70 years old, and was first appointed by Governor Parker, in 1864. Governors Randolph and McClellan reappointed him, and his nomination now by Governor Abbett is for the fourth term. It is expected that he will encounter the opposition of Senator Vanderbilt, but his confirmation is beyond question. His term is for seven years and his salary $7 500.

The House Committee on Railroads and Canals had a meeting, which lasted until midnight, to listen to a discussion of the railroad tax question. The principal point mooted was as to the advisability of extending the provision of the Tax act of last Winter, by which the State agreed to surrender her right to take the roads on condition that the roads forego their rights under their irreparable contracts. The question was argued by Judge McDermott, of the State Tax Board; Assemblyman Corbin, of Union, and ex-Assemblyman Thomas V. Cator, of Hudson. The committee will hold another meeting for the consideration of the question in a day or two.

In the Senate on Monday night the President presented a memorial signed by Mrs. V. M. Hatfield, of Dunellen, calling the attention of the Senators, to recent accidents on the Central Railroad, and the general carelessness in the conduct of the road, and asking for home legislation for the safety of travelers. The memorial was referred to the Committee on Railroads and Canals.

Among the bills introduced Monday night in the House were the following:—

No. 163. By Mr. Chapman—Provides that in all cities accepting this act the Mayor shall have power to appoint the members of the Board of Education or other body having charge of the public schools, and from each ward or aldermanic district, and one at large for terms of two years each, no more than a majority to belong to any one political party. The Mayor shall have the power of removal for cause, but must give two weeks notice to those against whom charges are preferred before removal.

No. 175. By Mr. Keasbey—To provide for a Constitutional Convention, to be composed of three delegates from each Congressional district, two from each Assembly district and five from the State at large, who shall meet in Trenton on June 15, next; that they shall be elected by the people on April 17, in the same manner as members of the Assembly are elected. A special election is to be held on October 10th, when the amendments adopted shall be subjected to the popular vote.

No. 176. By Mr. Haines—An act to provide additional shop room at the State Prison, to provide the necessary facilities for the manufacture of goods on the "piece price plan," or the public account system. The Board of Inspectors and the principal keeper, and the supervisor of the prison are appointed a building commission, with authority to purchase the necessary material, to employ labor, and in all other necessary expense, with the approval of the Governor in the prosecution of the work. The sum of $15,000 is appropriated, and the Board may also use an unexpended balance of an appropriation made for the extension of the prison walls in 1884.

Mr. Kirkner's bill to prohibit the sale or loan of toy pistols, passed the House Monday night.

There were three bills introduced in the State Legislature, on Monday, affecting the liquor interests. In the Senate there was a bill introduced by Mr. Moon, authorizing persons in boroughs desiring a license to keep an inn or to sell beer, etc., to elect whether they shall apply to the Common Council or to the Inferior Court of Common Pleas. In the House Mr. Corbin introduced a bill, suggested by the excise commissioners, giving excise boards in cities the power to fix the fees for liquor license at from $50 to $500, and Mr. Jenkins presented a bill favoring prohibition.

The Senate confirmed the nomination of Chief Justice Beasley on Tuesday.

The Senate bill appropriating $10,000 to pay the expenses of New Jersey's share in the New Orleans Exposition, has passed both Houses.

President Schenck announced the Committee on Labor and Industry to be Herring, Pancoast and Livingston.

In the House the 5 per cent. bill was reported on adversely by the Committee.

Mr. Murphy introduced a bill in the House giving Common Councils power to fix the term of the city counsel or attorney for five years, at a salary there fixed and in force by city ordinance.

By an accident on the N. J. Central branch of the P. & R. Railroad, near Jersey City, on Friday morning last, the fast express train was totally wrecked, and twenty-one passengers and trainmen seriously injured. The cars left the track in consequence of the breaking of a wheel on the tender, and crashed into a train of loaded coal cars on a siding. The injured were mainly Philadelphians.

CAMDEN FREEHOLDERS INDICTED.

The Grand Jury of Camden county have presented five bills of indictment against the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Camden, N. J. The first indicts it as a body for conspiring to defraud the county; the second indicts those members who voted to pay Deputy County Clerk Eli B. Morgan his salary; the third those who voted to pay Coroner Jacob Justice for his bill in the Ashland Railroad disaster inquest; the fourth, those members who voted to pay Coroner's Clerk J. Moore White his bill for the same inquest, and the fifth, those members who voted to pay the Coroner's bill in the inquest on a child at Haddonfield, for which, it is alleged, there were two bills paid by the Board. The indictments were referred to the Prosecutor of the Pleas for his signature.

Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, the Irish dynamite agitator, came near meeting a tragic end in the streets of New York last Monday afternoon. A woman, claiming to be English, and giving as her name Mrs. Lucille Yseult Dudley, met Rossa by appointment, ostensibly to put in his hands funds for the aid of the dynamiters. While walking along Broadway, in the vicinity of Chambers street, the woman dropped behind him and fired a shot into Rossa's back. As he fell she discharged four more shots at him. She was arrested. Rossa was taken to the Chambers Street Hospital. His wound is not dangerous. This dynamite business is getting too promiscuous.

Good Manners.

Good manners are not learned from arbitrary teachings so much as acquired from habit. They grow upon us by use. We must be courteous, agreeable, civil, kind, gentlemanly and womanly at home, and then it will soon become a kind of second nature to be so everywhere. A coarse, rough manner at home begets a habit of roughness which we cannot lay off, if we try, when we go among strangers. The most agreeable people we have ever known in company are those that are perfectly agreeable at home. Home is the school for all the best things, especially for good manners.

County Court.

State Prison—Francis H. Neville, masked burglar, 10 years; Henry Carter, grand larceny, 2 years; Charles Lawrence, do, 1 year.

County Jail—Jacob Weislogel, malicious mischief, 3 months; Chas. Diehl, larceny, 4 months; James McCue, do, 10 days.

Reform School—Andrew Mahon, breaking with intent.

Fined—George Weislogel, malicious mischief, $5 and costs; David Kuller, do, $5 and costs; George Eiserich, assault, $10 and costs; Wm. Nally, do, $10 and costs; Abraham Brown, do $5 and costs. Addison Wiley, do, $25 and costs; Jacob Knoblauch, disorderly house, $25 and costs; Owen Sullivan, do, $25 and costs; Wm. Geselman, assault, $10; August Schmidt, do, $10; James Walsh, do, $10.

On motion of Attorney Guild, of Newark, the libel cases of ex-Senator Vail against Wm. Gibby and others, were postponed to the May term.

Petit jurors were discharged until Monday, February 9th, at the request of Judge VanSyckel of the Circuit Court.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

From One Who Has Tried It.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Regarding the operation of our Borough government, I can assure you that it gives general satisfaction, for the following reasons: When formerly we groped about the streets in darkness, now "lamps" light our path—where sidewalks were out of repair and dangerous, we now proceed in safety through the prompt notification of the Council for property owners to repair the old walk or put down a new one—where we crossed the streets in mud and slush, "cross-walks" now afford a solid path—while we used to plod our way through snow-drifts, now the borough snow-plows are early abroad, clearing the sidewalks for an easy road to or from the depot. Good order is maintained by the restraining influence of the "Mayor's Court," the Marshall and Lock-up. While all three comforts are not as elaborate as might be desired, still with the means employed they serve the purpose and are in enjoyable contrast to the former condition of non-existence. The monthly meetings of the Council develop plenty of work for the various committees, insuring the constant vigilance of its members, thereby bringing their labors before the public in a manner which ought to satisfy any reasonable taxpayer that the comfort secured is worth the extra expense, and that his property is advancing in value, through these general improvements. No word of complaint has so far reached the Council; praise and commendation has been accorded on every side, and specially so from those who first opposed the formation of the Borough. Complaints from our citizens are solicited, and when received, meet with prompt attention. Recently we received notice of a dangerous washout; had it repaired in good order, and was accorded a grateful acknowledgement. One of the best features of the Borough system is the ability to reach some one whose business it is to look after the requirements of the town, and feel sure of the work being attended to, and from what I know of our citizens I firmly believe they would not desire to return to the previous condition of affairs. Trusting that the efforts being made by the citizens of North Plainfield to establish a Borough government may be successful, and if accomplished, I am sure they will never regret.

I am, truly yours,
J. H. HINGLE.

Rutherford, N. J., Jan. 27, 1885.

Shall North Plainfield Be a Borough?

MESSRS. EDITORS—When a locality under the existing form of government and the present administration has been successfully governed for twelve years, and has under such government improved in population, in its finances, in its school system, and in economy of administration, with no extraordinary change in its status at the present time, we must look carefully for the grounds which are urged as a reason why a change, radical and revolutionary in its nature, should now be made. The reasons for needed changes are generally patent to all. They are not detected and known by a few only. They burst out spontaneously as a heart-felt wish of the people. When the reason for a change is not felt by the people, and is so obscure as to be unknown and unthought of by the mass of the people, it is proper that the authors of the proposed change should be carefully looked to, and their motives critically scrutinized. The people should not be satisfied by merely looking at the ostensible reasons offered and should not allow their attention to be taken from a contemplation of the real situation by having it called to a supposed one. And if upon a consideration of the authors of the proposed change, and the motives naturally controlling them, the ones are found to be personally ambitious, and the others the gratifying of that ambition: if the authors are known to be of that class who regard themselves as better and more exalted than the "plain people," and we see in the proposed new form of government greater means provided for gratifying this feeling of desire for personal aggrandizement than existed under the old and tried form of government, it seems to us we should be slow to adopt the new, and very strong reasons should be given to overcome the suspicion so apparently well founded, that it is more for the benefit of these haughty and ambitious originators than for the good of the people that the change is right to be made. Let us look at some of the provisions of the Borough act. In the first place it provides for several new officers, a Mayor and six commissioners. This, to start with gives a fine opportunity to cater to the vanity and love of power of several of the originators of the scheme, who are not the old conservative settlers, but those who have recently come there; who do business in New York, and are here during the day; who buy most they get in New York, and who really have not the interest of the township at heart in the same way that those have who are in business there, and who own much property there. They can take turns in being honored with the title of Mayor, a very pleasing title to carry with them to the big city; and in order that this may the surer be carried out, the act provides that the Mayor shall be elected every year. Then the six commissioners will form a very august and imposing body—full of dignity and importance, but we fear of little real benefit, especially in the summer months, for few quorums will be found to meet from among the aristocratic residents of Rockview avenue, who will be away enjoying themselves at the seaside, or in the mountains, and as the new movement originates with them, they, it is proper to assume, will also be honored with the offices. In fact we think the limits of the new borough are drawn with this object in view. For if the above are not the real objects and motives which started this movement, what are the real reasons? They certainly cannot be the reasons assigned therefore in the circulars distributed. Those are no reasons at all why the system of government should be changed. For under the recent amendments to the laws respecting townships, the township committee has all the powers therein mentioned as powers of the Mayor and Commissioners under the Borough system. The question then is can two governments be run at as little expense in the same territory as one? We think not. But if we have a Borough in one part of the township, the other part of it must continue to be controlled by the township committee, and the taxes in the Borough must be assessed and collected by the township assessor and collector. The Borough would have a right to collect a certain sum for taxes, but that would not prevent the township officers from levying taxes for the township also, and the result would be the people would be doubly taxed. Again the instigators of this movement are the proud and wealthy and would want the sidewalks paved and the streets lighted, at the expense of those who are not able to bear it. Power to do this is given under the new Borough government, but not under the township, for one half of the owners of lands fronting on streets at least must apply before the township committee can order such improvement. Again the township officers are elected by a vote of the whole township, and not of a class residing within certain limits of the township, as is the case in the Borough government. The fact is we want no change at present, or if any, only this to form a new county, having Plainfield and North Plainfield its county seat. And if we have the Borough it will be long before we have the needed new county.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Joseph N Randolph is now located in the shop recently occupied by William H. More on Broad street, prepared to make or repair harness, &c.

The Hotel Hall used in the last campaign as Democratic headquarters, is being transformed into sleeping apartments, to accommodate the increasing patronage of the hotel.

The Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, at their regular monthly meeting held on last Monday evening, nominated Samuel Goddshalk for Chief, Howard P. Manning, First Assistant and Benj. H. Woodruff, Second Assistant.

The Rev. Charles S. Ryman, a former pastor of the Methodist church of our town, is advertised to deliver two lectures—one on Feb. 9 Subject: "Our Republic and Her Needs;" on Feb. 11th, "Happy Homes," in the M. E. church.

Don't let the street lights be abandoned on account of failure of funds. They are sustained by voluntary subscription. Our Postmaster is treasurer of the village improvement committee. Let every one contribute his mite and sustain the enterprise.

The Town Committee met on Wednesday evening last at the Town rooms, getting ready to publish the annual Town*ship statement. Those in arrears of taxes* ought to call on the collectors the coming week and pay them, or make up their minds to see their name in print.

The long-felt want for a newspaper is again to be filled by a gentleman living below Philadelphia. He has rented the property recently purchased by John Darsh, and expects to occupy it the coming week. We have failed to learn as yet the name to be given to the new enterprise.

An entertainment for the benefit of Grace church, was given on Tuesday evening last in Temperance Hall. The well-known and talented Miss Alice J. Fisher recited Dickens' "Cricket on the Hearth," illustrated by tableaux vivants. The ladies connected with the Guild, furnished refreshments after the performance. There was a large number present, and a very pleasant evening's entertainment was enjoyed.

The Empire Engine Co., No. 2, at their special meeting last week, nominated a candidates for officers of the department Frank R. Penington for Chief; 1st Assistant, Howard P. Manning; 2d Assistant, Andrew Chambers. At their annual meeting held on Tuesday evening last, the following officers of the company were elected for the ensuing year: Foreman, Geo. Peek; 1st Assistant, Isaac Seely; 2d Assistant, Charles H. Daniels; Secretary, Eb. Hart; Treasurer, A. Worth.

The first election for chief and assistants of the Westfield Fire Department, will be held on next Tuesday evening, Feb. 10th. The three fire companies, composing the department have each made their nominations, and excitement is running pretty high among the fire boys. It has been rumored that the question of temperance and politics will enter into the election. If that should be so, the sooner the department is dissolved the better, for it will have lost its usefulness. We hope the rumor is incorrect.

The sudden death of William M. Townley from apoplexy, occurred on Monday last about 2 p. m. Mr. Townley after dinner, went with his wheelbarrow from his residence on Elm street, to Mr. Perry's on Mountain avenue and knocked at the door. It was opened and Mr. Townley invited in. He turned around and immediately sank to the ground unconscious. Mr. Perry, with the assistance of some gentlemen passing, carried the body into the house, and Dr. Harrison was immediately summoned. Life was extinct before the arrival of the doctor. The funeral occurred at the late residence of the deceased on Thursday afternoon. Interment in the Presbyterian church yard. The deceased was aged 69 years, and has long been a resident of our town. He leaves a widow and three children—two sons and a daughter.

COUNCIL meeting to-morrow evening.

ON for Boucicault in "the Shaughran."

INCITED by the prospect of the erection of first-class alleys in connection with the proposed new rink, bowling clubs among the elite are already talked of.

THERE is no use concealing the bad news any longer—the cold weather has destroyed the peach crop. In many Plainfield groceries the contents of the cans are frozen solid.

WE call the attention of those wishing to purchase Carpetings and Upholstery goods to the advertisement of Messrs. W. & J. Sloane, New York City, which appears in another column.

THE friends of a Borough government for North Plainfield will deservedly fail in such project unless a public meeting is held open for free and full discussion and consideration of the matter.

AN earnest and righteous effort is being made by christian people of the city, to induce barbers to banish from their shops a certain pink-colored, pictoral that is so entertaining to the waiting customer.

THE executors of W. Heidsloff deceased, will sell on Thursday next, at one o'clock a quantity of household furniture and other goods on Belmont avenue, North Plainfield. The articles are enumerated in an advertisement on the opposite page.

THERE seems to be no reason why the mail from the East should not arrive and be distributed at least an hour earlier in the mornings. Those who are expecting particular letters before leaving for New York, are sometimes delayed until the 9:52 train.

FANWOOD is ahead of Plainfield in one particular, and without reason. The Scotch Plains Minstrel Company is probably one of the most talented amateur combinations in the state, yet this city has sufficient brains, ability and style to organize as good a one.

THE improved Gorton Steamer advertised elsewhere, is the only apparatus so simple that will satisfactorily cook by steam all kinds of grain and fodder for fowls and animals about the farm and stables. It can also be used to generate steam for warming henneries and other buildings, and to heat water for any purpose.

A SANITARY item reads: "Never omit regular bathing, for unless the skin is in active condition the cold will close the pores and favor congestion or other disease." That may be true, but did the writer ever find an unhealthy tramp among the horde of dirty and unwashed specimens with which the country is flooded?

REHEARSALS for the grand Cantata of Esther, in which 70 vocal amateurs of this city are to take part, progress favorably, and steady improvement in the choruses shows that the really sublime music of the work is to be properly sung. The event will take place in Music Hall, Monday evening, the 16th inst., at "popular prices."

THE slow recovery of Mr. Aaron Hetfield from the operation recently performed by Dr. C. M. Field at the Muhlenberg Hospital seems miraculous. The patient who is sixty years of age, had his left arm removed at the shoulder joint, and his steady improvement since evidences a triumph of skill over both nature and "old probabilities."

THE Hunterdon Democrat says, "a novel way of collecting a bill against a deadbeat is the one lately practiced by a Plainfield merchant. Finding the parties determined to evade payment if possible, he sent his office boy to the house every ten minutes to collect the same. The wrath of the debtor at the end of the day may readily be imagined." A good plan, Brother Runkle, but who is the merchant?

THROUGH Commander L. V. F. Randolph—and to some extent as a personal favor to that gentleman—Mr. Loyal Farragut, formerly of this city, has recently presented Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., of Plainfield with a brass cannon captured by the donor's father, Admiral Farragut, at Mobile. The Post here is justly proud of its possession, and the Farragut Post of New York is correspondingly and naturally envious.

A BILL before the Legislature concerning roads, provides that it shall be the duty of the overseers to have their roads graveled or repaired with broken stone so that they may be permanently improved. When gravel or stone is not accessible, town committees must provide the same at the expense of the township, provided such expense shall not exceed five per cent. of the whole amount of road tax assessed in the township in the year.

THE success of the two cent postal rate experiment is incidentally shown by the falling off in the demand for postal cards during the last six months of 1884, the consumption sinking from 194,364,000 to 168,315,250. It is altogether likely that many simple-minded people will be unable to understand why the Government should charge two cents for carrying a missive inclosed in an envelope, yet carry one for a cent when written on a card—and furnish the card at that.

THE long established business of Mr. M. Vermeule, the hatter and furrier, at No. 5 West Front street, has just been purchased by Mr. F. A. Pope, who will increase the stock by the addition of a fine line of gentlemen's furnishings and the new spring styles in hats and caps. Mr. Ashland Horton, whose courtesy and readiness to please are always so marked, has severed his connection of many years with Pope Bros., and may hereafter be found at the new establishment mentioned above.

"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY" is rapidly completing its fourth month at the Madison Square Theatre with continued success and undiminished houses. So full of fun and humorous situations is the play, that all its enjoyment cannot be absorbed during one or even two sittings, and many have been known to attend for the third and fourth times without losing any of their original gratification. Mr. Frohman intends bringing "The Private Secretary" to Plainfield in March when we trust it will receive the patronage due.

A RECENT petition received by the United States Senate from New Jersey Prohibitionists, and signed by Dr. T. E. Hunt, of Glen Gardner, states that the Temperance movement in New Jersey "is no child's play," and that the cold water clans of the State "are organizing for the coming local Spring elections and manifesting additional interest, which is but the legitimate fruit of the late campaign as an educator." This is foolishness. The Temperance movement morally is as good a cause as ever it was, but politically, it has adjourned sine die.

MESSRS. ISAAC BROKAW and William E. Jones have been appointed Commissioners of Deeds for North Plainfield.

IT is announced in State exchanges that Mabee and English, the temperance workers, will visit this city on Feb. 22 and 23.

ALL our ice merchants have been busy the past week harvesting their crops for next Summer's use. The ice is clear and thick.

THE Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department holds its regular monthly meeting in the Council rooms, next Tuesday evening.

VALENTINE day approaches. Rand, the Stationer, on Front street has a fine assortment of the missives, fiendish in looks, and lovely in style.

DR. WELLAND H. MOSES of New York and Westfield, has sold his cottage (the More place) on Eighth street to Theodore Beach of New York, for $7,250.

AFTER two years absence Fred Caspar has returned to his former place of business on Second street, and is refitting his lager beer saloon in fine style.

IMPROVEMENTS are being made in Force's Hotel, North avenue, to make room for an influx of guests. This Hotel is becoming more popular every day.

FROM expressed preferences we overhear on all sides, our citizens are hoping that Boucicault's appearance in Music Hall, the 17th inst., may be made in the "Shaughran."

THE "Dynamite" verses sent us for publication by a member of the "W. C. T. U." are unavoidably crowded out of this issue. They will be found on the first page of our next issue.

WE are indebted to Senator Robt. L. Livingston for a copy of the Legislative Manual issued by Fitzgerald & Gosson, Trenton, N. J. This work is a valuable one full of important and useful information.

PLAINFIELD is big enough and old enough to have electric lights, and we believe that if some plan was originated and pushed in this city, enough custom to accomplish financial success could be secured.

WE understand that Freeholder Jones, as required by law, has called an election for the 17th inst., to decide by the ballot of those entitled to vote within the proposed boundaries, whether North Plainfield shall become a Borough.

AN item is traveling about the country that a silver dollar of the date of 1804 is worth $600. Mr. W. E. Mead, of Basking Ridge, Somerset county, this State, writes us that he has such a coin in his possession. Now who wants it for $600?

LITTLE CHARLEY DOERINGER, the two-year old son of Mr. Peter Doeringer of North Plainfield, died on Sunday morning at about seven o'clock, of pneumonia. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances.

WE would not have believed it without such veracious authority as the Somerville U.-G., but "Judge Good, of Plainfield, is prepared to give stereopticon views, with lectures on Europe, for the benefit of any Club or W. C. T. U."

IT will be seen by our report of the proceedings of the Council that the table for the distribution of the annual provender was set on Monday night. The Republican "chickens of grace" picked up almost every "crumb of comfort," as usual.

JUSTICE V. W. NASH is adding to the exchequer of the county by passing over the fines he collects—which Freeholder Vanderbeek says he has done several times. Are there not some Justices in the county that fail to report in this matter.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST was ahead with its news as usual, last Friday, and put out a bulletin with particulars of the railroad accident at Greenville, soon after its occurence. We were under obligation for the information to Manager Miller of the Telephone Company.

THE "Past Chancellors" of the order of Knights of Pythias, of this district, met on Friday evening last and unanimously agreed to present the name of our fellow-townsman, John H. Carney, to the Grand Lodge at its next meeting, for the office of District Deputy Grand Chancellor.

THERE is no reason why, from the material Plainfield possesses, there should not be a military organization formed of at least one company. From among the members of the recent campaign clubs that drilled so admirably, this city should add its delegation towards the "home-guards" of the State.

THE daily increasing custom of Messrs. Lotkins & Hummer, has compelled them to open a branch of their Park avenue market at Second street and Madison avenue. At both stores the finest grades of meat can be found, and all kinds of fish in their season will be offered at the branch establishment.

THE advertisement of the sale of the remainder of the unimproved property known as "Norwood," is attracting the attention of many possible and probable buyers. The sale is to take place at Laing's Hall, at eleven o'clock a. m., of the 23d inst., when a number of the most desirable residence lots in the city will be offered.

THE past two rehearsals of the Plainfield Vocal Society have been attended by too few of its members to assure perfection in the coming concert. We understand, of course, that the so-called leaders "know it all" and have no use, for Mr. Fitzhugh's training, but they should always attend, at least, to set their inferiors a style to hope for.

AN impression has gone forth that the late colored janitor of the Council Rooms, Henry Hamilton, was buried as a pauper. We are informed on good authority that beside the $15 given by the Council, a sufficient sum was raised among his colored friends to give deceased a decent and respectable burial, and all bills for the same are paid. This is in justice to those who assisted in the matter.

JOHN B. GOUGH attracted quite an audience at the Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, and in a lecture on Temperance repeated his old arguments without the numerous laughable illustrations that are so necessary a part of his entertainments. It was the fifth of the Y. M. C. A. Course, the sixth of which will consist of an instrumental concert by the N. Y. Philharmonic Club, with Mme. Tanner as soprano, next Thursday evening.

IN our columns to-day appear communications for and against the proposed adoption of the borough form of government for North Plainfield. Let those interested carefully read these arguments and listen to all others in relation to the matter; then, after intelligently and fairly, weighing the "pros and cons," each individual can judge for himself and vote understandingly and accordingly. As far as our feelings and opinions are concerned, they are merely personal, and will not seek to influence others by any expression of our views.

THE office of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST seemed to be the principal source of news sought by the New York reporters in their endeavor to make a sensation and a romance of the recent unfortunate shooting of Mr. Harry Sandford. After the publication of their hurried and inaccurate accounts of the affair, the representatives of the New York Sun, Herald and other metropolitan journals flocked to this paper for the truth of the matter. It is needless to say they didn't get it. Young Sandford was to appear in court Wednesday, but the doctors at the Roosevelt Hospital said he was not in condition to admit of his being carried down town. It is improbable that he will be examined before to-day. He has nearly recovered from the effects of his wounds, but he is greatly excited, and his mind, the doctors say, needs further rest.

The Fiske Lectures.

In deference to the wishes of the Plainfield Vocal and other Societies, the Directors of the Music Hall Association have arranged that the proposed Lectures by Prof. Fiske on "The American Revolution," shall, if sufficient subscriptions are obtained, be delivered on the evenings of Monday and Saturday instead of Tuesday and Saturday. All who desire to support the efforts of the Music Hall Directors to give Plainfield the advantage of this educational course of lectures, are requested to subscribe at once.

MASON W. TYLER, President.
CRAIG A. MARSH, Secretary.

Another of Plainfield's Industries.

Some months since, Mr. Jno. O. Campbell, a former resident of Plainfield, determined to try the experiment of opening a shoe manufactory in our midst. Locating in the upper story of his building on Front street, over Love's Grocery Store, he has since found that his increasing business demands more space, and consequently on April 1st, he will take possession of the entire building, consisting of three floors, where, with improved machinery, he proposes to manufacture boots and shoes suitable for men's, boys' and ladies' wear, to meet the increasing demand by reason of the great prosperity of Plainfield, at prices to suit the times. Mr. Campbell has had years of experience in this line of business, and is another of those who have watched for the better times coming to invest his capital in business in our growing and prosperous city.

A Close Shot.

From all the evidence we have gleaned in relation to the attempted murder of O'Donovan Rossa by Mrs. Lucille Dudley, it is apparent that the bullet from the first barrel fired by the female crank at the dynamite chief, came near making a victim of Mr. Edwin Hooley, the young Wall street broker, who resides at No. 63 Central avenue. Mrs. Dudley's first shot was over Mr. Hooley's shoulder and so close that the bullet cut into the flesh behind his left ear, and the flashing powder singed his hair and hat. Mr. Hooley fell to the ground from the shock, but immediately rising as the shots continued and not desiring to be drawn into the crowd or detained as a witness, he hurriedly left the scene and took the train to this city. Upon arrival and going direct to the office of Dr. Fritts the wound was dressed, so that now Mr. Hooley has entirely recovered from the loss of blood and is able to attend his business as usual.

Corporation Counsel.

Craig A. Marsh, A. B., L. L. B., is well fitted for his position by natural and legal ability and scholarly attainment. Prepared for College by a post-graduate course in the High School, he entered the Sophmore class at Union College and graduated there with the honor of Class Orator. For the next two years, he enjoyed rare advantages in the study of law in the office of Vice Chancellor Dodd in Newark, and supplemented his preliminary study by two years under the tuition of the eminent Theodore W. Dwight, L. L. D. in Columbia College Law School, graduating from that institution, and thereby becoming entitled to practice at the New York bar, and shortly after, being admitted in New Jersey. The advantages of extensive travel in America and portions of Europe have contributed to mature his powers far beyond his years. As might be expected from these advantages, his practice has been dignified and successful, and has gained him the high esteem of the Judges from whom he has received appointments of honor. He has become identified with most of the public enterprises of this city, and has the confidence not only of the Mayor and Common Council, but of the entire community.

Amateur Drama.

The company that presented "Meg's Diversion" in Music Hall, Tuesday evening, under the auspices of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., deserves credit for a great deal that was good when judged as amateurs. Stage waits and a general drag in every way, were, of course, inexcusable, but as a whole the piece was rendered much better than many "professional" plays of the past in this city. As to the excellence of the troupe individually, some praise is due. Mrs. Ferris as "Meg" was really clever, and in the second act displayed a pathos that was commendable. Prof. Catlin's efforts were also meritorious, and the Misses Hicks betrayed the existence of a certain amount of concealed talent. Mr. Beers' role of "Eytem" would be one of the features of the cast were his voice a trifle louder, and Prof. Carlin as "Crow" only needed to be understood to be appreciated.

The ladies and gentlemen of the company, however, deserve the sincere thanks of the Plainfield people for the evening's entertainment throughout. All did their best to please and very thoroughly succeeded. To the committee in charge of the arrangements, the audience will forever feel under great obligation for engaging the best orchestral music the Hall has ever contained.

Society Events.

There have been two general epidemics in town this winter—colds and roller skates. Few families have escaped either.

Mrs. Theodore Bleecker, Jr., Thursday of last week, gave an afternoon tea at her Netherwood residence, which event was attended by the upper crust of society in this vicinity. Only our fear of the wrath of some omitted one, causes us to restrain our desire to mention the list of swells that were present.

Seventy of the creme of society's younger representatives gathered at the hospitable residence of John W. Murray, Esq., Thursday evening of last week, and were entirely fascinated with the entertainment provided for their satisfaction. The hostess of the occasion was Miss Gussie Murray, who received her guests in a charming manner, and accomplished their enjoyment in every particular. Music from New York and a supper by a well known caterer, were (of course) features of the affair.

The ball given in North Plainfield, Thursday evening of last week, in the elegant parlors of the residence of Chas. Matthews, Esq., was a most delightful occurrence, during which nothing of more importance than "spilled milk" happened to mar the content of any fortunate enough to be present.

At the Crescent avenue church sociable, Friday evening of last week, Miss Maud Bowers gave a pleasing display of her enviable talents as an elocutionist. Besides this, Miss Alice Holmes and Mr. Clark W. Evans favored the company with instrumental music, and three of the "Myers Sisters" sang.

About 100 invited guests were present, last Monday evening, at the residence of Lawrence Myers, Esq., upon the occasion of a musicale given by Mrs. Jared K. Myers. The artists whose efforts so completely charmed their audience, were the Misses Myers of Poughkeepsie, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mr. Wm. Baird of Brooklyn, and Messrs. Clark W. Evans and David Lyon. A very gratifying evening socially, as well, also resulted.

The belles and swells of colored circles about Battle Row and East Third street, were all present at the Benefit Ball of last Thursday evening, given in Manning's Hall to Mr. John Green who had recently been "kicked by a horse." So successful an affair in its line has seldom been achieved by the dusky devotees of terpsichore.

New Rinkles.

A roller skate may be a nice skate, but an ice skate is not a roller skate.

We are not only authorized but urged by Mr. Samuel C. Allen to deny the existing rumor that he has purchased the Casino Rink.

The hog cholera is raging throughout some sections of New Jersey, and the fellow who skates "fancy" in a crowd is becoming alarmed.

Saturday afternoon and evening young and old are to be amused and entertained by giants 20 feet high who will skate round the rink with the greatest of ease, using their biggest endeavors to please.

The deciding race for the fireman's medal was contested Saturday evening, resulting in the easy victory of Mr. W. A. Conger the representative of Zephyr H. & L. Co. His competitors, Messrs. Cook and Huntington, didn't "stay."

Either Gus Schneider himself or his ghost is roaming the country picking up pins with his eyes and swallowing his roller-skates as heretofore. All connection with Denman's Majestic Combination, however, is a thing of the past.

This (Thursday) evening an exciting race for a gold medal purchased by the contestants, will take place at the rink between Conger and Cook. The distance is to be five (?) miles, and the usual rules regarding no running, etc., will be strictly enforced.

The public seems very busy just now disposing of the Casino Rink to various purchasers. The owner, however, is still Mr. M. B. Jones, who has too desirable a "plant" to sacrifice, and is too successful in his venture to retire without a sufficient financial inducement.

Last Friday's game at the Temple Rink of Elizabeth between the Casinos of Plainfield and the League team of that city, resulted in a tie, each club securing a goal. But as it took the Elizabethans five minutes longer to score their goal, the honors are not exactly easy.

A millionaire tonsorial artist of this city had intended hiring Van Deventer Hall for use as a roller rink for those who wear the livery of the shadowed sun, but the lease of the building for other purposes blocked the colored philanthropist's scheme to accumulate additional wealth.

Ashley & Hess were just as funny as ever, Friday evening. In fact, were funnier in their pantomime than they were graceful or skillful on the rollers. A large audience was in attendance, and Manager Simonds of the Elizabeth Rinks, betrayed by his smile how satisfying were the receipts.

The graceful rollers and the fair roller-ettes continue their enjoyable evolutions with undiminished zeal at the Casino Rink. In fact the rink seems to be headquarters almost every evening for the best class of people, and the list of devotees to this pastime is being steadily augmented by new learners.

The Lamont Trio, one of whom turns 30 "complete" revolutions upon a pedestal three feet square in 20 seconds, gave an exhibition of gymnastic feats and acrobatic manoeuvres Wednesday evening. We are informed that all this was a splendid revival of Theban Sports and Grecian Olympian Games. Selah!

Personalia.

Miss Addie Weaver, daughter of Peter Weaver, North Plainfield, is visiting Assemblyman Vetterlein's family at Trenton.

Mr. John E. Adams, who has suffered so long and severely from rheumatism and enlargement of the heart, died at his residence on Duer street, Thursday morning.

Mrs. Colonel James Mulligan, a guest of Force's Hotel, was taken suddenly quite ill there on Saturday night last. Thanks to the skill of Dr. Kenna, she is advancing steadily towards ultimate recovery.

The death is announced of George E. Perine, the well-known steel plate engraver. Mr. Perine was born in Plainfield, and passed his boyhood days here. He was a son of "Deacon" Perine, deceased, and brother of James Perine, of North Plainfield.

Mr. M. A. Haven, connected with the Chicago Beef Company since the establishment of a branch in this city, has been transferred to Hazelton, Penn., where he will have charge of the Company's branch there. Mr. Haven made many friends here during his stay.

Mr. Martin Wooden formerly of this city and son-in-law of J. G. Cadmus, Esq., of LeGrande avenue, lost his only son, Dettmer, by pneumonia, last Thursday, in the seventh year of the little lad's age. Death was very sudden—the result of only a few hours sickness.

Mr. Florens Schetter, the originator and creator of our beautiful suburb of Netherwood, will possibly at some early date return to this city and again, we hope, take the same active interest in the advancement of Plainfield's prosperity and attractiveness, as of old.

It is with extreme regret we learn of the illness of our former townsman and friend, Mr. R. S. Little, who is confined to his bed at his house in New York. With the best of medical skill and loving care and attendance from his family, we trust soon to hear of his convalescence.

The Hon. H. J. Taylor and wife have been obliged to leave Plainfield and take up their residence with Mrs. Taylor's sister in New York—to care for the latter lady in her serious illness, and comfort her in the terrible affliction that has been caused by the recent loss of a beloved husband.

Captain Wm. B. Ostrom of Ninth street is called upon to bear the sad loss of his daughter who died at Ocean Grove, suddenly, on Tuesday last, of pneumonia. The deceased numbered many friends in this city, and will be mourned by scores who admired her for her lovable traits of character.

We are glad to hear "on all sides" from our Westfield friends, an intent to elect Mr. J. M. C. Marsh chief of the fire department of that progressive little town. Mr. Marsh is entirely fitted for and deserving of the position, and if he can be induced to accept the nomination, his election would be unanimous.

Mr. George Miller has recently been given an interest in the proprietorship of Laings' Hotel by being associated in the firm of J. B. Miller & Bro. The new partner is popular, has a host of friends, and his uniform civility and readiness to oblige the hotel's large custom, has accomplished much of its success.

On Sunday in the Park avenue Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry presented his resignation, giving as his reason lack of interest in the church work by the congregation. He said that he would never again become pastor of any church. He will devote his entire time to composing Sunday-school hymns and music.

The only important change in the list of officers of the city is brought about by the nomination and confirmation of Wm. C. Boone, M. D., as City Physician. By our knowledge of the skill of this gentleman we are assured that in his hands the duties of the office will be as thoroughly attended to as during the past term of Dr. Fritts.

Miss Shreve, one of the most faithful and efficient of our public school teachers, has recently been so seriously ill as to compel her to retire from active service for some weeks and to seek elsewhere a necessary change of air and scene. During the leave of absence, justly granted, her place will be temporarily filled, but none other is competent to so satisfactorily occupy the position she is admirably fitted for by ability and experience.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, Feb. 2d.

The Council met in regular meeting.

Present—President Gerkill and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Love, Marsh, Simpson, Wadsworth, West—10.

Absent—Livingston—1.

The minutes of adjourned meeting of Jan. 20th, approved as read.

The rules were suspended, and Mr. Dumont offered for adoption a resolution providing that the police force shall consist of four regular and fifteen special officers. Carried—all aye.

The following petitions were presented and referred. From residents in the vicinity requesting the location of a lamp on East Front street near Farragut avenue. Also from R. Heairhand, for a pedler's license. Also for permission for L. E. Hart to remove a frame building through the streets. Also for the location of a lamp at LeGrande and Kensington avenues, by Emma E. Jones.

A communication from the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., was read, accompanying a new contract for lighting during the present year at an advance of two cents a lamp. Ref'd to Lamps Com.

The following claims were received and referred: Geo. M. Angleman, $102; Jno. Wilson, $107.40; F. A. Dunham, $49.50; Times Publishing Co., $77.90; W. L. Force & Bro., $62.90; Geo. M. Angleman, $16.66; Jas. Maynard, $12; Plainfield Gas Light Co., $221.73; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Co., $169.20; John Johnson, $1.30, $21.75 and $81.61; M. Thompson, $4; A. Runyon, $9; M. A. Cooper, $10; C. Thorp, $17.50; Holly Tree Inn, $20; Plainfield Relief Ass'n., $73; A. M. Runyon & Son, $25; J. T. Fritts, $125; J. O. Nodyne, $61.40; Chas. W. Dodd, $58.34; Geo. W. Grant, $50; Thos. McCue, $50; P. J. Flannigan, $50.

Corporation Counsel—C. A. Marsh.

City Physician—Wm. C. Boone, M. D.

Street Commissioner—George M. Angleman.

Overseer of the Poor—L. F. Wadsworth.

Regular Police—Chas. W. Dodd, Thos. McCue, Geo. W. Grant and P. Lynch in place of P. J. Flannigan.

Pound Masters—L. M. Rocap and G. L. Allen.

The nominations were tabled as read.

The report of City Physician Fritts was read and referred to the Alms Com. The monthly report of Collector Johnson, and the statement of Treasurer VanWinkle, were referred to the Finance Com.

The City Clerk reported the payment by the School Board of its portion of the fees for collecting and assessing taxes. Filed.

The Street Commissioner reported his collection of the charges for connection with the North avenue sewer. Filed.

The nominations of the Mayor were taken from the table and acted upon in the above order.

Messrs. Beguelin and West were appointed as tellers, and the votes on each name are given below.

Corporation Counsel, C. A. Marsh—Ayes, 10.

City Physician, W. C. Boone, M. D.—Ayes, 10.

Street Commissioner, Geo. M. Angleman—Ayes, 10.

Overseer of the Poor, L. F. Wadsworth—Ayes, 4; nays, 6.

Regular Police, Chas. W. Dodd—Ayes, 7; Nays, 3.

Regular Police, Thos. McCue—Ayes, 10.

Regular Police, Geo. W. Grant—Ayes, 9; Nays, 1.

Regular Police, P. Lynch—Laid on the table on motion of Mr. Marsh, seconded by Mr. West; and the votes of five Republican members against the four Democrats.

Messrs. L. M. Rocap and G. L. Allen, were unanimously confirmed as Pound Masters.

The rules were suspended, and a resolution adopted fixing the rate of compensation for the Collector for January at 2 per cent. for 1883 and 1884, 3 per cent. for 1882, and 6 per cent. for taxes prior to these years.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Alms, Finance, Lamps, Police, Printing, Salaries and Streets Committees reported as correct the claims in their hands. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

It was ordered that a duplicate bill of the Collector's charges for fees on school taxes be sent the Board of Education.

The Finance Com. reported as correct the statements of the Treasurer and the Collector. Also that the money for all the liquor licenses granted had been paid into the Treasury.

The Lamps Com. reported favorably for the location of a lamp on Third and Union streets, and the same was adopted.

The Laws Com. stated in relation to the matter of money misappropriated by the City and County Collectors from the school taxes, that the amount would be collected for refunding to the county, in the next tax levy.

The License Com. reported as correct the application for pedler's license, which was granted.

The Streets Com. reported back the Hart petition and unanimously recommended that the same be not granted. Adopted.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the above Com. be authorized to contract for 2,000 tons of crushed stone at $1.00 a ton, and such amount of a finer stone as might be necessary at a price not to exceed $1.20 per ton. Adopted.

It was moved that when the Council adjourn, it be to Saturday evening. Carried.

Mr. Marsh moved that matters pertaining to the city's lamps be left in the hands of the Lamps Com. Carried.

The Alms Com. reported as correct the claims referred, for which warrants were ordered drawn.

The Council then adjourned.

ALL the way from Easton we are glad to learn, regarding the Reading Road, that "there has arisen a strong feeling with the public against the road on account of the discharges, without stating the reason, of a number of employees of long standing of the New Jersey Central Road. In almost every case the friends of the dismissed men have thrown their influence against the company, and in favor of the Lehigh Road, its rival to New York."

LET us have the "Shaughran."

Teachers' Meeting.

The Royal an Ammoniac and Short Weight Baking Powder. Views of the State Chemist of Maine.

I have procured in our open market and analyzed samples of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and the Royal Baking Powder.

Cleveland's Powder I find to be composed of good, pure, wholesome materials properly combined for producing the maximum of gas, and it is in every respect a healthful and desirable article.

The Royal Baking Powder I find to be more complicated in composition, and while the material it is made from is fairly good, it contains one ingredient that should not enter into the composition of any baking powder, namely: Carbonate of Ammonia. This is a strong alkali, unfit for human consumption, and I am surprised that this chemical should be used when it is so well known to be injurious to health in anything used for food. In comparison there should be no hesitation in choosing Cleveland's Baking Powder for purity and wholesomeness.

Cleveland's Powder gives off its gas slowly and evenly, while the Royal passes off much quicker. It is perhaps needless to say, that in this respect the Cleveland Powder has the advantage.

The samples of the Royal Powder, which I have carefully weighed, are almost invariably short weight, from ¼ to ½ oz., while the Cleveland Powder holds full weight.

OIL FROM NATURE'S WELL.

The skin on the head is kept soft and flexible by a secretion from the oil glands. When these are clogged the hair dries and falls off. Parker's Hair Balsam renews their action, restores the original color to the hair and makes it soft and glossy. It is not a dye, [illegible] perfumed. Delightful for a lady's toilet table. The best of dressings. Preferable to all similar articles because of its superior cleanliness and purity.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer imparts a fine gloss and freshness to the hair, and is highly recommended by physicians, clergymen and scientists, as a preparation accomplishing wonderful results. It is a certain remedy for removing dandruff, making the scalp white and clean, and restoring gray hair to its youthful color.

ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING SICK!

We want to say a word to the men, women and girls who work in stores, offices and factories. There are hundreds of thousands of you in the country. Very few of you are well. You are shut up too much and exercise too little. In this way you get sick. Your blood is bad, your digestion poor, your head often aches, you don't feel like work. Your liver, stomach and kidneys are out of order. Parker's Tonic has cured hundreds of such cases. It is pure, sure and pleasant.

THE MISTAKE.

BY A. R.

The express train had come and gone through the rainy December dusk, with its eye of scarlet fire and its whizz of escaping steam, and there was only one passenger for Peterbank—a tall, aristocratic-looking old gentleman, with a fur-trimmed overcoat, gold eye glasses and a fringe of snowy whiskers under his chin.

Rolf Otherbrae, the young Scotch ticket agent, looked at him with that half-curious, half indifferent expression wherewith ticket agents grow in time to regard the whole world; and the old gentleman lifted up his glassy blue eyes to return the observant glancee.

"You are in charge here, I suppose?" said the tall, furry stranger.

"I am, sir," Otherbrae answered, half offended at the supercilious tone adopted by the newcomer.

"Perhaps, then, you can tell me at what time the train from Carrowdale is due?"

"At six-fifty, sir."

The old gentleman glanced first at at the clock on the wall, then at his watch; then sat deliberately down by the fire, as if resigning himself to an hour and a half waiting. And Rolf went out into the twilight to make sure that the switch tender, a hundred yards or so up the snow-covered track, had not fallen asleep, and that the signal-lights burned clear and steady, for the South-shore train, which would be along now, almost before they knew it.

And so, naturally enough, Rolf Otherbrae quite forgot about the old gentleman with the frosty whiskers, and the costly sable furs about his wrists and throat.

The Carrowdale train came in about six minutes or so behind time, for the snow was falling fast and the rails were slippery. The hurrying passengers dispersed themselves in various directions, except one young girl, dressed in pinkish gray, with a black boa round her throat, and a single long willow plume drooping over her alabaster-pale face, who entered the ladies' waiting-room, slightly shivering with the cold.

Mr. Otherbrae, the courteous young ticket agent, advanced toward her. It is but justice to premise that he would have done the same had she been 60, and pitted with the smallpox.

"Can I get you a carriage," he asked, "or be of any other service to you?"

"Thanks," she answered, shyly; "I—expect a friend to meet me here."

Rolf turned away with a bow, as the young lady seated herself, as if to wait—and once more the dull, drowsy silince, broken by the ticking of the clock, settled down upon the room.

Click! The sharp, sudden summons of the little telegraph behind the railed compartment at the further end of the room—and Mr. Otherbrae, who was telegraph operator, as well as station agent, hurried to his post.

"R. OTHERBRAE, Peterbank Station," the tongue of the telegraph whispered, with its wiry, clicking sound: "From Police Headquarters. Stop an old man and a young girl—well dressed and plausible. Forgery. H. C. DEKO,

"General Office, New York."

Rolf stared at the quivering wires as if expecting to glean further intelligence from their metallic surfaces; then he looked across the room to where the slender dark-eyed young lady sat, her eyes fixed intently on the dull fire.

"A young girl, well dressed and plausible!" The description tallied well enough—but then she was alone! And as for her being connected with a forger's gang—pshaw! Rolf Otherbrae knew better!

At the same instant she arose and came hesitatingly half across the floor.

"I beg your pardon, sir—but has the express train come in yet?"

"Two hours ago," Mr. Otherbrae mechanically answered, wondering if it were possible that so fair an exterior could conceal the inner life of crime! And then, all of a sudden, it occurred to him that the tall gentleman, in the fur-trimmed overcoat in the other room, might possibly be the "friend" she had spoken of, and the "old man" alluded to in the dispatch.

At the same instant, advancing a pace or two farther, she caught sight of the tall, erect figure by the fire in the other room—the figure wrapped in the furs, with the silvery, aristocratic hair, and the chin drooping on the breast, as if in slumber.

"Papa," broke involuntarily from her lips. "He has been waiting for me, and I never knew it!"

She hurried past the ticket agent, into the other room. Rolf Otherbrae looked after her in dismay.

"I'm to stop her, am I?" thought Rolf. "And how the deuce am I to do it, I'd like to know? I wish Mr. Deko was here himself!"

As these disjointed reflections were passing through his mind a sudden shriek rose up in the silence—and Mr. Otherbrae, hurrying into the waiting room, saw the young girl kneeling on the floor beside the old gentleman. And in an instant he perceived the secret of her cry.

The stately old man, with the fur-trimmed garments and the snowy beard, was quite dead!

As Rolf advanced she looked wildly up into his face.

"Can't you help him?" she gasped. "Can't you do something? Oh, don't you see he has fainted? Tell me where to go for a doctor? Where can I find one? I have a smelling-bottle, but——"

"It is of no use," Rolf answered, gently, entirely forgetting the dispatch, or rather resolved to ignore it. "My mother's cottage is close by. Let me take you there."

"And papa? Papa, who has come all the way from India to meet me, and take me home to England!"

"I will send some one to him at once," said Rolf, swallowing a big lump in his throat, as he felt how utterly useless was all aid, and adding to himself, "I don't care if she has committed fifty forgeries, aye, and a murder besides. I won't make a brute of myself by laying so much as an additional straw of the burden of her troubles. It's the sweetest face I ever saw—yes, and the best."

And so old Mrs. Otherbrae was stricken dumb as she sat by her cozy hearthstone, at ten o'clock at night, by the sudden apparition of a beautiful young lady drowned in tears.

"Don't ask any questions, mother, darling," Rolf whispered, "but be good to her."

And he hurried back to the depot, where the dead man still sat, keeping silent vigil.

Half an hour afterward Ethel Dewgrove knew that she was an orphan in a strange land.

"Where shall I go?" she faltered, looking wildly around. "What shall I do? Papa! oh, poor, poor papa!"

"My dear, my dear!" said Mrs. Otherbrae, kindly patting her head, "be calm! You need go nowhere; you need do nothing. Rolf will arrange it all. Rolf is the best fellow in the world. Just quiet yourself, and let him manage it all!"

And as Rolf in the other room heard the suppressed sobs of the bereaved daughter, he resolved within himself that not all the police agents in Christendom should wrest Ethel Dewgrove from beneath the ægis of his protection.

With these reflections in his mind, he went out to see the midnight train rush in, pause a second on its hurrying way, and then steam onward like a fire-throated monster, a vertebra of moving lights.

"Well, we've got 'em!" said Simeon Pike, the conductor, as he swung a stout old lady off the lower steps to Rolf's protecting hand.

"Got whom?"

"The forgers. Went on to Shelton's Point. Jones arrested 'em. Them's 'em by the far window," with a jerk of his hand toward a certain glimpse of reddish light, where a dull, wicked profile nodded occasionally. "Real good luck it was. Wish it had been me had laid hold of 'em!"

Rolf stared. Then his inner convictions had all been erroneous. He had wronged the tall, hazel-eyed girl by the bare suspicion that she was aught but one of God's most innocent earth-angels. What a dolt of a blockhead he had been! What an idiot! Well, at all events he was glad she never had suspected it.

* * * * * * *

"Marry Rolf Otherbrae? Marry an insignificant young ticket agent, with your splendid fortune? Excuse me, Miss Dewgrove, but——"

"And why shouldn't I marry him?" Ethel flashed out to her tall, portly lawyer. "He was good to me when I was all alone—he is noble and true and—and I love him."

"Oh! if that's the case, I have nothing to say," dryly commented Mr. Parley, thinking in rather a mournful way of his own son, whom he had mentally destined for the East Indian heiress. "You are of age, and, of course, entitled to make your own choice."

And so Ethel Dewgrove married the young ticket agent whom she had never seen before that stormy December night, when her father died of heart complaint in the solitude of the waiting room.

TAXATION OF THE JERSEY RAILROADS.

The New Jersey State Board of Assessors have filed their first annual report with the Governor. It states that there are 94 distinct railroads in New Jersey in active operation. 26 are under the control and management of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, 24 under the Pennsylvania Raiload, 10 under the New York, Lake Erie and Western, 6 under the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and 28 are managed within themselves, outside of any system. The taxes paid by each railroad system and also by the railroads managed by themselves taken as a whole, under the new law, for last year is as follows, the first figures being the State tax, the second the local tax, and the third the total amount: Pennsylvania Railroad system, $291,425 58, $92,-213,31, $383,638 89; Philadelphia and Reading Railroad system, $264,081.24, $91,044.71, $355,125.95; New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad system, $74,784 29, $58,241 03, $133,025.32; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad system, $174 870 05, $67,153 34, $242,023 39; railroads managed by themselves, $172,467 60, $79 871 11, $252,-338 71. The total taxation is $1,366,152 26.

BABY JIM.

Baby Jim of the Foundlings' Home had a very narrow escape last week. He is red-headed and freckled, but he is lusty enough for a farm hand. When he was about eight months old a lady who had no children took him to bring up. There were prettier babies than Jim, but somehow she took a fancy to him. In spite of his fiery hair, there was something in his face that made him handsome. Intelligence was in his eyes and people who looked at his head said he would be heard from in the world. He was heard very frequently, and that is what come very near changing the whole course of his life.

The husband of the lady who took Jim did not like him. Jim's voice was not musical and his red hair did not match the furniture in the handsome home to which he had been taken. The wife's attentions to him may have made the husband jealous, too. Something was the matter with Jim all the time, and the man of the house got tired of him, though his wife enjoyed it all. Whatever Jim did was fun to her. She rigged him up in new clothes and fashioned many pretty garments for him herself.

For a time the husband, who had submitted at first in silence, said little, but after awhile it became evident that trouble was brewing in the family. The man was ill-natured and Baby Jim's illuminated countenance and uproarious voice aggravated him. There were some harsh words between husband and wife, some tears and reproaches, followed by a day of reflection on the part of the wife. Toward evening she made up her mind. Taking Jim in her arms she summoned her carriage and drove rapidly to the Home, where, with many tears and caresses, she left him, telling the reason and saying that she would send his beautiful little wardrobe over in the morning.

That night when she was picking up the little garments and toys and packing them carefully in a small trunk which she had labeled "Jim," her husband, who had finished his cigar, inquired:

"Where's Jim?"

"He's gone," she said.

"Where?"

"I took him back to the Foundlings' Home, and I'm packing his things now."

She didn't look up. In fact her head was bent lower than seemed necessary. More than one garment had a drop on it. The husband looked thoughtful, turned around on his heel, whistled a little and walked into the library. He began to feel that he had won a great victory over a baby and a woman, but he could not extract any comfort from the reflection. The house seemed quiet, and he half wished he could hear Jim yell and his wife laugh. Jim was not so much of a nuisance after all. It might be handy to have him in the family.

The next morning at breakfast he told his wife that he had no idea that she would send Jim back to the Home. He may have expressed a wish that she would, and even commanded it, but he didn't always mean what he said when he was annoyed by business cares. If she set so much store by Jim she had better go and get him. He thought he could stand it. It is very hard for a man to own up.

That breakfast was never finished. The horses were at the door as quick as they could be harnessed, and as the wife left the house she exclaimed:

"Oh, what if he should be gone! Drive as fast as you can."

"No danger," said the husband, listening to the receding wheels. "He'll be there."

And so he was. He was in line with the others, taking his gruel and yelling, of course. The lady explained her errand, seized him to her breast and made him cry still louder. Then she drove home with him, hugging him close all the way, and that day when the trunk was unpacked she sang so loud that even Jim's war-whoop, occasionally raised in defiance, could not be heard.

ABOLISH A DANGEROUS CUSTOM.

The New Brunswick Fredonian says: "The custom of uncovering the head at the burial of the dead causes a great deal of sickness and many deaths every year, and should be abolished, especially in cold weather. Many society men, during the ceremony, stand bareheaded for a long time, and are almost certain to catch a cold in consequence. Standing bareheaded at the grave of Col. Buckelew on a stormy day, State Treasurer Wright caught a severe cold, and a few days afterward, during the burial of Gen'l. Mott, this cold was aggravated, and led to the sickness that caused his death. During the burial of Charles M. Herbert in this city, several years since, the writer caught a cold in the head and had a long spell of sickness in consequence. It is folly to kill off well persons while burying a dead one, and those having charge of burials in cold weather should request the mourners and others present to remain covered while the necessary services are being performed. Many persons refrain from following the remains of their friends to the grave in cold weather in consequence of the exposures which an absurd custom has made necessary. Common sense dictates that this custom be abolished at once."

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS.

Under this caption the Elizabeth Journal recently had the following to say: "Somerset county is nearly three times the size of Union county, but has less than half the population, about one-half the number of manufactories, about one-fifth the amount of capital invested in manufactories, employs about one-fifth the number of persons therein, and the value of its products are about one-fifth the value of the products of Union county. This is interesting in connection with the proposition to make Plainfield a part of a new county, and the county seat. The area of Middlesex county is precisely the same as Somerset, 300 square miles, but its population is about the same as Union county, with some twenty-five less manufactories, and, although Middlesex has invested but four-fifths of the amount invested by Union county, it has forty per cent. more hands employed, but produces one-tenth less. In round numbers the value of the annual products of Union county is $10,000,000; that of Middlesex county, $9,000,000, and that of Somerset county, $2,500,000. The area of Somerset county is 300 square miles, an average of eleven square miles for each 1,000 of the 27,162 inhabitants it had according to the census in 1880. The area of Union county is 110 square miles for each 1,000 population (55,000) in 1880, reducing since in proportion as the population has increased. It is probably at present one and one-half miles for each 1,000 inhabitants."

LITERARY NOTES.

One of the most attractive articles in the February Magazine of American History is Rev. Dr. Vermilye's sketch of the "Early New York Post Office." Alfred Frederick's sketch of the primitive "locked box," and "Letter Carrier of the Olden Time," is his best. The second illustrated article, by the eminent scholar, Horatio Hale, describes the great Mohawk Chief, George H. M. Johnson. Col. William Howard Mills contributes new and interesting material concerning "Benedict Arnold's March through Maine to Canada." T. J. Chapman, A. M. gives an instructive paper on "Early Virginia Claims in Pennsylvania." Hon Charles Gayarre discusses the character of Andrew Jackson. Prof. Wilson settles the question as to "Andre's Landing Place at Haverstraw." Minor Topics, Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and Book Notices, conclude an exceptionally good number. Price, $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The Art Amateur for February contains the usual profusion of designs for art work, including decorations for a dessert plate (asters), a double tile (wisteria), panels in carved walnut and repousse brass, and embroidery designs for a blotter, a picture mount and six doilies (signs of the zodiac humorously treated). The notable feature of the number is a striking double page drawing by George Wharton Edwards, representing two boatman "putting off" in a stormy sea. Six clever sketches by this rising young artist, and three by Jan Chelminski, a Polish horse painter of much talent, are also given. There are articles of special interest on the lighting and decoration of picture galleries, on modeling in clay and wax, on recent Doulton ware, on "Some Possible Exhibitions," and on Bastien Lepage, the famous French painter recently deceased. The supply of hints and directions for art workers is generally maintained, and "My Note Book" and the dramatic feuilleton are especially entertaining. Price 35 cents. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

"An American Politician," by F. Marion Crawford, like some other novels of the present day, appears to have been written to exhibit the author's knowledge of slang expressions or the peculiar use of unnecessary words in some section of country. The words "you know" have been used no less than 73 times in this book. Are they peculiar to Boston or England? As the conversations are principally carried on between Ronald and Joe, English, and Sybil, American, no special point is made against either locality, for they all use it, therefore there is no excuse for inflicting readers with such twaddle as follows:

RONALD.

"I mean by and by when I am not angry, you know."

"It strikes me as so absurdly ridiculous, you know."

"All this you know—Commonwealth avenue and Public Park, you know."

"Why it was simply disgusting, all that, you know."

JOE.

"But that may be all comedy, you know."

"But I shall have to tell him, you know."

"I think not quite, but I know he thinks it quite quite, you know."

"I wish you were not so tremendously calm, you know."

"In Boston, everybody wears white for these, you know."

SYBIL.

"But you do skate beautifully, you know."

"It will be very select, you know."

"If you make up your mind just how to put it, you know."

"It was very select, you know."

An author who has done such undoubtedly good work as "Mr. Isaacs" and "Dr. Claudius," should be made to understand that the public will not long submit to such careless writing and weak dialogue as is found in this book.

A PERFECT BAKING POWDER

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder is due to the extreme care exercised by the manufacturers to make it entirely pure, uniform in quality, and of the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge, care, and skill attained by a twenty years' practical experience are contributed toward this end, and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with a greater accuracy, precision, and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients is definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence, always pure, wholesome, and uniform in quality. Each box is exactly like every other, and will retain its powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, at any time. The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity, and wholesomeness, and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

EXPERIENCE.

"Calvert, Texas, May 3, 1882.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

POETRY

THE DYNAMITE EXPLOSION IN LONDON.

W. C. T. U.

When the news came across the sea,
All pulses quickened; hearts were stirred,
The nation's blood rushed hurriedly,
And indignation loud was heard.

'Twas right, all right, but, could we see
A power far more than Dynamite
Is nursed, protected and let free
O'er all the world, to curse and blight.

Not princes and wealth alone,
Nor human sacrifices even,
But one great Dynamite is one
That kills the soul, excludes from Heaven.

And yet, O, shame! in this fair land,
Men dare exact a revenue
From every drop by victim drank;
From every crushed heart take their due.

They boldly take the bloody sum,
Use it and say, in face of Heaven
"We paid the taxes paid by Rum."
Can such a sin e'er be forgiven?

Methinks I hear decisive voice
"Yes, go and prosper in your greed,
Take widow's bread, eat and rejoice;
Take from the children all you need."

But know that God's all-flaming eye
Scans all your purposes and deeds,
The day of reckoning draweth nigh,
"Vengeance is mine," from Him proceeds.

While Mercy begs, man forbear,
Break off your chains, open your eyes,
And let this sin-cursed planet wear
A slight regain of Paradise.

LOVE AND DUTY.

It was a wild and rocky coast, along which ran the path that led to the home of old Martin Frere. At ordinary times the cottage would have possessed but little attraction for a bold sterling youth like Owen Glenn. But a visitor had of late brightened up its precincts—a young girl named Annie, named after the aged grandmother who dozed by the hearth through the long evenings, content to watch the bright flames as they shot up from the broad fireplace, and perhaps to see visions of the past with her dim eyes.

Dame Frere was a sharp-voiced, bustling woman, long past middle age, and not having the name of possessing a very sweet temper, but she had a soft place in her heart for granny, and it was to please her that she had invited her pretty namechild to come and visit them for a few months.

Annie was a tall, slight girl, as straight as a pine tree and as graceful as a fawn. Her yellow hair hung in a perfect mane of shining curls all about her shoulders and far down below her waist. Imagine a sweet, innocent face lighted with great lustrous dark eyes, and a red mouth almost always curving into smiles, and you have some idea of Annie.

Most of the young girls in the vicinity were buxom, merry lasses, with hair and eyes to match—both of intense blackness—and with more or less of the hoyden in them. Their laughter was loud and hearty, and their ways more frolicsome than refined. So it is not strange that when this graceful, quiet stranger came among them, with her shy ways and blonde coloring, her swift changes of expression and native ease of manner, she was at once taken into the hearts of all the young people in the neighborhood.

It is a great mistake to think that one girl is insensible to another maiden's beauty. Sometimes, to be sure, she may have a feeling of jealousy with regard to it when she is naturally of that disposition but oftener she loves the object of her admiration all the more because she embodies that ideal which exists in every human soul to a greater or less degree.

Owen Glenn had fallen head over heels in love at his first meeting with Annie, and had not missed an opportunity of meeting her at the various rustic gatherings to which she had been invited; and to-night he was going to test his fate by telling Annie that he loved her, and ask if he could hope for a response to the ardent feeling with which he had been inspired by her.

Owen was not at all certain as to the success of his suit, for there was another who admired Annie, and who was far above him in worldly station and wealth, and as Owen, in his freedom from vanity, also thought, in good looks and in other qualities calculated to win a girl's heart.

Annie had received the pleasant little courtesies and attentions of both in a way calculated to wound neither; though, as to that, it would have been an impossibility for her to be other than so sweet and gracious as not to enkindle hope in each passionate young heart.

Thus matters stood as Owen started from his home to take the long and tedious walk over the cliffs, which must be traversed before he could reach the cottage which sheltered the object of his love.

It had been raining steadily all day long and as night came on the wind had risen to a gale.

But, wrapped in his waterproof cloak and lighted on his way by a lantern, Owen cared not for the threatening elements, and walked along, whistling softly now and then pausing to shake himself, after the fashion of some huge water-dog.

Then he would trudge on again, thinking what a terrible night it must be at sea, and breathing a prayer for the wave-tossed mariners far from home.

Suddenly a dull, booming sound reached his ear.

It came from a seaward direction, but at first he kept on his way, thinking:

"This is not the harbor, and every one who has the slightest knowledge of the locality will be sure to avoid such a dangerous coast; so it's no business of mine."

Again the sound came. This time Owen stopped and listened.

A thought came into his mind as he did so, but it militated so directly against his inclinations to give heed to that with an impatient "Pshaw!" he started on.

But he could not rid himself of it. It was this: "If a ship is in peril, and has lost her way, the only thing that could save her would be a huge beacon fire to cast a light upon her surroundings."

To build a fire would be a work of time and of hard labor.

To keep one up long enough to do any good would take hours of watchfulness, and he would have to abandon all hope of seeing Annie that evening.

It was a hard struggle, but inclination proved to be made of a material which could not hold its own against his strong sense of duty.

He gave up all thought of the pleasant greeting he had been living upon in his heart all day long, and set himself to work to gather fuel for the beacon fire.

After several hurried journeys to the woodland, which lay a little distance away, he succeeded in accumulating a pile of branches and dry twigs, which he had raked out with his hands from a deserted hut, which stood on the confines of the thicket, and had evidently been gathered for some purpose; but under the circumstances Owen felt himself justified in taking it, as it would have been almost impossible to have kindled a flame of green wood.

Just as he had succeeded in coaxing a splendid blaze into life, a voice cried:

"Hello, Glenn, is that you? What in the name of wonder are you doing?"

"I am answering to a signal of distress. Hark!" as a dull sound came again from the sea.

"Well, old fellow, I wish you joy of your post, and hope it'll do the good you expect. For my part, I'm off to old Martin's. I hear little Annie is going away to-morrow, and I don't want to miss a sight of her beaming face to-night. It's bright and sweet enough to be a man's beacon light for all his life. Good-bye, and good fortune attend your work. It's lucky all are not such selfish fellows as I am."

It was as if a thousand fiends were tugging for the mastery of Owen Glenn's heart, as he listened to the rattling talk of the gay, lighthearted youth.

Should he give Robert this chance of seeing Annie, and of perhaps asking her to be his wife, during this very night, while he stood and worked to do good, and in God's providence tried to be the means of saving the lives of people who were nothing to him?

Thus his thoughts ran over and over again, repeating themselves like the voices of mocking demons, while outwardly he labored on as unresistingly as though no influences of the kind were at work piling on fresh fuel for the flames, or pushing some burning log into a better position; and in that way he won the victory.

Peace succeeded to the wild storm of agitation which had momentarily threatened to engulf him. Thus the night wore through.

With the morning came a great calm. One would not have thought that the sun flecked waves which came leaping in, white-crested and tumultuous to meet the stern barrier of rocks, and crawl up, up almost to their summits, could be aught but playful in their force. Ah, it is a treacherous beauty—that of the sea.

Too tired to notice the beauty of the transition from storm to sunshine Owen walked slowly home. His work was done, and he must rest.

Late in the day he started off for a walk. He was in that miserable state of mind which oftentimes follows some great exaltation of spirit. The thought that Annie had gone away without his seeing her again weighed upon his mind like an unwelcome incubus.

At the voice of Robert Hunter, who stopped to accost him, he shrank and trembled as though in pain, but he listened as intently as though his life depended upon what he was about to say. Had he proposed to Annie and had he been accepted?

"Glenn," he began. "I wish you and I could change places about last night's work."

"It's rather late for that now," was the quiet answer.

"I'm fully aware of the fact, and that's what I regret about it. I'm afraid I'm dished in a certain direction."

"What do you mean?" asked Owen, with sudden interest.

"Why, if you believe it, I might just as well have left my visit unpaid last night; indeed, had far better have done so. Annie was so interested at the chance of there being a ship outside in distress that it was all I could do to prevail upon her not to face the storm and 'come and help,' she said; and she gave me some pretty hard rubs, I can tell you, about my leaving you alone to do 'the good work,' as she called it, I don't believe that little Annie will look at me again without a thought in her mind of what I ought to have done and didn't."

Such a tide of joy rushed through Owen Glenn's heart that he could hardly speak, and while he was struggling to hide his emotion Robert went on with his revelations, little realizing the effect of his words:

"She's not going home to-day just on that account. She told me to tell you to come up and see her and tell her all about it. I wish it had been my luck to make such a hit. Women are great on any one who touches their feelings. You ought to see her eyes snap and sparkle when she was lecturing me about not staying to help you. I never saw her look so pretty. But, hello! what has come over you?" For Owen was hurrying off in the direction of the cliffs.

As he went Robert caught a look upon his face which told him more than Owen intended. He stood staring after him, thinking to himself:

"I see it all. My failure will be Owen's opportunity. Well, he's a good fellow, and as long as I can't have her what odds does it make? And I saw last night she cared no more for me than if I had been a stick."

When Annie caught sight of Owen approaching the cottage she ran out with an impulsive, "Oh, how glad I am to see you! I do so want to tell you what I think of you."

Then she stopped short. Something in Owen's face filled her with confusion. But outstretched hands were already within his clasp, and his low murmured words of love were sounding in her ears.

"I am as glad as you that I have done something to please you; for oh, Annie, I love you so dearly that I would do or dare anything for your sake."

And then, she never knew how it came about, but his arms were about her and his kisses were upon her lips, and she found that she loved him so well she was willing to promise to be his wife whenever he should be able to earn enough to make a home for her.

They were both young, and it would not be hard to wait, and they were so sure of one another's love.

The prospect was at first that several years must elapse before their marriage, but suddenly all was changed for them as if by magic.

A letter came from abroad within a twelvemonth. It was addressed to the minister of the little seaside village, and asked for information as to the person or persons who had kindled a beacon light in answer to a signal of distress from a sailing vessel on the night of——giving the correct date and the time when Owen had sacrificed inclination to the dictates of duty and of humanity.

That light had saved a valuable cargo from being lost, and the writer proposed to give half of the proceeds to the parties who had been instrumental in the matter. Also a medal was to be struck off commemorative of his gratitude that the lives of all on board had been thus preserved to their families.

Owen became at once the boast of the village. For when a man's fame has reached foreign countries his own townspeople are always sure to re-echo it.

The wedding day was set for the first anniversary of the evening when his good fortune came to him in the guise of disappointment, and Robert Hunter was the first to congratulate the young couple.

"Who'd have thought," he whispered to Owen, "that the tables would have been so turned! Truly, 'There's a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune,' and you took it, my boy."

STRATAGEM.

BY A. R.

It was a lovely March morning. There had been a fall of deep snow the night before, and the big pine tree in front of old Deacon Clover's farm house was fringed with pearl, while the white fields, far and wide, glistened with alabaster purity. Eben, the errand-boy, had just brought an armful of logs from the shed, and the sitting-room fire blazed on its shining brass and-irons, giving winter cheeriness to the scene.

Phebe, the deacon's old daughter, was busy at the ironing-table, doing up her father's Sunday shirt—a tall, pretty girl, with large, blue eyes, chestnut-brown hair, which had never felt the torture of the crimping-pin, and a dot of a dimple in her chin. Her dress was of plain brown calico, with a white apron, and a white ruffle fastened by cherry-colored ribbons at her throat, and there was neither tawdry ring on her hands nor gaudy brooch on her breast.

Lily Pepper, the squire's daughter, who had just "dropped in" after a friendly fashion, was quite different; her dress was of garnet merino, made after the latest fashion-plate; her hair was frizzled like a Skye terrier's, and she twinkled all over with beads, jets and bangles.

"He's quite fallen in love with you, dear," said Lily Pepper. "And he's so handsome and stylish!"

"Who?" said Phebe, guiding her iron skillfully around a button on the deacon's left wristband.

"Harold Grey! Judge Hadley's nephew, you know. He was there with young Liston, who has taken the Spottiswood farm."

"Was he?" said Phebe, indifferently.

"He thinks your voice is like Signora Carinara's."

"I don't know whether that is a compliment or not," returned Phebe, polishing her iron on a piece of paper.

"Phebe, how provoking you are!" cried Lily Pepper. "Half the girls in town would be wild with delight at a compliment from Harold Grey. A New Yorker, you know, is so different from our country boys."

"I don't think I care much for New Yorkers," returned Phebe.

"Don't you? Oh, I'd give my two ears to go and live in New York."

"I wouldn't," said Phebe. "I'll never go to New York. I will live here always. There's no place like the country to me."

"Not even if Harold Grey should ask you to go to New York."

"There's no danger of that," said Phebe, shrugging her shoulders.

"No; but suppose. Suppose, Phebe."

"I will never marry a New Yorker," said Phebe.

Meanwhile the aforesaid Mr. Harold Grey had driven over from Spottiswood Farm in a cozy little claret-colored cutter, drawn by a magnificent bay horse, to the Pepper mansion. Miss Lily, as we know, had just returned from Deacon Clover's.

"We were going to ask you to introduce us to your prima donna of the church concert last night," said Liston. "Grey has decidedly lost his heart to her blue eyes and peach-blossom cheeks."

"It is no use," said Lily, archly.

"No use?" echoed Grey. "And why not?"

"Phebe has registered a solemn vow that she never will marry any one who comes from the city."

"Does she regard us all as lost sinners and vagabonds?" smiled Grey.

"I don't know how that is," Lily answered demurely. "But she is determined to marry a farmer, and live here in the country."

Grey looked rather discomfited; Liston burst into a laugh.

"You see, old boy," cried he, "my chances are better than yours, for once in the world. Come, let us go on to the Clover farmhouse and make our call."

Harold Grey was silent a part of the way. He was not used to contradiction. Like the Sultan of Turkey, he had hitherto supposed he had but to throw his handkerchief, and whatever fair one he honored with his notice would be overjoyed to seize it. And the idea of a little country girl presuming to have any ideas of her own was a little too absurd.

Just as the connoisseur in flowers, passing by the royal rose and queenly camellia, will sometimes pause to gather a wild honey suckle spray, Harold Grey, who had passed unscatched through half a dozen gauntlets of metropolitan drawing-rooms, kettle-drums and receptions, was smitten by Deacon Clover's blue-eyed daughter, who had never been out of Oldhamville, and didn't know a waltz from a redowa. And when he heard that she had determined never to marry a New Yorker, he resolved more earnestly than ever that he would win the prize in spite of an adverse fate.

"Listen," said he, "look here." I'm in earnest about this."

"You always are, aren't you?" said Liston, touching up the bay steed.

"Not as I am now. I tell you I've lost my heart to this dove-eyed little enchantress."

"Now look here," said Liston, "this is too comical for anything. Argument of the play: Hero, Harold Grey of 45 Jerrold avenue. Heroine, Deacon Clover's daughter. You come down to stay a week at Spottiswood farm. The Presbyterian church gives an amateur concert to aid its slender funds. Phebe Clover sings. Harold Grey loses his heart. Grand chorus—'Love is still the lord of all.' It isn't real life, all this; it's a leaf out of a three-volume romance."

"I wish you'd leave off talking nonsense for a minute," said Harold, beginning to wax impatient.

"Speak on, most noble Harold! At your command I am silent!"

"You never have met Miss Clover?"

"Never saw her in my life until last night!"

"Well then, look here. Introduce me as Victor Liston. You shall be Harold Grey!"

"A case of exchange of identity, eh?"

"Exactly. So that she shall not be prejudiced against me beforehand by fancying me to be a New Yorker."

"Very well. Just as you say. I am not in love with Phebe Clover, and any plan that will keep you a few weeks longer at Spottiswood farm will joyfully be welcomed by me," returned Liston. "Whoa, Bonnie! here we are at the door."

* * * * *

"Do you really love him, Phebe?"

Pretty Phebe Clover hid her burning cheeks on the old deacon's shoulder.

"Yes, father," she whispered.

"And you think you can be happy with him?"

"Yes, father."

"Then I say 'yes,' too," said the deacon. And Phebe thought she was the happiest girl in the world.

Harold Grey was a little more distrait, a little less communicative than usual that night when he called at the Clover farm house, where Phebe's crocuses and hyacinths were just beginning to push their slender heads above the brown earth in the flower-borders, emerald spears of the advance guard of spring.

"Victor," said Phebe, softly, "have you heard bad news?"

He roused himself at once.

"What makes you think so, my Phebe bird?"

"Because you are so silent and thoughtful."

"Little oracle," he said, laughing. "No, I have heard no bad news; but I was thinking how best to break some strange tidings to you. Phebe, suppose that I were to tell you that we could not remain here at Spottiswood Farm? That I must leave the peaceful place and go to the city to live?"

"Oh, Victor, have you lost your property? Were those Eglinton mortgages never paid off?" cried Phebe, clasping her hands.

"No matter about that now; only answer me, love."

"Victor, you know that I would go anywhere with you."

"Would a cramped room in a second rate boarding-house, with a view of brick walls and dreary pavements, suit you after all these lovely hills and vales?"

"I should have you, Victor."

"My little treasure!"

He folded her tenderly to his breast.

"To-morrow we will go and look at your new home, Phebe. The nine o'clock train will take us there in an hour, and we can easily return by three o'clock."

A brown-stone palace, with plate-glass windows, draped with blue satin, marble paved halls, opening into a dome-roofed conservatory, where stately balsams brushed the ceiling with their glass foliage, and acacias hung their showers of blooming gold above the banks of camellias, azaleas and pure gardenia—a suite of drawing-rooms, upholstered in pale blue and silver, with a group of statuary in the center, and rare paintings hanging on the walls, and a library, all in black walnut and green, where the smell of Russia leather filled the air, and portfolios of proof engravings stood around on carved standards. Phebe opened her blue eyes with innocent wonder and surprise.

"Oh, Victor," said she, softly, "what place is this? And won't the family be offended if——"

"Do you like it, Phebe?"

"It is a palace!" she cried.

"Would you like to live here always?"

"I?"

"Because, darling, it is our future home. I am not Victor Liston. I am Harold Grey. I took the personality of my old college friend upon myself, because I had heard you had formed a resolution never to marry a New Yorker. I won your heart by stratagem, Phebe, and now I cannot give it up."

"But—but I thought that you were poor?"

"I should be poor, indeed, dearest, without your love! You will not impoverish me thus?"

And Phebe half laughing, half crying, said that she could not!

So our little Phebe became a great lady after all, and a New Yorker.

WORTH VERSUS POLISH.

It was a picturesque-looking place. The little wigwam stood on a clearing, surrounded by all grandeur of the Rocky Mountain scenery.

Within, a great brown bear skin was thrown over a couch of odorous boughs in one corner; a quaint little glass in a rustic frame hung side by side with a silver-mounted rifle and powder-horn, a wild cat stuffed to look life-like crouched in the shadows, and the branching antlers of a deer revolved from the center of the tent-shaped roof, and formed a convenient rack for many light articles, such as the proprietor's wolf-skin cap, a handsome meerschaum and a pewter drinking cup.

The proprietor himself was a magnificent specimen of manhood. Tall, lithe and muscular, with crisp brown locks curling about a noble brow, the brown beard growing thickly on cheek and lip and catching golden gleams in the sunlight, and the dark gray eyes full of fire and expression.

Victorine Chester looked at him with unmistakable approval in her smiling blue eyes.

Victorine was one of a party of ladies and gentlemen who were on a pleasure trip through that part of the country.

This was something out of the common way. All the ladies were in plain serviceable suits, such as suited the gypsy-like roving.

Their trunks were at the hotel at the foot of the mountain, where they would spend a week or more, and to-day they were out on a tramp sight-seeing, and this man, Scott Ransom was their guide.

Now, Victorine was an arrant flirt, consequently as the guide seemed attracted by her radiant face and bewitching manner, she turned the full batteries of her fascination upon him, to the disgust of the other gentlemen of the party, or rather the younger gentlemen. There was a gray-haired broker and a bald-headed wine merchant among them, but they, with her uncle, were so deeply engrossed in arguments upon various subjects in the intervals of sight-seeing that they had no eyes for even pretty Victorine.

That day was but the beginning of many others spent in the company of Scott Ransom. I know that Victorine did not realize what manner of man she was coquetting with; she was so accustomed to the mock love-making which is so freely circulated in fashionable society that she could not guess the impression that she made on the heart of one of nature's noblemen.

And so the time came for their departure. Then, indeed, the girl's eyes were opened, for as she bade him a light and laughing farewell, he stooped and took her dainty face between his brawny palms and kissed her quietly and tenderly and fully upon the lips, as one who had a right, and then, as approaching footsteps warned them of the proximity of the others, he moved away, saying as he smiled upon her:

"I shall see you again."

A strange thrill swept through Victorine's guilty little heart, as in a moment she realized that what she had looked upon as innocent flirtation the handsome guide had taken in dead earnest.

She was glad enough to gain the privacy of her hotel chamber, where she recalled uneasily Ransom's look and words.

But a month later, back among the gay, fashionable friends, she looked back upon this episode with indifference.

The long parlors of the Chester mansion were blazing with light. The rustle of rich robes, the murmurs of soft voices in the intervals of music, flashing jewels and lovely high-bred faces—all these confused and dazzled Scott Ransom, as he crossed the threshold.

His evening dress of broadcloth was irreproachable, yet he felt instantly the indifference between himself and the fine, languid, smiling dandies about him.

One or two lifted their eye-glasses to look him over as he made his way quietly, yet with a certain dignity, toward the spot where Victorine stood the center of a gay-looking group.

When he paused before her with outstretched hands and a flush of pleasure in his manly face, Victorine actually turned pale in her astonishment, and embarrassment as she stammered:

"Mr. Ransom—you here!"

"Yes," he replied, unheeding the significant smiles of the lookers-on, "I arrived in New York to-day, and took the liberty of inviting myself when I heard of the grand party."

He was so glad and triumphant, so perfectly sure of a welcome that a sense of shame came over the girl as she put her hand upon his arm and drew him up the room toward the conservatory.

When they stood alone in the midst of all the blooms and fragrance, the man took her hand in his and said softly:

"I have come for you, little girl—it is hardly necessary to tell you that, or to add how the memory of your sweet face has been warm in my heart all these weeks."

Victorine felt that no flimsy evasion would stand her here. She must be honest with him at last.

"Mr. Ransom," she faltered, her gaze falling beneath the clear, truthful gray eyes, "you made a great mistake, for which I, perhaps, am to blame. Whatever passed between us that summer I considered a mere pastime, and had no thought of you taking it so seriously. Oh, forgive me!" she cried, earnestly, as Ransom staggered and paled suddenly through all his sunburn. "I am sorry to have wounded you. The men of my acquaintance are so different—"

Ransom regained his self-control with an effort, and smiled sadly as he motioned her to cease.

"You mean to say that all the while I have thought of you as the dearest woman in the world I have been remembered by you as a passing acquaintance?"

"A pleasant acquaintance, Mr. Ransom."

"Hush! no more! I cannot bear it now. Your word is different from mine. Well, well, let it pass. Good-bye, dear! I am going away now. If you ever need a true friend, remember you have one in Scott Ransom."

And before she realized his intention he had taken her suddenly and closely in his arms, then kissing hair and eyes and lips, solemnly and tenderly, strode from her presence and from the house.

Just a year from that date Victorine's uncle died a bankrupt, and the girl was thrown upon her own resources for a livelihood.

Lonely and heartsick, her adverse fate brought her to a great Western city, where she earned a modest remuneration at coloring photographs.

One bleak, winter day, as she hurried toward her boarding-place, bending before the keen blast, she came into sudden collison with a man, and would have fallen had he not caught her with hurried apologies.

It was Scott Ransom, and Victorine, recalling all the misfortune which had come on her since their last meeting, clung to his strong hand with a sudden sense of his true loyalty, while wistful tears rushed to her eyes.

As for Ransom, he made no effort to conceal his pleasure at the meeting, yet his gentleness and kindness were more brotherly than lover like.

He walked home with her, listening sympathetically to her story, and begging her so warmly to command him in any way, that Victorine felt a new peace and comfort at her heart.

After that she was lonely and fearful no more, for with Scott Ransom for a friend she felt that she could defy the whole world.

And as they became more intimate she wondered how she could have thrown him over so lightly, for surely he was a king among men.

Yet when he came to her to ask again for her love she hesitated, ashamed to say "yes" in her poverty, when she said "no" in her wealth.

You may be sure that her lover, reading the truth in her blushing face, would not be put off. Therefore, they were married, on New Year's Eve, when every one was happy as could be, and Victorine deemed herself the happiest of all.

Her husband took her home to a magnificent brown-stone mansion which he had been secretly fitting up for her reception.

He laughed at the wonder in her face, as he led her up the broad steps to the open hall, where a group of smiling servants stood ready to welcome them.

"I—I thought you were a poor man," she stammered.

"Did ever any one tell you so, my dear?" I am worth a cool half a million, but if I had not a cent I would be rich now, my little wife."

WHEN ADVERTISING IS WANTED.

There's nothing on earth so mysteriously funny as a newspaper advertisement. The prime, first, last, and all the time, object of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not, was not, and never will be designed for any other human purpose. So the merchant waits till the busy season comes and his store is so full of customers he can't get his hat off, and then he rushes to the papers and puts in his advertisement. When the dull season gets along and there is no trade and he wants to sell goods so bad he can't pay his rent, he takes out his advertisement. That is some of them do, but occasionally a level-headed merchant puts in a bigger one, and scoops all the business, while his neighbors are making mortgages to pay the gas bill. There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time the advertisement is sent out on its holy mission. It makes light work for the advertisement, for a chalk sign on the sidewalk could do all that was needed and have a half holiday six days in the week; but who wants to favor an advertisement? They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in the dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with hard facts and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices before he will spend a cent. That's the aim and end of an advertisement, and if you ever open a store, don't try to get them to come when they are already sticking out of the windows, but give them your advertisement right between the eyes in the dull season, and you will wax rich and own a fast horse, and perhaps be able to smoke a good cigar once or twice a year. Write this down where you'll fall over it every day. The time to draw business is when you want business, and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.—Bridgeport Post.

MORE IRON MEDICINE.

In an address recently delivered before the Massachusetts Tariff Reform Association by Mr. Gibbons, a member of the well-known firm of Pusey, Jones & Co., iron workers of Wilmington, Delaware, occurred the following passages:—

"When returning good sense shall have taught the American people that subtraction is not addition.

That to take from the masses millions annually in unnecessary taxation is not the way to increase wealth.

That legislation having for its object the obstruction of trade is not the means of promoting commerce with other nations.

That a system which compels prices of all things produced by manufacture to be greater here than abroad is not the one under which they can profitably be expected—

Then we may confidently hope to see again American ships upon the seas, and our countrymen occupying the proud position of being the greatest commercial people of the world, as well as the richest and most important in all other particulars."

Which we respectfully refer to our esteemed friend, the prohibition-protection editor of the Iron Era, for his thoughtful and serious consideration, hoping that the time may come when even a gentleman of his iron-clad faith will renounce error, and join with us in desiring just protection to every American interest, but unjust favoritism to none. Read, reflect and acknowledge the truth. It may be slow, but prevail it must.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

President-elect Cleveland is an enigma to mere politicians, but a source of cheering hope to the friends of honest government.

He moves around without the least ostentation, calls before him leading Democratic statesmen, attentively hears and deliberately considers what they have to say, in view of the high national authority soon to be assumed by him, but keeps judgment within himself and puts forth no rash promises.

That prefigures the kind of President the country has long needed, and with due respect to a defeated candidate, it is in direct contrast with Mr. Blaine.

President Cleveland may commit some errors, that is to be expected, because no mortal is infallible, but if such do occur, they will be of the head and not of the heart.

He goes into the Presidential chair determined to faithfully discharge, to the fullest extent of personal ability, and guided by the wisest counsels he can command, every public duty, in obedience to law and for the best interests of the whole American people.

On that patriotic platform he was nominated and elected, in opposition to the most artfully laid partisan plans ever concocted, and we confidently believe, that he will, as President, stand immovably true to the sacredness of official trust, and that when his term of office shall close the people with united voice will accord him the illustrious title of good and faithful servant.

NEW JERSEY'S SAVINGS BANKS.

Secretary of State Kelsey, State Superintendent of Savings Banks, has rendered his report for the fiscal year. The report states that on January 1, 1883, the assets of all savings banks in the State amounted to $29,163,807 and the liabilities, except the surplus, to $27,649,309, leaving a surplus over all liabilities of $1,504,498. The number of open accounts was 91,951. On January 1, 1884, their total assets amounted to $31,326,714, and their liabilities, except the surplus, $29,497,221, leaving a surplus over all liabilities of $1,830,493. The number of open accounts was 98,760. On January 1, 1883, the number of depositors was 91,951 and the amount due depositors $27,344,035, and on January 1, 1884, the number of depositors was 98,760 and the amount due depositors $29,323,428, an increase of 6,809 in the number of depositors and of $1,979,392 in the amount.

LINDEN'S EX-POSTMASTER.

A suit which has been pending against Ferdinand M. Blancke, John M. Winans and Wm. K. Schenck, brought upon the latter's bonds as postmaster at Linden, was tried in the Federal court recently. Schenck, it is alleged, solicited mail matter that properly belonged to another office, for his own. This is contrary to the regulations of the department. The acts charged are that he had printed circulars sent to him by freight which he put up in his own office. He received no pay for his manual labor, but was willing to perform that in order to get the commission allowed on the stamps sold by him as postmaster. The commissions thus gained were charged back to him upon his removal from office, but he failed to settle with the government, hence the suit. Counsel for the defense consented to the entry of a verdict against the ex-postmaster for the sum of $1,008 45, reserving the right to argue some law points involved on the 20th instant.

By the time another stream was got under way the fire had communicated to the adjoining buildings, the first to go being Wm. H. Baker's two-and-a-half-story corner building. Then followed Mrs. A. Beemer's three-story house, and also the two three-story buildings below it, owned by Peter Vanderhoof and Mr. Tone. Another two-and-a-half-story building on Warren street, owned by Wm. H. Baker, and a small brick building back of it was destroyed by the fire. The total loss will amount to about $75,000.

Hunterdon's Old Guard.

The Clinton Democrat, Senator Carpenter's paper, has been collecting the names of old residents of Hunterdon County, who voted for Andrew Jackson more than half a century ago, and have lived in the Democratic faith to vote for President Grover Cleveland. The number thus far foots up 105, with a number of townships yet to hear from. Several of those mentioned voted for Jackson three times. Among that number was Colonel David Sanderson, well known to many in this section. The "Col." is over 83 years of age, but looks and acts more like a man of 60. The following is an interesting letter from him:

Editor Clinton Democrat: I notice by your paper that you want the names of all who voted for General Jackson and for Grover Cleveland. As I voted for Jackson three times as well as for Cleveland, I will take the liberty to send my name. I cast my first vote in 1828, for General Jackson, in New York. I voted for him in New Jersey in '28 and '32. I have voted for every candidate for President and Vice President from General Jackson in 1824, to Grover Cleveland in 1884. I have had the pleasure of taking with my own barouche and eight gray horses General Jackson and Martin Van Buren from Newark to Elizabeth, a distance of six miles, in 18 minutes, and a good share of the way was brisk running. I also took Vice President Richard M. Johnson with my barouche, and eight gray horses from Somerville to New Brunswick, a distance of 11 miles in 50 minutes. Also took John Tyler from New Brunswick to Perth Amboy, a distance of 11 miles, in 55 minutes, with the same conveyance.

Fatal Railroad Accident and Destructive Fire.

About a quarter past two o'clock Saturday morning last, a fearful railroad accident happened at New Brunswick, N. J., which caused the death of two persons and the destruction of a half million dollars worth of valuable property.—A large oil train bound for Jersey City had stopped for some unexplained reason on the bridge, when a mixed freight train of 14 cars coming up from Trenton, ran into it at a high rate of speed. The resulting crash and destruction was terrific. The caboose of the oil train was crushed into splinters, the first oil car was burst, the oil set on fire and the tank thrown from the track 25 feet down to the roadway of Water street, and the second car was broken loose from the train, the balance of which was drawn ahead off the bridge by the engine. Twelve of the cars of the freight train were hurled from the track and fell in a wreck down the 25 foot embankment and were spread along from Water street almost to Neilson. In this lot were two cars containing 22 head of horses and all of these that were not killed by the fall were burned to death. Frank Dumas, head brakeman, of the freight train, was buried beneath the wrecked cars as they fell, and burned to a crisp. The concussion of the two trains bursted the first and second oil tanks, one of which fell on Water street and the other in the canal, and the oil was thrown in every direction, and among other places on to the engine of the freight train, the fire of which ignited it, and the burning liquid ran down into the gutter of Water street and on to the ice in the canal, where it blazed up furiously, setting fire to the main factory of the Consolidated Fruit Jar Company, extending from Water street to the canal. The burning oil then ran down the canal, passing the New Jersey Lamp and Bronze Works without doing any harm until it came to the immense wall paper factory of Janeway & Co., extending from the canal to Water street, which was entirely destroyed. The Farmer's Hotel, an old landmark, with several other dwellings were destroyed, and it was with the utmost difficulty the progress of the fire was stayed where it was. Help was summoned from Elizabeth and Trenton. Both places responded. Two steamers from the latter place went to work. A fireman, named Patrick Dougherty, went into Janeway & Co's building to secure some tools and was suffocated. The insurances will not cover the losses. It is claimed the railroad Co. will be made responsible for the losses. Many people from this city and surrounding country visited the scene on Saturday and Sunday. Mayor Strong was indefatigable in his efforts to allay the intense excitement caused by the accident.

The Borough Question.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—"Argus" seems to have been studying the Borough system with a "blind eye." It is hard, on any other theory, to understand why he should see so little that is really in the system and so much that is not in it. He says at the beginning of his communication that it is "radical and revolutionary," and yet further on he contends that "the township committee has all the powers therein mentioned (in the circular) as powers of the Mayor and Commissioners (councilmen?) under the Borough system." Now, if there be no increase of power the change can hardly be called "radical and revolutionary." The Borough does involve an increase of power, but that power is chiefly in the hands of the people. It simply gives a more perfect system of self government, and that is what a compact community like North Plainfield needs. "Argus" thinks the motives of the originators of the scheme ought to be taken into account. He says, looking now, not out of his blind eye, but out of his green eye, that they are the proud, haughty and wealthy, not old settlers, but men who go to New York, and they propose the Borough because they want the offices. "Argus" hasn't, of course, seen the petition, or he would know that the first signer is one of the oldest settlers and largest property owners in North Plainfield, who never bought a commutation ticket, and that there are other old settlers, like Dr. Craig, who asks for the Borough. How does "Argus" know that the "haughty" originators, the men who "do business in New York" want the Borough offices? Why, he ascertains by a simple process in logic, thus: "If the above are not the real objects and motives which started this movement, what are the real reasons?" What, indeed? Of course, it is incredible that taxpayers, especially if they "do business in New York," can have any real interest in North Plainfield. If, however, they cross the brook and do business in Plainfield, their interest stands at fever heat! Let me assure "Argus" that the wretched men who "do business in New York" do not want the Borough offices. It is doubtful if one of them could be persuaded to become Mayor. On the contrary he will find that most of them would probably prefer to see some old resident like Mr. P. M. French hold that office. "Argus" says the limits of the Borough were drawn for the benefit of the aristocratic class. How so? These limits include all between the brook and the foot of the mountains, and between Old Rock road and Raymond avenue, and therefore takes in most of the township. The Borough officers are not elected by a "class" as "Argus" charges. There is no ground whatever for such a statement. "Argus" speaks of a double government and double taxation as involved by the Borough. It is no more a double government than that of Plainfield, which pays a city, county and State tax. What the people of North Plainfield would pay to the Borough they would not pay to the township. In conclusion, "Argus" declares for annexation. But annexation is the last thing North Plainfield desires. It might be as good or even better than the Borough, but the people are against it. I am afraid "Argus" is of the class who "do business" in Plainfield and are in North Plainfield during the night, and who "really have not the interest of" North Plainfield "at heart in the same way that those have who are in business there and own much property there."

ONE WHO BELIEVES IN NORTH PLAINFIELD.

For "The Constitutionalist."

The Borough Question.

It really seems to us there must be some ulterior purpose sought to be gained by changing the form of government of North Plainfield from a township to a Borough. At one time there might have been some plausible excuse for a change, but in view of the recent amendments of the laws enlarging the powers of township committees, we cannot possibly see any reason for it whatever.

Under the Laws of 1882, page 1, the voters of townships can raise any sum not exceeding $3,000 for a lock-up, the money to be expended under the direction and control of township committees.

The Laws of 1883, page 39, authorize townships to employ police, whose duty it shall be, upon view and without warrant, to apprehend and arrest all persons committing breaches of the peace in the township, and in like manner to apprehend and arrest all disorderly persons and bring them before a justice of the peace in the township to be dealt with according to law. These officers shall be under the control of the township committee.

The Laws of 1884, page 130, provide that the township committee may employ any constable or constables of the township for police service and duty.

The Laws of 1884, page 303, provide that it shall be lawful for the township committee to authorize the construction, curbing and paving of sidewalks and crosswalks in the township, in such manner and with such materials as the committee shall deem available, on application of the owners of one-half in running feet of lots fronting or bordering upon any public road or street, or any section of such public road or street.

The Laws of 1884, page 71, provides that by vote at any town meeting the township committee may be authorized to discharge the duties of overseers of roads, thus giving them full powers to make all needed street improvements.

With the above and other recent enlargement of their powers, the township committee under the present form of government has every power which is necessary to carry on the government as well as it could be under a Borough. The township form of government has been tried and found to be good. The Borough is a new thing and no one can tell how it will work in practice. Besides, there are special reasons why there should be no change at the present time. Under the Borough form of government, in addition to the expenses of running the Borough, there would still have to be raised the interest on the indebtedness for the improvement of Somerset street and Johnston Drive. The Borough would have to pay its proportion of this indebtedness. Under the present administration this indebtedness is being reduced each year upon a regular scale. All this would be disarranged under the new Borough scheme. New and inexperienced men would take control, and the results may be far more embarrassing than is thought. But, in addition to all this, the lurking ulterior motive already is manifesting itself. There is a danger in the Borough in this—that while at present it presents itself in its most innocent form, after it is once adopted, amendments will be obtained from the Legislature, giving greater power to the Borough officers. In fact in the present legislature an act to accomplish that end has already been introduced. We hope our citizens of North Plainfield will be on their guard in this matter, and not repent, when too late, the giving up of the control of their affairs to a set of officers with such powers that they can sell the poor man's property in case he cannot pay for the extravagant improvements they have the power to make, and at the forced sale take the poor man's home away from him.

NORTH PLAINFIELD.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

Mr. Charles Ward is fitting up the store on the Titsworth place, and will open in a few days with a general assortment of merchandise.

The rain of Monday night increased the volume of water in the mill-pond to such an extent that it rose nearly level with the new bridge.

The Dye Works of Mr. Ransom are in full blast. He seems to be doing a large business, adding hands weekly to his staff, both on the road and at home.

The ice harvest has been gathered and a goodly crop has been obtained. Besides Wilson's ice houses being filled to overflowing, large orders have been shipped per Lehigh Valley Railway, it having been put on the cars for the very low price of $1 per ton! ! ! And there's lots of it yet.

A surprise party was held at the residence of Dr. Titsworth, on the 5th inst., to commemorate the anniversary of the birth of his estimable wife. The spacious rooms were filled to overflowing with crowds of relatives, friends and neighbors, who vied with each other in making the entertainment one of great pleasure and enjoyment.

On the 5th inst., a social was held at the residence of Mr. Lloyd B. Nelson, at which a large crowd gathered, the fair sex providing all the good things of the season, and bountifully providing an elegant supper. The arrangements were under the joint management of Messrs. C. W. Smalley and A. E. Nelson, the music being supplied by Prof. Hagaman. Dancing was indulged in till an early hour in the morning.

BROAD BRIM.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Gyrations came within one of being elected.

Our barber has had a telephone placed connecting his shop with his residence.

John Stutzman is the happy father of a twelve pound boy. The event happened on Monday last.

Don't forget the Treasury of the lamp light committee. Our postmaster is ready to receive funds at any time.

John J. Wahl has completely renovated and fixed up the rooms formerly known as the Stilliger saloon on North avenue. Mr. Wahl now has as fine a bar-room as any in the State.

When is the new name to be painted on the Westfield Hotel sign. There has been considerable talk about it. Sam does not go back on the name.

Melville proposes to write his patron's name across the face of the Artic Continent, when he gets one. He will never get an ice dealer for a patron, because they do not believe in having much to do with ice.

Joel Moffett has received the contract for the erection of a new dwelling house for Mr. E. L. Massett, on the property recently purchased by him, of the estate of Susan Sivers, situate on east side of Central avenue, adjoining farm of the estate of Amos P. Scudder.

Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, held their annual election for officers on Monday evening last. The following was the result: Chas. H. French, foreman; James Moffett, First Assistant; John Ingram, Second Assistant; A. Burdick, Secretary; Joseph R. Connoly, Treasurer.

The following letters remain in postoffice uncalled for: Margaret Finegan, (2) Thomas Langford, C. M. McNeil, Mrs A. Wynne, A. C. Clark, Miss O. French, L. Ipeman, Miss Lucy Stanway Jackson, E. P. McCane, Fred Miller, Geo. Credlieb, Annie O'Neil, Miss Susan Sever, Robert Saunders, Clark Scudder, Miss Annie H. Taylor, Mrs. William Julia Aymer, J. B. Crawford, Genevefa Scherf.

Lawyer Elgar had his maiden case on Wednesday afternoon before Justice Jaques. It was held in the Town rooms. The suit was brought by A. Moffett against C. Condell, for damages done to Mr. Moffett's son, by his being bit by a spitz dog belonging to the defendant. After a number of witnesses on both sides were sworn, the case was ably submitted to the Court by counsel. The justice decided in favor of the plaintiff, and gave judgment in his favor for six cents and costs.

At the election for officers of the Westfield Fire Department, held on Tuesday evening last, all of the candidates for Chief got left, neither of them receiving a majority of the votes cast. Howard P. Manning, Foreman of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, was elected First Assistant Chief, there being no opposition to him. The vote between Benjamin H. Woodruff of Bucket and Engine Co., and A. Z. Chambers of Hook and Ladder Co., for Second Assistant, was very close, but neither received a majority, therefore there was no election for that office.

Sherman Cooper, Augustus K. Gale, of Westfield, Lewis Smith and A. W. Moffett of Clark Township, Nathan C. Mervin of Springfield, and John Nevius of New Providence, were the six surveyors of the highway appointed by the Court of Common Pleas for the laying out and opening of a public road, running from the mountain road to the top of the first mountain. They will meet at the Westfield Hotel on Saturday next, at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of viewing the same. There are no fine views from the mountains back of Westfield, as there are anywhere upon the large range of mountains, from below the Orange to the Musconetcong Valley. All it needs is some well graded roads to develop the beautiful building sites.

On Tuesday evening the members of the different fire companies of our town, sat down to a fine lay-out of eatables, gotten up by the proprietor of the Westfield Hotel. It was done in Sam's best style, and a very jolly time was had. The supper was provided for out of the donation from the Cranford Township Committee to the Westfield Fire Department, in appreciation of their services at the late fire in that town. Representatives of Cranford committee were present, also Messrs. Robert Hoskins, Robert Fugerson, Gideon E. Ludlow and Geo. Damon residents of Cranford, Frank Matthews, of Zephyr Hook & Ladder of Plainfield, were among the guests of the occasion. After the abundant supply of eatables were disposed of, a happy hour was spent in speech making and singing and a good time generally.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

THE Council should be proud of itself. It has saved $75 for the city by cutting down the Street Commissioner's salary.

THE sale of the balance of the "Norwood" estate is set down for Monday, the 23rd inst. Full particulars will be noticed in another column.

THE PARTIES who purchased a twenty foot lot on North avenue, two months ago for $1,500, have been offered $1,000 advance for their bargain.

GREEN & CO., the furniture dealer, have presented the Music Hall management a handsome pier glass, as a part of that institution's stage furniture.

THANKS to Assemblyman Vetterlein for legislative documents and manual of 1885. Also to Senator Livingston for report of State Board of Education.

YOU can hear the Valencia Orchestra at the Park avenue Baptist church, next Thursday evening, for 25 cents. Reserved seats at Reynolds' Pharmacy, 35 cents.

THE quarterly report of the Warden of the county jail, shows: Prisoners received, 171, and on hand 57; expenses, each, per day, 28 cents—of which 13 cents were for food.

PLAINFIELD avenue has caught the infection. Mr. I. W. Rushmore recently disposed of three lots on that avenue at fair prices, on which elegant residences are to be erected.

A FIRE occurred in Prall's grocery store, Somerville, on Monday morning last, caused by an overheated stove. The Department speedily extinguished the fire with about $500 loss.

ADMISSION tickets for the last of the Park avenue Baptist church entertainments, next Thursday evening, have been reduced to 25 cents. Reserved seats at 35 cents may be secured at Reynolds'.

THE public is looking forward to the promised production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," on a grand scale, with the best of scenery and the greatest talent, at Music Hall, Monday evening, the 23d inst. It will be a big treat.

THE stockholders of the Music Hall Association voted, Monday evening, to put a mortgage of $5,000 on the building, to cancel the outstanding indebtedness. This will take the place of the "preferred stock" proposed to be issued.

ACCORDING to a statement in the Central Times this week, Chief Dodd says the fellow who has been assaulting (?) women and girls in the city recently, "has left these parts." Is that so, Charlie? Why wasn't he arrested before he left?

AS February 22d, Washington's Birthday, which is a legal holiday, occurs this year on Sunday—Monday, February 23d, will be observed, and all notes falling due at banks on the 22d, and 23d must be attended to on Saturday, Feb. 21st.

A number of his friends met at the residence of Mr. Albro Lyons, on Central avenue, Tuesday evening, to congratulate that gentleman on his 72d birthday and to enjoy his bountiful hospitality. The event was most satisfactorily celebrated.

THE past week this section of the country has experienced peculiar and severe changes of weather. Sunday and Monday were mild days compared with Wednesday, when the temperature marked six degrees below zero—the coldest day of the winter.

THE last of the Park avenue Baptist course of entertainments will be given in the church, next Thursday evening. Upon that occasion the Valencia Orchestra, whose success in this city is still fresh in our memories, will again favor the public. Don't miss hearing them.

DR. T. H. TOMLINSON is becoming very popular in his health discussions before the people in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Tuesday evening last, his excellent remarks were listened to by a large audience. The Dr's talk is plain and on a common sense principle.

THE handful of North Plainfield citizens that are the prime movers in the Borough scheme, assert their desire for an expression of the views of all on the subject. Yet when we publish the opinions of one whose opinions differ from theirs, then opinions are called "innuendoes."

MR. L. A. RHEAUME has formed a copartnership with Mr. George D. Morrison under the firm name of L. A. Rheaume & Co., and will continue with increased facilities to sell lumber, coal, wood, flour, feed, etc., as heretofore, on Broadway and Fourth street, adjoining the railroad.

TEN dollars a car was what the P. & R. "socked" the Pennsylvania Railroad when the latter was compelled to run their trains over the former road, in consequence of the New Brunswick accident. The Penn. has marked this "item" down in their books, and will "get even" with the P. & R. some time—when they can.

A YOUNG girl accompanied by a colored maid-servant, was assaulted at the corner of Somerset street and Manning avenue, Monday evening, about 8:30. The ruffian that seized her was frightened away by the unfortunate girl's screams. The gentleman whose assistance she sought at an adjoining house, was unable to discover him.

THE Somerset County Teachers' Association met in the North Plainfield school building, last Saturday, and carried out a programme as previously published by us. The most prominent features of the affair, (which was a success in every particular) were the bountiful collation and an Exposition of Development Work by Miss Ginn.

WEDNESDAY afternoon last the belt came off of the governor on the big engine at the Oil Cloth works, causing the machinery to run at lightning speed. Before the engine could be stopped, nearly every spoke in the large fly wheel was ripped out, and the engine itself thrown from its foundation. The loss is fully $800 by the accident.

THE committee on bridges of the Board of Freeholders of Union and Somerset counties, formally accepted the Farragut avenue, county line bridge, in this city, on Monday last. This bridge, as placed over Green Brook at Farragut avenue, is constructed of the iron work procured by the Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset Counties for the erection of a new bridge at Grove Street after the destruction of the stone arch bridge at that point by the great freshet of 1882, and which was so strenuously objected to by the public on account of its small size. A more suitable structure was afterward erected at Grove street. The Farragut avenue bridge is a credit to its vicinity and the Freeholders of both counties.

More Elegant Residences.

Mr. Stephen Cahone, Jr., the broker, has just purchased of Mr. James E. Martine a large piece of property on Broadway, opposite Mr. Stephen Giona's handsome place, and will at once erect thereon a fine residence for his own occupancy. Mr. Job Male has also secured a most desirable site at the corner of Broadway and Carlton place, where he intends building another of his attractive houses. The additions of the above costly nature to Plainfield's large number of elegant residences, in the past two years, is not equalled by any other city or town in the State.

Who Is The Plainfielder?

The Jersey City Argus Washington correspondent gives the following: "The near approach of Mr. Cleveland's inauguration appears to have a peculiar effect on some people in New Jersey,' remarked an officer of the Treasury to the Argus correspondent. 'Our department received three conscience contributions from that State last week. The first was postmarked Trenton, N. J. The writer simply said, I took this money from the Government. It is not mine. Enclosed was a crisp five dollar note. The second contribution, $15, was from Plainfield, and the last, $400, was postmarked Newark."

The Mutual Life of New York.

The annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, for the year 1884, is printed in another column. The assets of the company now reach $103,876,178.51, and it has accumulated a surplus of over $12,000,000. Its payments upon policies last year amounted to $13,923,062.19, equal to over $46,000 every business day in the year, and its income was more than $19,000,000. The managers of this great corporation continue to augment its resources from year to year, not by adopting fancy schemes, but by adhering to the principles of legitimate life insurance. The variety of insurance which is so cheap that it is worthless, is not the kind furnished by the Mutual Life, and the less the public have of it, the better. The 42 years experience of this company is in itself a guarantee that a conservation policy has prevailed, and that trusts confided to it will not be betrayed. Mr. F. S. Winston is the able and active president of the company.

Plainfield's Prosperity.

From every indication there is a great business and building boom on hand for Plainfield. Builders inform us that the coming Spring will show more buildings being erected within the city limits than has been the case for years. There has been considerable real estate exchanges and sales the past three months, while our mechanics have been kept busy during the Winter months in erecting new buildings for mechanical and household purposes. We have from time to time announced the sales and transfers of property in our midst, also contemplated improvements. Ere two months passes by, North avenue, from Park avenue to Peace street, beyond the depot, will present a different view from that of the present. New store and livery buildings will be erected and the whole aspect of the avenue changed. Plainfield is growing and will continue to grow, as long as new life is infused into its community by capitalists who are willing to invest their money in property here.

The Cantata.

Next Monday evening in Music Hall, the cantata of "Queen Esther"—which many rehersals under Dr. Utter has perfected—will be rendered by about fifty of the best vocalists that Plainfield possesses. The costumes of Jews and Persians, and the robes of the King and Queen, the maids of honor, pages and attendants, are to be specially selected for the occasion, and will equal in gorgeousness anything attempted before in this city. The principal characters will be filled by the most talented of local soloists, and the choruses will include the pick of the church choirs and other musical associations. The profits of the affair are to be used in reducing the outstanding debt of the Plainfield Reform Club, which purpose should command the patronage of the whole community.

A special feature of the affair will be the orchestral music by performers of recognized talent. Miss Utter and Miss Anthony will be the pianists, and Messrs. Al. Everitt and Voltmann, the organists. Their performances will include two elaborate overtures, and exceed anything of the kind before attempted in this city.

A Wonderful Discovery and another Plainfield Industry.

It has always been the usual way of the world to credit its great inventions and advancements in science to the brains of men, but we have to record just now a new discovery that is due to the sharp eyes of a woman and the depth of her intelligence—which will revolutionize the manufacture of rubber goods and counteract all the objectionable features that were formerly considered an indestructable condition and nature of that material.

In a few weeks the Freeley Manufacturing Co. will begin the erection of extensive works in this city, adjoining the present buildings of the Oil Cloth Factory. The main building will be 200 feet front by 80 feet in depth, and will be three stories in height. In this will be contained the Company's offices, labratory, and work rooms. The President of the Corporation is Miss E. M. Freeley, who is the fortunate discoverer of a process for deodorizing rubber, and also the owner of patents on the invention in the United States as well as England, France, Canada and other foreign countries. This young lady is a native of New York, but it was while in charge of a rubber manufacturing works in Connecticut that she first realized the probability of destroying the odor in the material, and by patience and experiments accomplished such seeming impossibility.

In a small building attached to the drying room of the Oil Cloth Factory, a tank room has been arranged for the present use of the Freeley Co., and here the President, with Mr. Franklin E. Quirk, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Company, are located for the purpose of treating samples of all kinds of rubber goods sent them as a trial. The process used not only deodorizes the material, but in fact also strengthens it. It takes away no atom of the rubber itself nor the slightest particle of its elasticity, but where in cloth goods the rubber is spread only on the surface, it is, by the Freeley process, driven into and through the cloth, and entirely permeates it. In the case of rubber hospital-sheets—which often stick to the patient and peel, and the odor of which is so objectionable to the sick—the discovery is of the greatest good. Because, besides the deodorization and the forcing of the rubber into the goods, the chemicals used are disinfectants and thereby medicate the sheets to such an extent as to prevent contagion. In dress-shields this medication is quite a sanitary measure, and the deodorizing of gossamer cloaks and rubber garments of all kinds, will certainly create an enormous demand for such apparel. By the same means rubber is deodorized and driven into leather for carriage tops, the making of boots and shoes, and a hundred other uses.

Although the English manufacturers who have tested the results of the process, are offering great inducements to secure Miss Freeley's services in that country, yet the company of which she is President will erect its works in this city—as described above—at an outlay in the beginning of about $30,000.

THE crossing-sweepers now add to their petitions for a penny, the assertion that it is their "birthday."

An Interesting Chess Event.

In order to bring together the numerous but scattered chess players of New Jersey, the Elizabeth Chess Club has arranged with Mr. Steinitz, now of New York city, to play simultaneous games with as many opponents as may be arranged against him. As only about thirty entrants are required to make the effort a success, it is hoped that all who desire to participate will send in their names at once. Mr. Steinitz is considered the strongest player in the world, and this will afford our New Jersey amateurs a fine opportunity for ascertaining how little they know about the game. Those who desire to attend should address the Elizabeth Chess Club, 128 Broad street, Elizabeth, New Jersey, when full particulars as to terms, date and hour will be given them.

Burned Out.

Just before nine o'clock of Tuesday evening, the barn occupied by John A. Benner, of West Second Street, was entirely destroyed by fire, and its contents, with the exception of one horse, were a total loss. Mr. Benner lost two horses, and one belonging to Mr. J. Y. Wilson was also burned. On these animals there was an insurance of $75 each. Mr. Benner had the contents of the barn insured for $475, and there were destroyed two wagons, one brett, five setts of harness, hay, straw and tools, on which the insurance was $225.

The building was an old structure and uninsured. Mr. W. C. Butler was the agent for the owner of the property in this city. Mr. Benner's total insurance was $775, and the amount on the horses and goods he lost was $925. The latter sum will undoubtedly cover his damage.

The New Rink.

Ground will soon be broken for the new Rink at Broadway and Fourth street, and about eight weeks from this date will probably see the opening of this, the handsomest and most perfect building of its kind in New Jersey. In the kilns is drying the material for the skating surface—about 25,000 feet of maple—and the brick and lumber for the structure itself is already contracted for. As soon as the trenches for the walls and the holes for the piers are dug, the masons will begin at once to build, and continue as fast as possible, followed by the carpenters, until completion is achieved. Nothing in addition to the details as published in our recent description of the rink, has been thought of, except the possibility of arranging for lighting by electricity. Should such plan be adopted it would prove quite an advantageous feature and a great comfort.

The contracts given out to-day (Thursday) are awarded to Mr. Wm. Ross of Somerville for furnishing the brick necessary, and to Mr. Isaac W. Pangborn of this city, for the mason work.

Fire Board Meeting.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting, Tuesday evening. Present—President VanWinkle and Commissioners Morris, Livingston and Jones. Absent—Messrs. Depew and Cutter. The minutes of the last adjourned meeting of the Board were approved as read. "Progress" was reported in the matter of the claim of Mr. W. B. Stewart for damages to his carriage. The agreement transferring the horses of Zephyr H. & L. to the Board was read and adopted. Upon the presentation of a report in favor of purchasing Warren Engine Co's steamer, the committee was continued with the request that it report at the next meeting of the Board at what price the same could be secured. Certificates of exemption were granted, if found correct, to D. J. Carney, H. O'Donnell and F. Ruttman. The action of Zephyr H. & L. Co., in electing Alonzo Wallace, Second Assistant Foreman, was laid over. The following bills were ordered paid: J. N. Schenck, $23.15; F. J. Pruden, $4.83; W. L. Force & Bro., $11.35; A. Gee, $6; J. R. Sebring, $3. A communication was received from Zephyr H. & L. Co., notifying the Board of its intention to hereafter change its by-laws to allow for the titles of Captain, and First and Second Lieutenants, of its Company, instead of Foreman and First and Second Assistants. The Board laid the communication on the table. An invitation from the Scotch Plains Fire Department for the Board to be present at a trial of its apparatus on the 23d inst., was accepted. The Board then adjourned.

New Rinkles.

A roller skating rink for the express accommodation of the colored residents of Mount Holly, is in course of erection.

The Central Times has quite an extensive acquaintance among people who "hang-up" their grocers and patronize the roller rink.

A hearty laugh is pleasant to hear except when you are just getting up from a slippery pavement, or a still slipperier roller rink floor.

The "giants" undoubtedly amused the children, Saturday afternoon, although we cannot claim that the older folk were particularly interested.

The Bordentown common council voted to license a roller skating rink there, but Mayor Brasely vetoed the measure, and there is considerable excitement over the matter.

There is chafing and fretting in Frenchtown. The people want a skating rink there, and the old foundry building is being looked over with a view of converting it into one.

The large attendance at Saturday's matinee proves that the "craze" or more truly, fascination—has not diminished in the least. Hundreds of ladies and children were present and on the floor.

The Decker polo club, composed of the young lads connected with the rink, during last week twice defeated the Boy's Branch of the Y. M. C. A. team. Wednesday the score was 8 to 0; and Saturday, 5 to 2.

The re-appearance of J. Raymond Mayer Thursday evening, was attended by a large audience of his admirers. His exhibition showed quite some advancement in the art of roller skating, and we doubt if at present a dozen professionals can equal him.

All the "rinkers" remember with pleasure Willie Hyde and Edna McKibbin, and their hundreds of friends in this city will be glad to hear of the promised re-appearance of these graceful little skaters. The date set for their return to the Casino's surface, is Monday the 23d.

This evening and to-morrow afternoon and evening, Prof. Benjamin's troupe of trained dogs in fancy costumes, will exhibit themselves to delighted audiences. These dogs, twelve in number and all of a size, give what the Newburg Observer calls "the most interesting entertainment that has visited the rink."

The third "deciding" race between Messrs. Conger and Cooke came off at the rink, Thursday evening of last week, with the usual result. The distance was seventy-five laps of the floor, a journey of about four miles, during which Conger led from the start and finished with ease one and a half laps ahead. The time was nineteen minutes, forty-two seconds.

The Presbyterian ministers of Pittsburgh have solemnly denounced roller-skating. They hold that the skating-rink demoralizes young people and that the excessive physical exercise on the rollers works great injury to the health of young women. It has been observed ever since the formation of society that young people give great offense when they deliberately set about enjoying themselves. They do not appreciate the fact that this is a Vale of Tears and that life is a very solemn affair.

It Looks Like "No Borough."

What we were assured was an "informal meeting," as it proved to be, was called to order by Mr. James McGee in North Plainfield's old school house, last Friday evening, to discuss the question of borough government. Mr. H. K. Carroll read a digest of the charter of an existing borough, a letter from its Mayor, and exhibited on a map the boundaries proposed to surround the intended borough of North Plainfield. Opinions for and against—principally against—the scheme were expressed by many of those present, and a ballot cast by the attendance would have certainly defeated the project by a large majority. Notice was given of an election to be held next Tuesday, to decide the question at the usual polling places.

Personalia.

Samuel F. Morrow, a prominent lawyer of Newark, died suddenly on Sunday morning last.

County Collector Sheridan is convalescing from his recent severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Ex-Freeholder John T. Wilcox died at his residence in New Providence last Friday and was buried there on Tuesday.

C. W. L. Martine, Esq., Director of the Board of Freeholders, is once more able to attend to his duties, after a protracted illness from rheumatism.

Freeholder William Oliver is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia. He was attended by Dr. Green of Elizabeth, his place of residence.

Chas. T. Reed, presiding Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Camden county, died in Camden city on Saturday night after a brief illness from typhoid fever.

Ex-County Collector Alfred Berry, of Somerset County, is still confined to his residence in North Plainfield by illness. His many friends hope for his ultimate recovery.

Miss Clarissa Johnson, a life-long resident of North Plainfield, died on Monday last, after a short illness, at the advanced age of 75 years. Miss Johnson was an aunt to Rhesel Johnson, Esq., at whose residence, on Somerset street, she died.

Mrs. Jacob Thorn, the aged mother of Mr. E. P. Thorn, was subject to a fainting spell, caused by indigestion, while attending Divine Service in the Trinity Reformed church on Second street, last Sunday. Mrs. Thorn is over 73 years of age. She soon recovered from her indisposition.

Col. James Mulligan, brother-in-law of Congressman-elect Green, of Union county, has the congratulations of many friends upon the bettered condition of his wife, who has been confined in her room at Force's Hotel, this city, for the past two weeks, in consequence of severe illness.

Mr. Rinaldo Sank Little, a former resident of Plainfield, died at his home, No. 2,037 Seventh avenue, New York City, on Friday last, after a short but painful illness from blood poisoning. His remains were interred on the following Monday in Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Little, while a resident of this city, lived next to the Fair grounds on Park avenue. He had many warm friends in this vicinity, who mourn his loss. He leaves a wife and four children.

"The Somerset."

It is now just ten months since Mr. James O. Carpenter, a wealthy and far-sighted citizen of New York, purchased at auction in this city for $4,000 that most picturesque building site wherein is located the famous Washington Rock. Since such purchase the talent of the world's best architects has been secured to create the plans of a hotel to occupy a grand position on that mountain top; and as much time and thought have been consumed in perfecting the details of a building that is to be unequalled, it was not until Saturday last that the work was completed.

The architects are Messrs. Merry and Chappell—the former of whom was associated for ten years past with Post, the peer of all architects. The building they have planned is probably the most charming in its outlines in the United States. Mr. Carpenter, himself, has made a study of the beauties of architecture in all parts of the world, and from his large collection of photographs of the handsomest buildings in Europe and this country, have been drawn many of the graceful features combined and grouped in the hotel of which we speak. On the Southern corner of the building is a tower, 90 feet high, in the base of which are the main offices and above are octagonal and circular reading or sitting rooms from each floor, like spacious balconies—being on the third story entirely enclosed in glass for use in inclement weather, and above forming observatories from which the church steeples of Brooklyn, almost a hundred miles away, can be easily seen. This tower is modelled from a celebrated Chinese temple, which fact is one evidence of the attractiveness of the entire building.

From this corner stretches the face of the hotel—which is to be called "The Somerset"—400 feet along the mountain's edge. Wide piazzas surround the structure, forming continuous promenades that no other resort can excel, with views that no other location can equal. Over two hundred alcove rooms, single or en suite, with large open fire-places, are arranged for, all possessing outlooks upon enchanting scenery. Bath rooms on every floor and all the comforts and conveniences known or to be obtained elsewhere, are included in the plans. The dining-room is only connected with the main building by a covered piazza, and is itself separated by a fire-proof wall (that is continued up through each story) from the kitchens and laundry rooms. The interior of the dining-room is in the shape of a cross, 90 by 60, 24 feet from floor to ceiling, with suspended galleries at each end. A separate room for the use of nurses and children is also provided. Elegant public and private parlors are included in the plans of the ground floor.

The hotel is to be heated by steam throughout, besides the open places for burning wood in the offices and other public rooms, and sleeping apartments. A fire proof stair case of iron is to be built from the ground to the roof, connected by swinging doors of iron with the hallways of every floor. The stables at the back of the hotel will accommodate stages and private vehicles, and horses of any number. Another separate building will contain bowling alleys for the lady guests and billiard rooms for the gentlemen, with entrances entirely distinct.

All this with the beautifying of the grounds, will necessitate an outlay of almost a quarter of a million dollars. The owners of the site who are the originators of the project and who are all practical business men and not visionary schemers, see, as we do, success in the venture. They stand ready to invest a large sum of money in the undertaking, and feel assured of the safety and profit of such investment. It is, however, proposed to form a stock company to carry out the plans briefly outlined above, and until that intent is accomplished, contracts for the building will not be made.

Besides all this the surrounding grounds are to be laid out in winding walks, and by clearing off the forest trees in some portions and leaving cool, shady groves in other parts, a small park will be formed within which will be erected elegant little villas and summer cottages on the most enchanting spots. All this, however, is prospective, and as those interested do not propose starting the hotel scheme and the plans and projects associated with it until the funds necessary for completion of all are secured, probably nothing will be done this year.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

SATURDAY EVENING, Feb. 27th.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Livingston, Love, Marsh, Simpson, Wadsworth, West—10.

Absent—Mr. Boguelin—1.

Another petition from L. E. Hart for permission to move a frame building through the streets, was referred with power.

The following claims were presented and referred: N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Co., $38.56; J. Noel, $5.

His Honor the Mayor sent for confirmation the name of the present Overseer of Poor, Mr. J. O. Nodyne, for the same office during the coming year. The nomination was confirmed by a vote of 6 ayes, and 4 nays.

Also the following as special police: S. R. Hope, Potter Press Works, W. R. Mattox, Music Hall, Randolph Marsh, Plainfield avenue, Thomas J. Clarkson, Fourth street school, William Sutton, Evona, Francis Moran, East Front street, Joseph Noel, Front street, Morris Higgins, St. Mary's church, S. A. Davis, Front street, Frank Fine, depot, George H. Smith, depot, William H. Scribner, Scott Press Works, John Welsh, Park House, Ed. Dobbs, Hotel Netherwood, F. A. Dunham. The nominations were confirmed, all voting aye.

The annual statement of the Poor Overseer was read and referred to the Alms Com. The following is the communication—

To the Honorable, the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.:

GENTLEMEN:—In pursuance of the requirements of the Ordinance for the relief and support of the city poor I would respectfully report that necessary shelter has been provided at city expense for the past two months for the following persons, certified by the City Judge as properly entitled to relief from the Poor Fund:

Mrs. Clifford, Luke Dieu and wife, Alexander Snedeker and wife and two children, James Powers, Billy Powers, Mrs. Kelloran and four children, Mrs. Morecraft and two children, Mrs. Harry and three children,—All accommodated for $10 per month rent in house of T. J. Pruden.

Isaac Oldman and wife and four children, rent of rooms for $4 per month of C. Petersen.

Geo. Randolph and wife and four children, rent of rooms for $3 per month of A. Runyon.

Mrs. Donahue and four children, rent of rooms at $4 per month of M. Daly.

Mrs. Clickner and three children, rent of rooms at $3.50 per month of W. Morse.

Mrs. Southard and two children, rent of rooms for $3 per month of L. A. Cooper.

Mrs. Naylor and four children, rent of rooms for $4.50 per month of F. Coombs.

Mrs. O'Keefe and three children, rent of rooms for $4 per month of M. Thompson.

Mrs. Tingley and five children, rent of rooms for $5 per month of A. Vail.

Mrs. Polhemus and child, rent of rooms for $3 per month of E. Cole.

Susan Manning, rent of rooms for $2.50 per month of C. Thorp, agt.

Mrs. Tainor, rent of rooms for $3 per month of G. VanNest.

Partial support is given Messrs. Layton and DeLaMontanye at $10 per month each and Mrs. Webster at $8 per month.

Herewith is a list also of poor persons who having a legal settlement in this city are receiving entire relief, care and support at the expense of the City Poor Fund:

Mrs. Moran at $2.50 per week at Mrs. Cooper.

Albert Pound at $2.50 per week at D. Hand.

Rebecca Kerr at $2.50 per week at D. Hand.

Mrs. Freeman's three children at $5 per week at D. Hand.

Of the above number receiving shelter at the expense of the Poor Fund all but six have been given orders for necessary provisions &c., and 18 other claimants seeking relief, have in the discretion of the overseer of the poor, been granted needed supplies.

All these orders for provisions and supplies have (except in case of wood, coal or shoes) been given to the Plainfield Relief Association, the ladies of which have taken great care to assist me in a wise and just distribution of the city's charities.

This statement is submitted to your Honorable Body for investigation and official action thereon in conformity with the provisions of section 9 of the Poor Ordinance.

If the support of this class of the city poor in the manner provided and at the expense stated meets your approval, it will afford me satisfaction to have your official confirmation of the same.

J. OAKLEY NODYNE.
Overseer of Poor.

Plainfield, N. J. Feb. 7, 1885.

The Com. on Rooms reported that a desirable Council Chamber and rooms for committee meetings could be obtained in the Ryder building. The matter was left in the Committee's hands.

The Lamps Com. reported that the city's claim against the Railroad Co., for damages to lamps while rebuilding the bridges, had been audited.

The License Com. reported its approval of the application of the proprietor of the Hotel Netherwood for an inn and saloon license. The same was granted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Livingston, Love, Simpson and Wadsworth—7.

Negative—Messrs. Coriell, Marsh and West—3.

The claims presented during the evening were reported as correct, referred to Aud. Com., and subsequently ordered paid.

Special policeman F. A. Dunham was, by resolution, appointed Deputy Tax Collector with a compensation of five per cent., and the understanding that the City Collector waives all claim to any fees on taxes so collected.

The following were fixed by resolution as the salaries of the city officers for 1885:

Corporation Counsel, $400; Treasurer, $350; Street Commissioner, $275; City Clerk, $350; Overseer of the Poor, $240; City Physician, $250; Regular Policeman, $600; Chief of Police, $700; Special Policeman, twenty-five cents per hour, Janitor, $50 and $2 for every extra meeting.

The resolution fixing the number of special police was amended, increasing it to twenty.

The nomination of P. Lynch as regular policeman in place of P. J. Flanagan, was taken from the table and confirmed by a vote of nine to one.

The bond of the Deputy Tax Collector was fixed at $1,000, and referred to the Laws Com. with power.

The Council then adjourned.

The Great Actors Coming.

The management of Music Hall are to be congratulated on the securement of the world-renowned actor, Dion Boucicault, who will appear in our city on next Tuesday evening, in his famous piece—"Shaughraun," supported by his son Dot and daughter Nina. The St. Paul Pioneer Press has the following to say regarding them:—

"We are grateful to the management of the Opera House for bringing Mr. Dion Boucicault here. Of course only the most generous support by our people can justify an engagement with him; and he appears in the play in which he is at his best. We do not know anything more delightful than Mr. Boucicault as Conn. What Jefferson was in "Rip Van Winkle" and Sothern as "Dundreary," Mr. Boucicault is as the "Shaughraun." There is no extravagance about it. Other actors make the character fantastic and absurd, but Mr. Boucicault knows just what sort of a harum-scarum, simple-minded, true-hearted vagrant he intended the Irish lad to be and he plays his thought. The same may be said of his son, Mr. D. G. Boucicault, and his daughter, Miss Nina Boucicault. As Harvey Duff, the sneaky spy, Mr. D. G. Boucicault loses all identity as a young man; one sees before them a villain and betrayer; while as Moya, Miss Nina brings before one the peasant girl in all her sweetness and purity. Even those who do not ordinarily go to theatres—ministers, churchmen and the like—can afford to go and see this man of genius and his gifted children in their pictures of Irish life."

Reform Club.

At last week's business meeting of the Club, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be authorized and requested to procure a suitable book wherein to register and keep for examination the names and address of members of this Club needing work of any kind; and that public invitation be given, through the journals of this city, for all persons desiring the services of men of no drinking habits, to call upon or communicate with the Financial Secretary, A. Titsworth, at West Front street, or either other officer of the Club, relative to such employment.

Dr. Doremus on Ammonia in Food.

In analyzing samples of baking powder purchased by myself of a number of grocers in New York City, I find that Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder contains only pure Grape Cream of Tartar, Bicarbonate of Soda and a small portion of flour, while the Royal Baking Powder contains in addition thereto, Tartaric Acid and Ammonia. The Ammonia gas is observed not only in the Royal Baking Powder when it is heated, but even in the cake made therefrom.

My examination shows that Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is better than the Royal Baking Powder, because:

1st. It is compounded of better and more wholesome ingredients.

2d. It yields a larger amount of Carbonic Acid Gas and in a more satisfactory manner, in consequence of which less powder is required to produce light bread material.

3d. It is honestly sold as to weight. The Cleveland cans contained full net weight, while the Royal cans were short weight.

ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING SICK?

We want to say a word to the men, women and girls who work in stores, offices and factories. There are hundreds of thousands of you in the country. Very few of you are well. You are shut up too much and exercise too little. In this way you get sick. Your blood is bad, your digestion poor, your head often aches, you don't feel like work. Your liver, stomach and kidneys are out of order. Parker's Tonic has cured hundreds of such cases. It is pure, sure and pleasant.

El Mahdi is said to have a French Pain among his forces. This may account for the grip he has on them.

CATARRH CURED, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. Sold by C. A. Butler.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

BRAVE LITTLE TRUDE.

Gertrude May is my sister-in-law, a bright little fairy of 19, with a pair of eyes like stars, and a merry, thrifty way about her calculated to make a man forget that this is a hard, work-a-day world, full of vexation and disappointment.

When Annie and I were married we took Gertrude to live with us; I could not bear the thought of the lovely girl going to meet this world in some menial occupation, and Annie was very thankful to have her sister with her.

Gertrude—"Trude" we always called the dear child—paid her way, I assure you.

After the birth of Baby Grace she took the entire management of the household upon her young shoulders, and, though we never kept a servant, my wife scarcely knew what it was to have a care in the world.

So we went on for a couple of years as happy as birds in a nest, making much of the blessings we had, thinking little or nothing of our privations.

Alas, I never dreamed that the first reverse would come to us through me.

Yet, was I to be blamed?

Ever a hard worker, one particularly hot summer I had double duty to perform at the bank, and I overtaxed my ability.

I remember falling with a dull crash beneath my desk one day, and it was weeks ere I was conscious that I lay at home in my own bed, carefully tended by Annie and Trude.

I had been stricken down by brain fever and the doctor had said the struggle back to health and strength would be long and serious, for my system was wholly debilitated by overwork.

After about six weeks, and I had been declared out of danger, I awoke one evening, after taking a long nap, to find the room deep in twilight and very silent.

I lay some time in a drowsy state, when suddenly I was aroused by the unmistakable sound of a sob close by me, followed by the low, earnest voice of Trude.

"Don't cry, Annie, dear," she said, soothingly, "you'll wake him."

"Oh, but Trude, what are we to do?" faltered my wife.

"We shall pull through all right, dear, never fear!" was the brave reply.

"But every cent of the money is gone! There's a month's rent due, and no end of little outstanding bills. Besides, the doctor won't be coming much longer, and then, of course, there'll be his bill!"

Heaven help me, her words almost killed me!

But even then little Trude was equal to the occasion.

"We must make some money, Annie," she said firmly.

"How?" in despair.

"It is the height of the blackberry season, and the fruit is unusually fine. I shall go out at 5 o'clock to-morrow morning, pick several quarts, and sell every one of them at the hotels before noon. I shall do the same as long as the berries last; you will then see whether we can make a little money or not."

I could have arisen and fallen at her feet in worship of her heroism; but poor Annie took life more seriously; she seemed proof against Trude's hopefulness.

"Oh, that could never succeed," she sighed.

"Well, I'm going to try anyway," was the undaunted rejoinder.

After a short pause Annie said, suddenly:

"Trude, we are in a desperate strait; why couldn't you write to Gerald Dayton and ask him to lend us some money?"

"Annie!"

"Well, he was in love with you before mother died; he is very rich, and I'm positive you would have been his wife to-day if you had let him ask you; so why——"

"Oh, hush! hush!" Gertrude cried. "Not a word more of that. Let me have my own way. Believe me, I shall succeed."

About 10 o'clock on the following morning Annie came to me, all dressed up in her best, and, in a nervous way, asked me if I could spare her for a couple of hours to go into the village with Trude.

I knew in an instant the blackberries had been picked and that the dear girls were going together to try their fortune.

Rather than distress Annie by letting her know that I had overheard their conversation of the preceding evening, I assured her that I was perfectly comfortable and urged her going.

As they went down the garden path I crept to the window and looked after them.

Through the scalding tears that gathered before my eyes like film I saw Trude with a large basket upon each arm, while my poor little wife followed her with the baby in her arms.

God only knows what I suffered during those two hours.

I had fallen into a light sleep from sheer misery and exhaustion, when I was awakened by the entrance of Annie.

Her face was as radiant as an angel's. She put the baby down beside me and kissed me as though she had seen me for ten years.

"Oh what do you think?" she cried. "Who do you suppose is in the parlor with Trude?"

I made a very shrewd guess.

"Gerald Dayton," I said.

"Yes!" exclaimed Annie. "Trude went to town to sell some blackberries, and at the very first hotel we came to who should see her but Mr. Dayton. He took her to task then and there for not letting him know where she had gone to after mother died, and I'm sure before he leaves this house he'll ask her to marry him!"

Scarcely were the words out of her mouth when dear little Trude entered the room, looking like a blush rose in full bloom, and followed by Mr. Gerald Dayton.

I had seen the young gentleman two years before, when I was courting my Annie, and, though I knew him to be a decided "swell," I always thought him an exceedingly fine fellow.

After the first salutations were over, Trude said to me:

"Mr. Dayton doubts my assertion that I sent him my address when we moved out here. Don't you remember that winter morning that I gave you a note for him?"

I was obliged to confess that I did not remember the occurrence.

"Ah! you little traitor!" laughed Gerald Dayton.

In the meantime my wife had gone to the closet, brought out my winter overcoat and produced from one of its pockets a yellow, crumpled note, addressed to Mr. G. Dayon. Oh, how they laughed at me then, and Gerald said:

"Now you must atone for your shameful neglect, sir, by giving me your sister-in-law as my wife. And, as exchange is no robbery, I will give you this house and land, being both mine, together with all the rents you have paid for it in the two years you have been here. Come, what do you say?"

"It is for Trude to say," I answered, taking her little berry-stained hands in mine.

She laughed just as a bird trills, and said with a shy blush:

"I'm agreeable, and should have been two years ago, if you had—had asked me!"

In a fortnight I was a well man and back at the bank.

THE DISGUISED BEGGAR.

"I only hope you won't regret it, Juliet," said Bonnington.

Mrs. Benedict Bonnington was one of those kindly, maternal creatures who seems exactly like a relative to every motherless young girl, and at whose hints and suggestions nobody seems to take exceptions.

Juliet Harper was in her own little boudoir—"den," she called it, in her odd, abrupt way—with a dainty little easel before her, upon which was a half finished painting, a stand of flowers at her elbow, and a pile of books on the table.

She was pretty. Not after the Diana style, but a slight, plump, cherry-cheeked girl, with a profusion of flaxen hair growing low on her forehead, blue-gray eyes, whose pupils had a way of dilating as she looked at you, and full, scarlet lips, whose parting smiles revealed a row of teeth small, white and even as pearls. And she wore at her artistic work a brown linen blouse, belted around the trimmest waist, which nearly hid the blue cashmere wrapper which was her daily costume.

"I don't know why I should regret it, Mrs. Bonnington," said Juliet.

"And tell me," said the matron, "what has induced you to accept Beverly St. Felix—a widower, old enough to be your father?"

"He is so noble—so generous!"

"Generous?" repeated Mrs. Bonnington. "Why, he is the stingiest old miser in town! Old Maggie Brower went to him yesterday to ask for five dollars for her son's outfit to Australia, and he nearly pushed her out of the door."

"I don't believe it," said Juliet, impulsively.

"I had it direct from old Maggie herself. So I didn't go to him with this subscription paper for old Mrs. Hopper's taxes, but come to you instead. The poor old creature will be sold out if the money is not raised before next Monday evening; and I confidentially expect you will give us at least five dollars."

"Yes," said Juliet, who had laid down her palette and mahl-stick, and was absently buckling and unbuckling her leather belt. "I'd give you five dollars and Mr. St. Felix shall give you twenty-five."

"How?"

"Because I shall ask him for it," replied Juliet, triumphantly. "I will prove to you how whole-hearted, how generous he can be."

"Oh, of course, he'll give it fast enough if you ask him for it," said Mrs. Bonnington, incredulously. "It will be merely an investment which he expects to realize over and over again in your hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

Juliet stood a moment pulling nervously at the scented leaves of a rose-geranium which blossomed on the wire stand close to her. Then she left the room; and after awhile the opposite door opened, and a little old woman in a blue cloak, a poke bonnet and a crook-handled cane hobbled in.

"My goodness gracious!" cried Mrs. Bonnington, starting up.

"Don't be alarmed," said a familiar voice under the poke bonnet: "I'm only old Mrs. Hopper, collecting money for her taxes."

"And you are going——"

"To Mr. St. Felix's office at once to prove to you that he is all that he seems. How do you like my disguise? It is my masquerade costume, in which I appeared as 'Old Mother Hubbard' last month," said Juliet mischievously. "And now I intend to make it useful again. Wait here for me until I come back. Give me the subscription paper!"

And she limped away, still followed by the wondering eyes of Mrs. Bonnington.

Mr. St. Felix sat in his revolving leather office chair, busied with long columns of figures. He was a stout, portly man of middle age, to be sure, but so admirably preserved that the crows' feet and wrinkles were scarcely visible around his eyes, and you could scarcely observe the bald spot on the back of his head, so carefully was the hair brushed over it.

"Eh?" said Mr. St. Felix, knitting his brows as an humble tap came to the door, "who's that? Come on!"

And the figure in blue camlet and a poke bonnet courtesied elaborately to him.

"What's wanting now?" said Mr. St. Felix, gruffly.

"Please to read this letter, sir," crooned Mrs. Hopper, extending the letter of recommendation and its attendant subscription list.

Mr. St. Felix merely cast his eyes over it, and handed it back.

"I've got nothing for you," said he, harshly.

"But, sir, I shall be sold out if some kind gentleman does not——"

"What the dickens do I care whether you are sold or not?" snarled Mr. St. Felix, showing his front teeth like an ill-tempered dog.

"I shall have to go into the poor-house, sir."

"Go into it, then, and be hanged to you!" viciously retorted this pink of generosity. "It's the best place you can be in. D'ye s'pose I've nothing to do with my money but to throw it away on you? Come, clear out!"

And Mr. St. Felix, rising, frowned the old woman out of his office, shutting the door upon her.

But before he could reseat himself, she opened the door and reappeared.

"Woman," he roared, "how dare you?"

"Stop a moment, Mr. St. Felix," said a clear, calm voice, as unlike the falsetto accent in which the old woman had spoken as possible, and flinging aside her thin disguise, Juliet Harper stood before the astonished broker.

"Juliet!"

"Miss Harper, if you please. And I wish you, sir, fully to understand that the man who can treat with rudeness and contumely the poorest and meanest of her sex deserves no quarter at the hands of a woman. Good morning!"

And Miss Harper walked away with great dignity, leaving her middle-aged admirer standing staring in the middle of his office floor.

Mrs. Bonnington listened to the story repeated by her young friend with great interest. She did not even say, "Didn't I tell you so?" She merely folded Juliet to her breast and whispered:

"Thank God, darling, that you have had such an escape from one who would have ground you cruelly to the earth under the heel of his tyranny."

Juliet herself paid Mrs. Hopper's taxes the next day. "The experience is worth it," said she, with a shrug of her shoulders.

The Edible Crab.

The edible crab is obliged to moult or cast off its shell many times during its life. This moulting appears to be an unpleasant ordeal to pass for the crabs often die during the act. When we see that they are not only obliged to escape from the parapet or shell, but also from the hard covering of their legs, delicate mouth-parts, and even gullet—turning themselves inside out, as it were—it is not surprising that they perish during the ordeal. The crab crawls up into some secluded nook or cove in shallow water to moult, out of the way of its hard-shelled relatives; for the helpless, newly-moulted, or soft-shell crab, if found, is devoured by them, as well as by several species of fishes. Fortunately for the crab, the soft covering hardens rapidly, and in a few hours it has a new and strong armor, and then it goes fearlessly out into the deeper water.

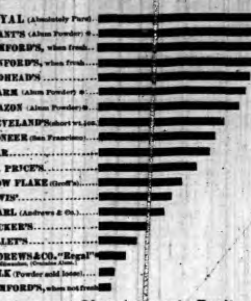
COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



Reports of Government Chemists as to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

E. G. Love, Ph. D.

It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure.

H. A. Mott, Ph. D.

The Royal Baking Powder has been used in my family for many years, and this practical test, as well as the chemical tests to which I have submitted it, prove it perfectly healthful, of uniform, excellent quality, and free from any deleterious substance.

Wm. McMurtrie, E. M., Ph. D.

I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or other injurious substance.

Henry Morton, Ph. D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology.

I have examined a sample of Royal Baking Powder, and find no injurious substance, nor any adulteration. The materials comprising the powder are pure, and the proportions quite accurate.

L. F. Bartlett, Maine State Assayer and Chemist.

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal indorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and boards of health all over the world.

Note.—The above Diagram illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders as shown by the chemical analyses and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, besides affording the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the Diagram shows some of the Alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A HOME DRUGGIST TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS." River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

Gray's Specific Medicine,

TRADE MARK

BEFORE TAKING.

The Great English Remedy. An unfailing cure for Impotency, and all Diseases that follow loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to Insanity or Consumption and a premature grave. Beware of advertisements to refund money, when druggists from whom the medicine is bought do not refund, but refer you to the manufacturers, and the requirements are such that they are seldom, if ever, complied with. See their written guarantee. A trial of one single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most skeptical of its real merits. On account of counterfeits, we have adopted the Yellow Wrapper, the only genuine. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to every one. The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or six packages for $5, or will be sent free by mail on receipt of the money, by addressing

POETRY

THE SPRING POET.

The Spring-time was approaching fast,
As up the stairs the poet passed
Towards the editorial desk,
To show the editor his lays
On Spring.

The editor grasped his cane
And struck with all his might and main.
He did not for one moment pause—
The boy'll ne'er write another clause
On Spring.

—Wilmington Star.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HER BIRTHDAY GIFT.

BY EMILY READ.

"We should not count our years a misfortune, and to be candid, this, my fortieth birthday, is the one day of my life that I have constantly looked forward to with satisfaction."

"Since yesterday?" I asked, doubtfully.

"Since I was a mere girl in my teens—that is the period considered the happiest in a woman's life, is it not? I fancy I am constitutionally timid, for I have always had an almost morbid horror of putting myself in a position that I could not break away from."

"Marriage being one of them?" I asked.

But she did not seem to hear me, and continued—

"And then there were constant difficult, teasing questions to decide, and even provokingly trivial things grew important if I had to deal with them, and I was so easily frightened."

"And so," I began, for Frances had left off speaking and seemed to have forgotten my existence.

"And so," she repeated, shaking herself out of her musings, "I used to say, when I am forty life will be worth living. There will be nothing more to happen that is unusual; no more important decisions to be made. The rest of one's days will be spent in a pleasant monotony. A few every-day worries that no mortal can escape; sickness perhaps, but nothing unusual to fear, nothing in the future to torment me."

"And is that your idea of a satisfactory life?"

I could only ask questions, for I had no sympathy in Frances' mood that night.

"Anything is better than the eternal questions, whether we have done right or wrong; wisely or foolishly," she answered, irrelevantly. "Whether one has sacrificed ones' life, or escaped a misfortune. Now at forty. I am forty to-night, you know."

Of course I knew it was Frances' birthday, for it was to keep the feast that I sat, metaphorically, by her fireside.

"Forty seems a load of years to carry, and yet I wonder what it is that makes one old, for to tell the truth I do not feel a bit older than I did ten years ago, and not nearly as old as I did this night twenty-two years ago. Then I dropped my youth as we might an ill-fitting garment. There was no possible way of altering it, and so I rid myself of it altogether. Certainly I can say to-night that I am better satisfied, more contented, and——"

"Happier," I suggested, but Frances did not appropriate the word.

"Comfortable, that better expresses the idea, unless one could honestly say satisfactory."

I was very sure Frances could not. There could be little satisfaction in a woman's life devoid of near kinsfolk, fretted by small economies, and without a home, for a third-story back room, even in a comfortable boarding-house, has but few qualities of home pervading it. "You had enough in your youth to make life very satisfactory," I said, for I remembered when Frances' father had been the leading lawyer at our bar, and had lived in more style than most of us.

"I had more money," she said, with a shrug of her shoulders; "I would like some of it now, for it needs more to keep one's self respectable at forty than at eighteen. But I am not unhappy from the want of money. One's greatest misfortune is to have a history. It has all the properties of a ghost, and is as hard to lay. I, for instance——"

I looked quickly at Frances, then as quickly turned my gaze to the fire, I was going to say, but in fact to the stove. I felt the natural flutter of pleasure that one feels when one's friends are confidential, and place you on a different footing than you ever were before. It is subtle flattery as well as a mark of trust when some friends confide to your keeping a personal history.

Whether it was the clock striking ten, or something quite as trivial that gave Frances' thoughts a turn, I could not guess, for instead of a history I had long wished to hear, she fed me on cake and wine in honor of her birthday, which she produced from a convenient closet. After that we chatted quietly, gossiping a little, but harmlessly, and working up yards of fluffy wool with our knitting needles.

It was the growth of my work that reminded me of the lapse of time, for I had given my one servant a holiday, and expected to walk home alone. But I had no fears, no matter what the time was, for our village always grew more quiet as the hours shorten their numbers. The moon was full and the only disagreeable part of my leaving was to creep like a thief past the closed doors of the sleeping boarders.

"Good-night, and do not let the ghost of the past trouble your slumbers," I whispered to Frances, as she let me out the front door.

"You know I have entered into the charmed age when there is nothing more to happen," she answered in a low key; and I do not know why, for we were not demonstrative women, we kissed each other as we said good-night.

I knew Frances was watching me until I turned the corner, which, as I did, I had the uncomfortable accident of running into a man—not metaphorically into his arms, but, literally, I ran into the man himself. I could not have done so if he had been walking, for, as I said, the moon was full, so he must have been dodging amongst the trees to be run into. Of course he begged my pardon, and I, a little surly at the fright he gave me, granted it. In doing so I looked at him—"Good heavens!" I exclaimed, "is it you, Miles Middleton, or your ghost?"

"How did you recognize me after all these years?" he asked, half pleased, half disappointed.

"Come in," I said, being at my own door. "We cannot stand talking at midnight in the street."

I let myself in by the night-key, and put up the gas-light to its full power before I turned to welcome poor Miles back to his native village. For twenty-two years he had been away, for twenty-two years his name had been spoken by his friends with bated breath, as if he were amongst the quiet dead, or far worse, amongst the sinning. In the glare of the gas light I turned to look at him. It was the same Miles I had always known; twenty-two years older. I would never have guessed it if I had not known the date of our last meeting; twenty-two pounds heavier, which was an improvement. A guilty conscience and an impaired digestion had not been among his evils all these years. His hair had not lost its color, though it grew thinner on the temples and on the crown of his head, and his eyes had the same frank, fearless look in them, his mouth the same winning smile.

"Oh, Miles," I cried, with both hands outstretched, "why did you ever go away and all these years make no sign?"

"Because," he answered, taking both my proffered hands, "Frances doubted me."

"How do you know she did?" I asked. "You gave her no chance to speak. People said dreadful things of you which you did not deny, but ran away."

"I did not run," he said hotly; "I stayed quite long enough to see that some friends doubted me; not you, I am sure. Even that I could have borne if Frances had been true."

"You gave her no chance," I maintained. "Do you think I have forgotten that miserable evening? It all seems as yesterday; the birthday fete, the color of the sunset clouds, the pink ribbon Frances wore in a knot at her throat. Poor girl! she was as white as her dress when her own father accused you of——"

"Why do you not go on and say stealing?" he said, sharply.

"Because we don't use such ugly words nowadays; embezzling is more genteel. I was indignant and said foolish things——"

"And Frances said nothing," he interrupted.

"Did you expect her to get into a rage as a mere friend would have done? Besides, you would make no denial. Her pale, pleading face did not move you. 'If they choose to believe such things of you they might,' you said, in foolish pride."

"You forget how young I was, and how hurt I was," he answered, softening under my vituperation.

"I remember Frances was some years younger, and frightened for you as well as hurt. You gave her no chance to retrieve a hurried first step, or rather a mistaken inaction, for you went at once away—the best thing you could do, some said, but the most cowardly, I thought, and left no trace for all these years."

"I said I would not come back until I could bring proof of my innocence."

"That was not necessary to those who really cared for you. Besides, the man who took the money confessed he did so ten years ago. Death forced him to confess. But this is, I fancy, no news to you."

"I heard it last week," he said, and then added, "You have just left her?"

"Yes," I said; "we have been keeping her birthday."

"I heard her speak to you at the door. Has she changed?" he asked, and then looked as if he wished he had not.

"Most of us do in twenty years," I said, evasively. "You seem to have the secret of keeping young. Frances will be pleased," I added, partly because I myself resented seeing him a handsome middle-aged man, while she had faded out of all her girlish prettiness.

"Her voice has not changed in the least," he said. "I would have known it anywhere. Do you think she will see me?"

"She must," I said with decision, and together we planned their meeting. I was to send to Frances early in the morning before there was any chance of the mention of the advent of a stranger in our placid village. So the tryst, after twenty-two years of separation, was to be in my parlor. "Poor Frances!" I thought, as I lay awake thinking of the meeting next morning, "your forty years have not brought you the calm, steady pulse, and the pleasant monotony you sought. Can anything be more stirring and upsetting than an unlooked-for honeymoon at forty? After all, it is doubtful whether we are ever too old to escape a responsibility or a heartache, or, perhaps, a happiness."

Miles came before Frances, indeed before I had finished my breakfast. He was dreadfully nervous, and fearful she would not come in spite of my nicely worded message. There must have been some stirring in the air, some bird to hint a secret, for I never saw Frances, faded as she was, look sweeter. It was like the smell of withered rose-leaves, and the faint pink of them was in her cheeks.

"I have a birthday gift that came too late last night to bring you," I said, meeting her on my threshold.

The pink in her cheeks died out for a moment, then came back in the loveliest girlish blush. "Have you had news of Miles?" she asked. "I dreamed last night he came back—the same handsome fellow. You told me I would see ghosts."

"I did not mean to prophesy such a substantial one," I said, quickly, and then gently pushed her into the parlor, closing the door on them, leaving them to themselves, while I dreamed of a wedding and bride's cake.

For no one could say that Frances had outlived her prettiness, for of all beautifiers happiness is the one to be depended upon, and as for age—Frances never, to my knowledge, kept, another birthday. I really think she dated back to the day she lost her lover, and was ashamed of being so very young. Some of our young people laughed a good deal, at so old a bride, but a loud laugh does not always cover up wit, and a happy smile is worth hundreds of such crackling thorns, to my thinking, and Miles Middleton agrees with me.—Godey's Lady's Book.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Dorcas Magazine, a periodical devoted to the interest of women and the home, has completed its first year's work. Its pages are filled with plain directions for making an infinite variety of useful and decorative articles, and its aim is evidently not only to help women, to employ their time in a useful and pleasing manner, but also to be of service to those whom necessity compels to labor. There are thousands of women throughout the land supporting themselves by the aid of the crochet-hook and knitting needle, to whom the Dorcas is invaluable. The patterns given are selected with care and taste, and the working directions, which, by the way, are printed without abbreviation, are tested by an expert, to prevent mistakes. Knitting, netting, crochet-work, all kinds of embroidery, and artistic needle work are treated in its columns. Innumerable hints and suggestions, with regard to personal and home decoration are given, which may be enlarged indefinitely. The Dorcas has found an unoccupied field and is filling it in so satisfactory a manner that it is fast becoming a recognized authority on all matters pertaining to womanly handicraft. During its first year it gave double the value promised. Each number contains more technical matter than can be purchased separately for ten times its cost to subscribers, which is $1.00 per year.

Sample copies sent to any part in the United States or Canada, on receipt of 10 cents. Address, Dorcas, 872 Broadway, New York City. For sale by all newsdealers.

THE QUARREL.

BY M. D.

In the town of Winchester two little girls were born on the same hour of the same day. They were carried about on pillows by their nurses at the same time. They were severally christened Rose and Euphemia at the same font, and uttered their infant wails in unison during the ceremony.

They played in the adjoining gardens on the same pleasant summer afternoons as they grew older. They went to the same school at the same time, were confirmed on the same day, at the same hour, by the same clergyman. They were inseparable. Phemie vowed to love Rose next to Edward, and Rose vowed to love Phemie better than any one but William.

They were young, very pretty, and very happy; a pleasant sight to all eyes but those of a certain Miss Merrivale, who, having made marriage a business affair, and having failed to succeed therein, hated all girls who married for love, and, more especially, when they also happened to marry rich men.

In this case, having angled in vain for Edward Granger, his house, lands, carriage and servants, and all the worldly goods which he would endow a wife, she had seen him throw himself away on little Phemie Moore, who had refused him three times. She had also done all that in her lay to secure the affections of William Millet, who, if not as rich as Granger, was what she called a catch, and had the misery of seeing Rose Gay quietly walk away with him—a chit of a thing, as Miss Merrivale said, with no style about her. And they would ride in their carriages and wear velvets and diamonds, while for her nothing seemed left for her but a little stationer, half a head shorter than herself, who was the only one who had proposed.

The little money she had lived on was nearly gone. She was not so young as she was. Perpetual, forced smiles had creased wrinkles into her face. She was tired of angling without any nibble worth having.

In fact, Miss Merrivale felt that it was time to take thought for the future, and do the best she could for herself, and, like most women who have failed in matrimonial ventures, had resolved to marry if only to show that she could. And Timothy had actually made an offer. No wonder that she hated the brides; but it was not quite necessary in that case to "my love" and "my dear" them quite so much, or to kiss them quite so often; and she certainly kissed Mrs. Granger oftener than she did Mrs. Millett, though she hated her the most.

"You dear little thing!" said Miss Merrivale, pecking Mrs. Granger's cheek in the dressing room before the church sociable had fairly commenced. "Now I do like to see you all in white! I said to Mrs. Millett (6b the first), and asked her why she did not wear it; and she said she thought it was so affected for a bride to go about in white—almost indelicate."

"Dear me!" cried Mrs. Granger, "Phemie might have said that to me instead of behind my back. Such old friends as we are!"

"Yes," said Miss Merrivale. "Yes; and I was amazed at another remark she made, though I think I'd better not mention it."

"I want to hear it," said Rose, pouting. "I suppose marriage has changed Phemie, or she'd never say hateful things about me."

"It generally does change people sadly," said Miss Merrivale with a deep sigh. "I refused several gentlemen because of that very thought. What if it should change me to my dear, dear dear friends? And though I know some one perfectly insane about me, I keep putting it off. But, dear Mrs. Granger, I can't tell you this. I declare it's too bad."

"You must," said Rose, her eyes sparkling.

"Well," said Mrs. Merrivale, "just to show you how deceitful the world is, she said that she hoped no one ever said that she worked as hard to catch a husband as you did to catch yours."

"Phemie said that," cried Rose, "when she knows what a fib it is! To be sure, I didn't refuse him half a dozen times. Mr. Granger wouldn't have borne such treatment, and I don't believe Phemie refused Mr. Mr. Millet in a way to make him think she meant it. Some refusals only lead a man on. I try to catch a husband! Well, I declare!"

Then Rose, with her eyes full of tears, left the dressing-room, and Miss Merrivale waited for her other dear friend, Mrs. Millett.

She came at last.

"Has Rose come yet?" she asked, eagerly, as Miss Merrivale helped her off with her coat.

"Yes, love, she has," said Miss Merrivale; "and she's been saying such odd things. You have quarreled, haven't you?"

"No," said little Mrs. Millett. "Rose and I quarrel? I don't think we could."

"She's in a dreadful temper," said Miss Merrivale, "and such things as she said—quite abusive; that—but I mustn't make mischief."

"Oh, I want to know what it is," said Phemie. "I don't believe Rose could abuse me. Perhaps I've hurt her by not calling this week."

"Well," said Miss Merrivale, "she said marriage had changed you dreadfully, and that your were spiteful, and said things behind people's backs that you dared not say to your faces; and—I hate to tell, but it made my blood boil—that she was glad she never tried to lead a man on as you did your husband. I couldn't help crying out—oh, what a shame!"

"Why, I refused dear Ned three times before I accepted him," cried Phemie. "I did, indeed; she knows it."

"She says you boast of it, but she don't believe it," said Miss Merrivale.

"I've done with Rose Granger," said Phemie. "Whom can you trust? Oh, it's dreadful!"

"Indeed it is, dear; but only what you must expect in this world," sighed Miss Merrivale.

That evening the two brides did not speak to each other. That night each husband heard the story. The Grangers thenceforth cut the Millets—the Millets the Grangers. All the old school-girl vows were forgotten, and Miss Merrivale rejoiced in her contemptible bit of revenge. She married the small stationer, and even waited on Mrs. Granger and Mrs. Millet from behind the counter, but she was glad to see the ladies turn their backs on each other when they met in the store; and whenever she desired to give one of those pleasant digs so delightful to a spiteful woman to either of the now-separated friends, she did it under the guise of repeating an observation made by the other. So the feud grew and strengthened until the two women hated each other as only those who have once been friends can hate.

Meanwhile, the years flew by, and changed the girls to plump and substantial matrons—each had been blest with children—their eldest hopes both boys. Pretty little children, one ten years of age, the other eleven, who were forbidden, under penalty of maternal displeasure and paternal correction, to speak to, play or even look at each other.

But little Ned Granger and little Will Millet could scarcely help meeting, more especially when in winter time the skating pond tempted every boy in Winchester to its polished surface. On these cold days, when the ice is at his best, they, muffled in furs and tippets, often joined in the same little group, or went down the long pond hand in hand.

Often and often in after days the poor mother vainly wished that, whatever else they had permitted, they had forbidden this; for one day, when Winchester pond bore a less solid covering of ice than usual, these two children, their hands meeting in a forbidden clasp, flew gayly over the surface toward the little spot where, in the summer time, the water-lilies hid themselves. They never returned. When their long absence aroused alarm and search was made, the ice was found broken and there, amid the long frozen stems of last year's water-lilies, were found the two poor children, quite dead, their frozen hands still linked together as they had gone down.

Strangers forced their hands apart, but not before the mothers had seen them so clasped. It was a sight never to be forgotten.

There was grief in two households—and the children lay in their little graves, not far from each other, in the quiet cemetery.

And here, in the twilight of a spring day, Mrs. Granger went one day to weep over the sod that had begun to grow green above her boy. Long she sat, silently dropping her tears upon it, when the slow rustle of a woman's trailing dress fell on her ear. A lady, clad in such black garments as she wore herself, had passed her and fallen on her knees beside another grave not far away. It was Mrs. Millet. Rose's little Willie lay here; Phemie's little Eddie rested there. As they were brides together, married in the same church, so they were mourning mothers weeping over the graves of their first-born side by side, and a strange fate had united their children in their dying moments.

Rose felt borne away by a power over which she had no control. She arose and walked slowly to Phemie's side.

"Phemie," she said, "Eddie died with Willie's hand in his. Won't you give me yours once again?"

And Phemie rose and advanced a step; the next moment the women were in each other's arms.

They walked home together through the evening shadows, each with some tiny little flower, that had grown upon her child's grave, over her breast, within it those sweet thought that spring. Phœnix-like, from the ashes of love, when the kiss of reconciliation has fallen upon upon them. Thenceforth they were always friends.

Afterward, when time had softened their grief, they spoke of the past, and Miss Merrivale's treachery was made manifest, and all was explained. The stationer's wife knew that it was so, and ground her teeth as her lost customers passed by together; but she could do nothing.

Beside their children's graves the bereaved mothers had set the seal of forgiveness upon the quarrel of the brides.

OUT OF HIS ELEMENT.

The doctor entered a sick room.

"Oh, doctor," said the patient, "is that you?"

"Yes, George. How do you feel this morning?" inquired the physician.

"Oh, doctor, I have had such a delicious dream, such a sweet vision."

"What was it, George?"

"I thought I was in heaven, doctor, and there was no more pain, no more sorrow, no more sleepless nights. The birds sang as I had never heard them sing before; the trees bore the richest, rarest fruits; the grass was like velvet, threaded with silver, where the pleasant waters flowed; the air was a harmony of May and October, and there was over all the ineffable sweetness of rest and joy. It was life, and love, and hope, and—and——"

The patient put his hand to his head wearily.

"And I disturbed the dream?" asked the doctor.

"Yes, doctor; when I saw you, I knew it wasn't heaven; or if it was, that you were in the wrong house, and I awoke."

SOME NEW GEOGRAPHY.

Of what is the surface of the earth composed?

Of corner lots, mighty poor roads, railroad tracks, baseball grounds, cricket fields and skating rinks.

What proportion of the globe is water?

About three-fourths. Sometimes they add a little gin and nutmeg to it.

What is a town?

A town is a considerable collection of houses and inhabitants, with four or five men who "run the party" and lend money at fifteen per cent. interest.

What is a city?

A city is an incorporated town, with a mayor who believes the whole world shakes when he happens to fall flat on a crosswalk.

What is commerce?

Borrowing five dollars for a day or two and dodging the lender for a year or two.

Name the different races?

Into how many classes is mankind divided?

Seven—Enlightened, civilized, half-civilized, savage, too utter, not worth a cent and Indian agents.

What nations are called enlightened?

Those which have the most wars and the worst laws, and produce the most criminals.

How many motions has the earth?

That's according to how you mix your drinks and which way you go home.

What is the earth's axis?

The lines passing between New York and San Francisco.

What causes day and night?

Day is caused by night getting tired out. Night is caused by everybody taking the street cars and going home to supper.

What is a map?

A map is a drawing to show the jury where Smith stood when Jones gave him a lift under the eye.

What is a mariner's compass?

A jug holding four gallons.

A NEW CRUSADE.

From the New York Times.

There is something very strange in the sudden hostility displayed by ministers to roller skating. The other day a Methodist minister of Long Island denounced roller skating from the pulpit and now an association of Presbyterian ministers in Pittsburg has lifted up its voice against the same popular sport. Evidently a crusade against the rink has begun, and Methodist and Presbyterian ministers have joined their forces to rescue their flocks from this new and destructive vice.

Hitherto nobody has dreamed that skating on ice is immoral. It was one of the few sports which were permitted by the New England Puritans and ministers when denouncing warm and comfortable amusements such as can be had in the theatre or the opera house, have often upheld by way of contrast the healthful and freezing sport of skating. Roller skating is not sufficiently unlike skating on ice to entitle the one to be regarded as a vice while the other is praised as a virtue. The roller skater can fall as often and bruise himself as severely as can the skater on a frozen pond. The physical exercise which the one sport affords is precisely the same as that afforded by the other. Ordinarily the rink is warmer than the pond, but this is, to the casual observer, the only material difference in skating in a rink and skating on a pond.

The Long Island minister claimed that roller skating is a dangerous rival to the churches. He said that he had been "trying to get up a revival," but that it was a hopeless task so long as the rinks remained open. Most Methodists regard a genuine revival as a purely supernatural work, and surely no Methodist minister can seriously hold that the intentions of Divine Providence can be thwarted by opening a rink. If, however, this is not what the Long Island minister meant, what did he mean? If he really knew what he meant he might do well to explain it.

Both the Long Island Methodists and the Pittsburg Presbyterians assert that the exercise of roller skating is very injurious to the health of girls. Let us assume, for the sake of argument, that it is, although there is as yet no proof of the alleged fact. Because a certain amusement or occupation may injure the health of delicate women it does not follow that ministers are called upon to denounce it from the pulpit. There are those who believe that it is injurious to women to use a sewing machine, but no Presbyterian has ever warned Presbyterians that the sewing machine is an unhallowed thing which they must not touch. Garters are alleged by many presumably intelligent physicians to be a source of injury to the wearer, but no Methodist minister has thought it worth while to preach a sermon against garters. Girls have frequently been drowned while on boating excursions, but abstinence from boating has yet to be made a condition of membership in any denomination. Those amusements and occupations which are either wrong per se, or which exercise an influence hostile to religion, are properly the subjects of pulpit denunciation, but can roller skating be honestly classed among them? We must then either assume that Methodist and Presbyterian ministers are exceeding what has hitherto been supposed to be their duty or that roller skating and religion are essentially incompatible.

It is not possible that ministers believe that roller skating leads to drunkenness. It used to be a favorite theory of the pulpit that every man who went to the theatre drank whiskey at intervals all through the play, but the fact that so small a proportion of plays are original American comedies which cannot be witnessed without the help of stimulants has finally convinced the ministers that their theory was erroneous. The extreme difficulty with which a sober man can preserve his balance on roller skates renders it certain that drunken men do not practice roller skating. The sport may lead to an undue consumption of ice water, but it cannot lead to indulgence in ardent spirits.

Why, then, have ministers warned their people that roller skating is an unlawful sport? This is a profound and apparently impenetrable mystery. No theory that can be formed will explain it, and we must wait for the explanation which, of course, the ministers will have no difficulty in making. It is possible that the former attitude of ministers toward the circus and the menagerie may throw a feeble gleam of light on the matter. They pronounced the menagerie, which was an exhibition of wild beasts, a lawful amusement on the ground that wild beasts were mentioned in the Scriptures. They pronounced the circus, which was an exhibition of tamed beasts, unlawful, doubtless for the reason that trick mules are not mentioned in Holy Writ. May they not approve of skating on ice because ice is mentioned in the Scriptures, and disapprove of skating in a rink because the latter was unknown to any Biblical writer? There may be something in this; but it must be confessed that it does not furnish anything like a satisfactory explanation of ministerial hostility to the skating rink.

THE BENEVOLENT PACKER FAMILY.

Following the example of her father, the late Hon. Asa Packer, Miss Mary Packer has just donated the elegant Packer mansion at Sayre for hospital purposes, to be used in caring for persons injured along the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. As this family is known for not doing things by halves, and has abundance of wealth to gratify every charitable disposition, it is probable that the institution will be endowed with sufficient means to carry out a most praiseworthy scheme. With the Leigh University and Packer Institute at Bethlehem, the church charities at Mauch Chunk, the Sayre Hospital, and an entire valley for more than a hundred miles beautified and enriched, the Packer family have builded a monument in the hearts and memory of the people which will last longer than those of stone or brass.

David and Giles Richards were born in Madison, Madison county, and were separated when young, according to the Syracuse Journal, Giles being "bound out" at eleven years of age for a term of years, and David remaining at home. On arrival to manhood Giles Richards made his home in Salisbury, Herkimer county, where he has lived for the past thirty-six years. David Richards has lived in the vicinity of Delphi many years, and is now blind and in feeble health. Recently Giles visited Madison, and hearing that his brother David resided in Delphi, he immediately went there and visited his brother, and for three days the brothers passed some of the happiest hours of their lives. David Richards, being blind, identified Giles by a scar on the side of his face, which was made by a rooster when he was about two years old.

WASHINGTON.

The approaching anniversary of the birth of Washington, the most illustrious American that ever lived, unfolds thought intimately allied with the glory and prosperity of the land in which we dwell.

The memory of Washington cannot be too zealously honored, nor can his patriotic example be too often urged for imitation upon his countrymen.

With Washington public office was in reality a sacred trust, ever to be administered for the public good.

No personal ambition swayed his actions, no pecuniary gain for a moment lured him from the straight line of rectitude.

Patriotism was his guiding star throughout an eventful life.

He merged self into the noble purpose of faithfully discharging duty.

He valued truth as a pearl of great price and practical honesty as a binding obligation.

With world-wide acclaim he is termed the ILLUSTRIOUS.

Honor the memory of WASHINGTON.

UNSOUND POLICY.

For twenty years and more the policy of the ruling powers in this country has been to raise airy bubbles, to create artificial values and deceptive prosperity, to engender wild speculation, and to feed the merciless greed of favored monopolists.

That, we assert, has steadily been the policy of the party opposed to Democracy, and the evil results of which are now plainly visible in deadened enterprises, uncertain and profitless business, decreasing wages and unemployed workingmen, high cost of life's necessities, and the building up of a class of privileged nabobs who flaunt in the face of honest industry ill-gotten fortunes of ten, twenty, fifty and even a hundred million dollars.

There is not a particle of genuine prosperity or business integrity in such a condition of affairs.

It is full of demoralization and pilfering wrong.

It is unsound from top to bottom, and the sooner the hand of reform forces it out of existence, happier and richer will be the toiling masses and more permanent and productive their varied employments.

We hold to the well considered and before expressed opinion—

That the reliable wealth of a country consists not in overgrown speculative fortunes, but in a free and equitable opportunity for all the people to earn and securely enjoy the fruits of legitimate thrift and industry.

We want to see a land teeming with independent property owners, possessing fortunes, however moderate, accumulated by honest labor, not through gambling options, watered stocks or cornered grain.

We need laws to protect the smallest trader and the humblest laborer on a par with the greatest capitalist.

We long for the time when business transactions of all kinds shall be based solely upon the just law of supply, demand, and actual delivery, and cease to be manipulated for sordid gain by speculating jugglers and monied cormorants.

Give every man an equal chance to prosper and the door to general prosperity will be at once unlocked.

There is no other way.

Glittering brass is not gold.

AN AWFUL REVELATION.

There is distress in Pennsylvania—sore anxiety and trouble.

A new revelation has startled the subsidized patriots of that old Commonwealth, which even the panacea of prohibition duties on iron and coal cannot remedy.

Pennsylvania babies cry for exclusive protection, young men there vow it to be genuine loyalty, and old men can see wisdom only in a high protective tariff on the products of Pennsylvania—naught else.

To the average Pennsylvanian the iron and coal of his State is the beginning and end of wordly wealth, it is his food, drink and raiment, and to compel all outside barbarians to pay tribute to Pennsylvania for the privilege, the glorious privilege of using her produced iron and coal at artificial prices, without a murmur, is the very essence of American freedom.

But, as we said before, a new and unexpected revelation has dawned. Babies now shriek, young men rave, and old men think the end of the world draws nigh.

There is a State in the American Union called Alabama, the Indian word for "Here we rest."

Alabama is rich in inexhaustible mines of iron and coal of the most superior quality. A fertile soil and favoring climate renders her a realm for good and cheap living. Abundant water and other natural facilities, together with rail transportation, places in the hands of her people a power mightier than all the tariffs on earth monopoly engineered.

The people of Alabama care not a stiver for Congressional protection.

Nature furnishes a better shield.

They are attending to their own legitimate business and are satisfied with honest gains.

They can dig iron ore and manufacture iron products and sell them at a fair profit, for less money than Pennsylvanians, under their present vicious system, can possibly do, and even less than England.

There opens the awful revelation.

What must Pennsylvania do?

Against England and other foreign nations she has the weapon of a prohibitory tariff, but against Alabama that is a broken reed.

She may endeavor to secede from the Union and build a Chinese wall around her sacred soil, but Alabama will fight to keep her in the Union.

What can she do?

Nothing, unless she petitions Congress to make it a penal offense, subject to fine and imprisonment, for any man to purchase pig iron at less than $25 a ton or steel rails at less than $75.

Which would be about as just and sensible as making war taxes operative in time of peace.

It is announced that the Hocking Valley strike has ended and the miners are resuming work.

The total export of anthracite coal from the United States last year amounted to 649,040 tons, valued at $3,053,550, or about $4.70 a ton. There seems to be no reason why this trade should not be largely increased.

INAUGURAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The arrangements for the approaching inauguration of President-elect Cleveland are in a forward state. The details of the ceremonies which have been in the hands of sub-committees of the Inauguration Committee have nearly all been perfected, and contracts for work that is to be done have been awarded. The inauguration parade will be under the marshalship of Gen. H. W. Slocum, of New York, who has appointed Gen. Albert Ordway, chief of Ordnance, as Chief of Staff for the day, and Gen. Earle as Marshal of the Military Division of the parade. The order of the procession will not be made public until the day before the 4th of March, in order that all organizations desirous of participating may be placed properly. Work is progressing on the roof for the ball-room, which is the spacious courtyard of the new Pension Building, adapted for the purpose of this ball. This improvised ball-room will be 316 feet long by 116 feet wide, and will be elaborately decorated. The Germania Orchestra, of Philadelphia, 100 pieces, will furnish the dance music, and the Marine Band will supply that for promenading. Tickets of admission to the ball, admitting one person, will cost $5, and $1 per individual will be charged for supper. There will be an illumination of the principal streets at night, and a display of fireworks on a large scale.

THE LEGISLATURE.

TRENTON, Feb. 18.—An important matter over which members of the Legislature may cogitate during the recess for the rest of the week is the opinion of the Attorney-General, transmitted to-day, concerning the bill increasing the time commutation of prisoners confined in the State prison. The commutation proposed by the bill would have let loose about 300 of the 800 convicts, but its objective point was the release of big bank and other officials. It was thought at first that as the bank men are United States prisoners their terms could not be affected by a State law, but United States Judge Nixon says that they would have been shortened by the passage of the bill, and he, with the Judges of the State courts, was indignant at the interference the bill proposed. A few days ago it was referred to the Attorney-General for his opinion. He now advises the Legislature that they have no constitutional right to pass such an act.

This morning the Senate confirmed the nomination by the Governor of Andrew Kirkpatrick as Law Judge of the Essex County Court of Common Pleas in place of Judge Ludlow McCarter, and of John W. Westcott as Law Judge of the Camden County Court of Common Pleas, to succeed Judge Reed, who died a few days ago. The appointment of Kirkpatrick has created a good deal of political feeling. Judge McCarter is one of the severest Judges in the State. Mr. Kirkpatrick, who is to succeed him, is or was the young law partner of ex-Judge Frederick H. Teese.

The Five Per Cent. bill was aired in the House this morning. It had been passed to a third reading, and Mr. Parker, of Newark, wanted it put back on a second reading, so as to amend it. He had no objection to making 5 per cent. the legal rate if the act permitted special contracts for larger rates. Homestead and building associations, he said, would be injuriously affected by a reduction of the rate below 6 per cent.; and the borrower, to whom money is worth more than 5 per cent., should not be entirely ignored. Mr. Wolverton preferred to have the bill stay where it was, but the House reconsidered it, and afterward substituted for it a bill of Mr. Parker's making 5 per cent. the legal rate, but permitting special contracts up to 6 per cent.

Among the bills introduced were one by Mr. Corbin, of Union, creating a State Council of Labor, to consist of the Governor, State Supervisor of Labor, State Board of Health, and four persons to be appointed in joint meeting; one by Senator Cranmer limiting the time within which public defaulters may be prosecuted; one by Senator Fish, that the Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four associates, and by Mr. Dickinson pensioning firemen in Jersey City.

Among the bills passed by the House was that abolishing the office of Director at Large in Hudson county. The Senate passed a bill for a commission to fix the boundary line between New York and New Jersey in Raritan Bay.

The constitutional prohibition measure came up on final passage in the Senate Tuesday morning. Senator Griggs opposed it. He did not believe the advocates of the measure were honest. The Prohibitionists were men aspiring for notoriety. The Senators should be honest. They should not dodge behind "constitutional amendments" in order to please temperance people and liquor men at the same time. There was no need of trying to put the matter in a shape that was hypocritical.

Senator Carpenter was willing the Republicans should fight the temperance question out among themselves. They seemed to be divided into two wings. He would oppose the bill because he didn't think the people wanted it.

Senator Chattle said he was opposed by Prohibitionists. Therefore he could hardly be classed with the much despised party.

The bill was then passed by a vote of 11 to 9. The vote was as follows: Ayes—Chattle, Cranmer, Gardner, Herring, W. R. Miller, W. W. Miller, Nichols, Pancoast, Schenck, Thompson and Vanderbilt. Nays—Brinkerhoff, Carpenter, Cochran, Fish, Griggs, Livingston, Moon, Smith and Youngblood. Not voting—E. Miller.

On Tuesday Senator Livingston introduced bill No. 107, to prevent tramps from wearing badges of the Grand Army of the Republic, not being members, under a penalty of $25 or 30 days imprisonment in County Jail.

The New York World reports 75,000 idle workingmen and women in that city in consequence of over-production and over-speculation. That prominent journal calls for a solution of the problem of over-production from our statesmen and philosophers.

* * *

When the 5 per cent. interest bill came up on Tuesday, in the House, Mr. Kirkner offered an amendment, the effect of which was to do away entirely with any legal rate of interest. He advocated its adoption. The amendment, however, was lost and the bill went to a third reading.

Francis A. Drexel, senior member of the firm of Drexel Bros., the great bankers, died at his home in Philadelphia last Sunday.

Silver production is on the whole increasing and not declining in this country, despite the fact that many of the mines have virtually ceased production. Others are more than making up for it. It cannot be true, therefore, that the silver question will settle itself by the reduced production and consequent enhanced value of the metal. The $2,000,000 a month coinage monstrosity must be met and defeated in Congress, if it is desired to prevent a financial panic which will put gold at a premium, with business consequences which no man can safely predict.

A Card.

I hereby return my thanks to the Germania Insurance Company of New York, and Isaac Brokaw of North Plainfield, their agent, for the prompt and liberal adjustment of my loss by the fire of Feb. 10, 1885, and the payment of my claim.

JOHN A. BENNER.

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 18, 1885.

Change of Base.

Mr. S. C. Lilienstern, the well-known Front street Clothier, has disposed of his business to Messrs. Schwed Bros., of Somerville, who will hereafter continue the ready-made clothing and gents' furnishing business at the old stand. Mr. Lilienstern, for the present, will fill all orders for first-class merchant tailoring at his residence, No. 90 East Front street, where he will be pleased to receive a call from his friends and from customers. Mr. L. intends to resume business shortly in New York city.

Price of A Cow's Tail.

Over in Somerset county the other day, a 'Squire's jury settled the value of a cow's tail when removed from the animal alive. A bad boy figures in the case. He is Horace Coddington, whose father undertook to pasture Charles F. Hains' cow along with his own. One day while Horace was driving the bovines home from pasture, he thought it would be lots of fun to tie the tail of the Hains' cow to the tail of his father's cow. The joke was carried out and then the cows began to kick. Finally, the Coddington cow ran away with her own tail and the tail of the Hains' cow. The case, which had been in the courts a year, was finally decided last week when the jury gave Hains a verdict for $10.

New Jersey's Mineral Display.

Commissioner C. H. Barney, in his report of the New Jersey exhibit at the New Orleans Exposition, says: The front of the New Jersey exhibit is separated from the main aisle by an ornamental railing of scroll work, painted white and ornamented with blue and gold, which is the case with all our railing, pavilions, cornices, etc. Passing this railing will be found sixteen cases containing the collection of the State Geological Survey, over $1,000 specimens prepared by Prof. Geo. H. Cook, and arranged in this exhibit by Mr. Fred A. Canfield, of Dover. The specimens of minerals and ores are greater in variety than those of any State in the building, and are supplemented by several valuable maps. Samples of the building stones of the State are next shown, with the faces differently dressed.

The World's Industrial and Cotton Exposition.

With the approval of His Excellency the Governor, the "New Jersey State Day" at the World's Exposition has been changed from February 10th to March 25th, 1885. It was found impossible to secure the attendance of the Governor and other State officials on the first-named date, and the postponement is made in order to give ample time for preparation for a fitting celebration of the day, in which it is hoped many visitors from this State will participate. The Exposition is now in excellent condition, the weather is becoming delightful, and visitors from this section will find the months of February, March and April most delightful ones in which to pay it a visit. Visitors from New Jersey are invited to register at the State Headquarters, to receive and answer their mail at that place, and generally to make themselves at home there. Letters addressed to any one at "New Jersey Headquarters, Exposition Grounds, New Orleans, La.," will be retained at the State Post-Office until called for by the owner, and visitors, unless they have secured permanent quarters in advance, will probably find it advantageous to have their mail matter so directed. The Commissioner will be glad to furnish any desired information to intending visitors, as to routes, board or lodging, etc., etc., on application by mail either to the Jersey City office or to his New Orleans address.

C. H. BARNEY, Com'r for N. J.

The M. E. Conference.

The M. E. church conference will be held next month at Nyack. The pastors who are serving their third year, and under the rule will be appointed to new pastorates, are as follows:

Elizabeth district—J. H. Timbrell, Bloomsbury; S. D. Decker, Clinton; J. R. Bryan, Fulton street, Elizabeth; S. B. Rooney, Flemington; I. N. Vansant, Frenchtown; T. E. Gordon, Second church, Rahway; H. M. Simpson, Roseville; W. V. Kath, St. Paul's, Staten Island.

Paterson district—John Faull, Flanders, and Deckertown; A. L. Wilson, Mount Hermon; W. B. Wigg, Grace church, Paterson; J. S. Gilbert, Paterson avenue, Paterson; J. B. Mathias, Port Oiden; J. H. Egbert, Tranquility; W. H. Haggerty, Vienna.

Newark district—F. A. Mason, Bernardsville; D. B. Lowrie, Bloomfield; S. D. Jones, Chatham; T. H. Jacobus, Franklin; J. F. Andrews, Irvington; J. B. Faulks, Morristown; S. N. Bebout, Franklin street, Newark; J. W. Marshall, Roseville; W. H. Coffee, St. John's, Newark; D. Halleron, Trinity, Newark; N. Vansant, New Providence; E. O. Howland, Parsippany and Whippany; S. Seargeant, South Orange; Jeremiah Collins, Watsessing.

Jersey City district—C. S. Woodruff, Bayonne; R. Harcourt, Haverstraw; Wm. Day, First church, Hoboken; J. A. Gutteridge, Grace church, Jersey City; C. F. Hull, Rockland Lake, J. W. Young, Spring Valley.

LITERARY NOTES.

In addition to the articles on the engagement between the "Monitor" and the "Merrimac," written by officers of both vessels, which are to appear in the March number of The Century, Captain Ericsson is writing a paper to be printed in an early number of the same magazine, making record of the circumstances attending the invention of the "Monitor," and treating also of the engagement in Hampton Roads.

Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka begins in the March St. Nicholas a series of illustrated articles describing the sports and occupations of the Eskimo boys and girls, under the general title of "The Children of the Cold." This number will contain the second installment of E. P. Roe's new serial story, "Driven Back to Eden," and in the "Recollections of a Boy-page in the U. S. Senate" a timely account of the inaugurations of Presidents Grant and Garfield, with several illustrations, and the story of the ceremony of the first inauguration of George Washington.

FREEHOLDER'S PROCEEDINGS.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 5, 1885.

Regular meeting of the board, held Thursday, Feb. 5, 1885, at 2 p. m.

Present—Freeholders Belmer, Bauer, Chapman, Doty, Donahue, Debbie, Etheridge, Hubbard, Howard, Pierson, Roll, Thompson, Vanderbeek—13.

Absent—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Isemann and Oliver—4.

In the absence of the director the board was called to order by the clerk.

Freeholder Chapman moved that Freeholder Hubbard be elected director, pro tem.

Which was carried.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid), and, on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from Director Martine in reference to better accommodations for the grand jury and witnesses, and suggesting that "the building committee be authorized to see what can be done in the matter, making a rough draft, and report the probable cost, that the next board may take action as they deem best," was read.

On motion, received and referred to the committee on public buildings.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From Lunacy committee:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—Your committee on lunacy, etc., herewith submit the bonds taken by them in the case of Edwin T. Moore and Mrs. Thompson.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN J. DONAHUE,
JOHN D. BELMER,
JAMES T. PIERSON,
Committee.

On motion, received and ordered on file, together with the two accompanying bonds.

The committee on lunacy presented a report in the matter of the collection of the amounts due the county upon the lunacy bonds given in the cases of Bertis and Amermand.

After considerable discussion the report was, on motion of Freeholder Debbie, referred back to the committee for amendment.

Freeholder Pierson moved that the board take a recess of fifteen minutes, which was carried.

After recess the board reassembled, the following members being present: Freeholders Belmer, Bauer, Chapman, Doty, Donahue, Debbie, Etheridge, Hubbard, Howard, Pierson, Roll, Thompson, Vanderbeek—13.

Absent—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Isemann and Oliver.

Freeholder Hubbard in the chair.

The report of the lunacy committee, as amended, was read, as follows:

ELIZABETH, Feb. 5, 1885.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—At our last meeting your committee instructed the county attorney to take the necessary steps towards the collection of the amounts due the county upon the lunacy bonds given in the case of —— Bertis and L. C. Amermann. In the Bertis case the amount due has been paid by the bondsmen, and we have the county attorney's check for the same—$64 87.

In the Amermann case suit has been commenced against Messrs. Amermann and Irving, the bondsmen; they have made an offer to us to pay the sum of $125 (one-half the penalty of the bond) in full settlement; the amount actually due for board up to Aug. 15, 1884, is $254 50. After consideration of the circumstances in this case we have decided to recommend that the offer be accepted, provided, the cost of suit incurred to date be also paid; and further provided that the patient be removed from the asylum and the county relieved of all liability by the 1st of May, 1885, the said amount to be paid at once and the bond surrendered when the said patient is removed.

JOHN J. DONAHUE,
J. D. BELMER,
JAMES T. PIERSON,
Committee on Lunacy.

Freeholder Thompson moved that the report be received and placed on file and the recommendation of the committee adopted.

Which was agreed to by the following vote:

Affirmative—Freeholders Belmer, Bauer, Chapman, Donahue, Etheridge, Howard, Pierson, Roll, Thompson, Vanderbeek—10.

Negative—Freeholders Doty, Debbie, Hubbard.

Absent—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Isemann, Oliver.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Hubbard:

Resolved, That the county collector be authorized to pay the Penn. Bridge Co. three hundred dollars in full for one-half of contract and extras on Farragut avenue bridge, Plainfield, when bill for same has been accepted and audited by the committee having charge of the work.

On motion, adopted by a unanimous vote:

By Freeholder Debbie:

Resolved, That the county collector pay the sheriff the petit jury bill for January term, 1885, when duly audited, the amount not to exceed $1,300

On motion, adopted by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Vanderbeek:

Resolved, That the jail bills for January, amounting to $329, be paid when properly audited.

On motion, adopted by a unanimous vote.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Samuel D. Winters is establishing another milk route in our town.

Mr. Joseph N. Randolph, our new harness maker is confined to his residence at North Plainfield by illness.

Joel Moffett has rented the Newman house on Elmer street and expects to occupy it about April first.

The village improvement committee are still in need of funds to meet their expenses in lighting the street lamps of our town.

The name of the newspaper shortly to be issued in our town is the Westfield Telegraph. Edward Baumgard, editor and proprietor. It is to be issued every Saturday.

The following letters remain uncalled for in the post office for the first two weeks of February: J. B. Crawford, Genevefer Scherf, Maggie E. Curtis, Mrs. Annie Williams.

On Sunday night last a portion of the Presbyterian church sheds were blown down by the high wind then raging. The roof of the sheds were carried some distance into an adjoining lot.

At a special meeting held by H. & L. Co., No. 1, Tuesday evening last, Samuel Godshalk received the nomination of the company as their candidate for Chief and A. Z. Chambers, for that of second assistant engineer.

Mary A. S. Baker, wife of Henry Baker, aged eighty-four years, died of pneumonia at her residence on Central avenue on Feb. 12th. The funeral services were held on Monday last. Interment in the family plot in the Presbyterian church yard.

The renowned temperance orator, Jno. B. Gough, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in the Presbyterian church on Thursday evening Feb. 26. The sale of tickets has already commenced and from the number now sold any persons waiting until the day of the lecture will get left with standing room only.

At a meeting of the Westfield fire department held on Friday evening, Feb. 13th, a call was issued for a special election for Chief and second assistant engineer, there being a failure to elect persons to fill these officers at the annual election held Feb. 10th, inst. The time for the special election was fixed for Wednesday, March 11th, between the hours of seven and nine in the evening.

On Saturday last the six Surveyors of Highway appointed by the Court for the purpose of laying out a public road on the side of the first mountain met at the Westfield Hotel and organized. Coaches conveyed them to the beginning point of the proposed road and they walked the entire length and viewed the same thoroughly after which they returned to the Hotel and voted unanimously to lay the road, assessing the damages and benefits equally upon the owners of lands taken for the road, except in the case of land of Amos Clark, jr, for which they gave Mr. Clark twenty-five dollars damages, over and above the benefits to him in having the road laid across his land. This road, as laid by the surveyors, makes a very easy ascent up the mountain, avoiding the present very steep rise in the old mountain road.

The ninety-first annual financial statement of Westfield township has been published in neat pamphlet form, copies of which can be had of our Town Clerk. It should be read by every one of our residents by and taxpayers. The statement shows our township in a good and sound financial condition, unlike a number of the townships in our county. Westfield is free from debt, every bill paid and the rate of taxation as low as any town along the line of the P. & R. railroad. The following is a brief synopsis of the report:

An Old Soldier's
EXPERIENCE.
"Calvert, Texas,
May 3, 1882.
"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
as a cough remedy.
"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."
Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

THE spring elections will soon demand the patriotic devotions of the residents of our townships.

THE presses of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office have been kept busy the past week printing township reports.

SUNDAY last sleighs were in demand at our livery stables, the proprietors of which institutions did a paying business.

IF the weather is stormy or very cold on Monday, the sale of the lots of the S. L. Platt estate will be held at Laing's Hall.

THE next time "Gep" goes to cutting up his "monkey shines" he will get more than beans on his head. So says "Vandy."

AUCTION sale of furniture and housekeeping articles, at 54 W. Second street, Tuesday next, 24th inst. See advertisement in another column.

ON Wednesday of last week one brakeman on each passenger train on the Bound Brook road was discharged by the Philadelphia and Reading management.

THE State of New Jersey pays one dollar per week for each patient confined in the lunatic asylums. Last year the Morris Plains Asylum received $27,000 from this source.

ASSEMBLYMAN VETTERLEIN, of Somerset county, last Friday introduced a bill into the House "to authorize the formation of street railway corporations and regulate the same."

WE doubt if the "oldest inhabitant" can recall to mind any more variable changes of weather than has been experienced the past week. Snow one day—very cold. Rain next day—very mild.

THERE was a large attendance at the variety entertainment given in St. Mary's Hall last Thursday evening, Feb. 12th, under the auspices of the T. A. B. Society, the occasion being a most enjoyable one.

IT is said that for every fog in February we will have a frost in May, and therefore if you want to know just how many frosts May will bring you want to keep the record of the fogs of the present month.

THOSE desiring to procure genuine needles, attachments, etc., of the celebrated Wilcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine, will find them at the Florist establishment of Miss A. E. Lincoln, on North avenue.

THE attention of those desiring the services of competent civil engineers and surveyors, is directed to the advertisement of Earl & Jacques, in another column of this issue. They are thoroughly competent and reliable.

CHIEF CARNEY and Assistants Smith and Saltzman were photographed by Langhorne last week. It is understood that their handsome "phizes" will not be distorted by attempted fac similes produced from cheap wood-cut engravings.

ELMER COMPTON, an old and highly esteemed resident of Woodbridge township, Middlesex county, died suddenly at his home on Friday, Feb. 13th. He was sixty-four years of age and had been overseer of the poor for his township for many years.

ASSEMBLYMAN KIRKNER of this District, has introduced into the Legislature "an act making it lawful for the governing body of any city to transfer and carry forward by ordinance any unexpended balances of taxes that have been levied for any purpose, and appropriate the same to the payment, in subsequent years, of expenses for objects similar to those for which such taxes were levied, or for the payment of any other expense for which tax is levied; the amount and object to be stated."

LAST Friday morning about two o'clock one of our policemen found a horse attached to a buggy walking through Front street without a driver. The animal was taken to Robert's livery stables, where every care was given him. The next day it appeared that the horse and buggy belonged to Mr. George Little, of Bound Brook. That gentleman is connected with a telegraph company. The afternoon previous, he had alighted from the vehicle near Springfield, to make necessary repairs to one of the lines in that vicinity, when the animal suddenly started and ran away. He was traced to Cranford and Westfield, and finally to Plainfield, where the owner recovered him the next day, glad that the turn-out had fallen into such good hands.

THE many commuters of this city and patrons of the P. & R. railroad will hereafter miss from his post the genial countenance and robust form of police officer George Archer, at the West street crossing, foot of Liberty street, New York. Mr. Archer, after twenty-five years of active police service, nineteen years of which has been at the Liberty street station, has been retired by the Police Commissioners on $600 a year. He will hereafter be found in the employ of the Standard Oil Company on Broadway. Mr. James Humphrey, an efficient officer, succeeds him at Liberty street. Mr. Archer has many warm friends in Plainfield who congratulate him upon his retirement with honors, and trust he may be successful in his new position. George is a member in high standing in the great tribe of Pottowatomies, whose numbers are legion.

THROUGH the enterprise and genius of Major J. C. Paul, General Manager of the Woodruff Sleeping and Parlor Coach Company, the midnight train from New York on and after Sunday evening last will have attached one of the new combination cars. These cars are of entirely novel design, being a combination of the sleeping, parlor and reclining chair car. The outside appearance is that of an ordinary sleeping car painted a rich seal brown. Within, at the rear of the car, are the ladies' lavatory, the heater and the linen closet. Next to this is the drawing room, containing twelve reclining chairs of an entirely novel pattern, the pillow and seat adjusting themselves automatically with the movement of the back. Beyond is the sleeping apartment, containing four double sections, and at the end of this apartment a handsome buffet. A large smoking room and wash room at the far end of the car complete the outfit. These cars are specially gotten up to accommodate the short ride passengers, and as the special duty of the attendant will be to awaken passengers at the proper time, the commuters on our road will be enabled to take a comfortable nap without the anxiety of being carried by the station.

UNVEILING of the Washington monument on next Monday at Washington, D. C.

THERE were not as many valentines passed through the Postoffice this year as in former years.

A PAIR of gold eye glasses were found at the Opera House last Tuesday evening. The owner will find them with Mr. Mattox, the "property man."

TIME table cards printed accurately and at short notice at this office. Merchants can secure a good advertising medium by the use of such cards.

THE latest style of engagement ring represents a square lump of sugar of chased gold with a heart beside it. Most girls would rather have sweetheart spoiled with a solitaire diamond.

THE winter meeting of the Newark Conference of Congregational churches will be held in the Congregational church of Plainfield, N. J., Thursday, February 26th, 1885.

IT is announced that Denman Thompson will appear at Music Hall as "Joshua Whitcomb," Feb. 28th. Sale of tickets begin Feb. 25th at Reynolds' and Shaw's drug stores.

THE young men of Mr. Squire's Bible Class, Crescent avenue church, have secured the Rev. Mr. Riggs to deliver his most interesting and instructive lecture on the Sepoy Rebellion in India, introducing a vivid description of the Siege of Lucknow.

THE Plainfield Billiard Parlor, No. 30 W. Front street, is now under the management and proprietorship of Messrs. Harris & Voehl, two young men capable to cater to the wants of the billiard loving fraternity. No intoxicating drinks are allowed on the premises.

MANER and English, the great temperance reformers, will visit Plainfield on Sunday, Feb. 22d, appearing at the First Baptist church that evening. Monday Afternoon, Feb. 23d, they will appear at the Reform Club Rooms and the same evening at the First Baptist church.

THE SCHWED BROS., purchasers of Lilienstern's clothing store, are well-known merchants of Somerville, having been engaged in business there for ten years past. Without doubt, our generous public will accord them the liberal patronage they deserve. Their advertisement appears in another column.

MR. MICHAEL UHDAL presents his card to our readers in this week's issue. Mr. Uhdal is a competent person to engage when one wants landscape or other grading done in a proper manner. He has had long experience and can produce recommendations from prominent citizens who appreciate his good work.

THE Philadelphia & Reading Railroad management seem determined to "reduce expenses." Their latest move is to discharge a large number of brakemen, cut down the wages of employees, even to the scrub women, and then stop all advertising. The latter item will probably reduce expenses at least $500. Wonderful management.

CHARLES IANSON, general repairer and carpenter on the P. & R. Railroad, Central division, for the past 31 years, has been discharged from employment by reason of the recent sudden "reduction of expenses" by the P. & R. road. Mr. Ianson is a resident of East Third street, and has been a faithful worker for the railroad company.

MRS. JENNIE B. ATWOOD, Provisional President of the Women's Relief Corps of New Jersey, accompanied by the staff officers, visited Branchport, N. J., last Monday evening and instituted J. B. Morris Relief Corp, numbering 40 charter members, auxiliary to the G. A. R. Next week there will be a large corps instituted in Paterson.

ASSESSOR Isaac Brokaw, made two sales of North Plainfield real estate the past week, one being the house and lot belonging to the Dunham estate, situated on Grove street, to a Mr. Mooney of this city, and the other the French roof house on Manning avenue, belonging to the Dime Savings Institution, adjoining P. E. See's property, to Mr. Garret Dolliver.

THOSE who were so fortunate as to attend the calico social given by the Plainfield Saengerbund, at their rooms, corner of Park and North avenues last Monday evening, speak in the highest terms of the festivities enjoyed on the occasion. Prof. Franz furnished excellent music, and it was not until the small hours of morning that the delighted participants in the festivities of the occasion departed for their homes.

LAST Wednesday morning, as Mr. R. W. Anderson, a resident of Washington Valley, was driving his team through Somerset street, toward Plainfield, the reins broke, and the horses, becoming frightened, ran away, throwing Mr. A. to the ground and breaking his leg. The unfortunate man was taken into Mr. Hudson's residence, and Dr. Long summoned, who attended to his injuries, after which he was conveyed to his home. The horses were captured before running far.

THE following officers were elected at the recent annual encampment of the State Department of the Grand Army of the Republic held at Trenton: Commander, Henry M. Nevius, of Red Bank; Senior Vice-Commander, Wm. H. Miller, of Camden; Junior Vice-Commander, S. N. Rockhill, of Bordentown; Medical Director, W. E. Mattison, of Plainfield; Chaplain, Rev. W. A. Bronson, of Perth Amboy; Adjutant-General, John L. Wheeler, of Red Bank; Quartermaster, Charles F. Kirker, of Red Bank.

IT is related of a young man residing not a thousand miles from here that when the last snow was on the ground he had the pleasure of taking a very attractive girl out sleighing. She was very pretty and very rich. In short, just such a girl a young man would like to take a sleigh ride with. It appears that after they had been driving in the country in the bright, light and crisp air, she asked him naively: "Is it necessary to use both hands in driving?" And he said: "No, of course not. I can drive as well with one hand as two." Then he did drive with one hand all the rest of the evening, showing off more or less as the occasion required, and made no use of the other. He has thought the matter over since, and it makes him mad to think how stupid he was. He says he is going to take that girl out driving once more. But it is doubtful whether she will go with him again.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Next Monday evening, the above popular play will be produced at Music Hall, under the management of Mr. W. B. Mattox, the "property man" of the Opera House. The well-known and popular actor, Wm. Davidge, Jr., will appear as "Marks" and Miss Maggie Harold as "Topsy." The play will be produced by a strong cast, and we have no doubt but that there will be a large attendance.

The Non-Resident Game Law to Be Tested.

William L. Allen, whom a Plainfield jury found to be a non-resident of this State, and guilty of shooting a quail therein contrary to the by-laws of the Game Protective Society, having appealed to the Court of Common Pleas, his Counsel, C. A. Marsh, yesterday moved the court to non-suit the plaintiff, on the ground that the game law against non-residents is unconstitutional, and requested the court to overrule the motion, to enable him to obtain the ruling of the Supreme Court. Mr. J. H. Jackson, plaintiff's attorney, consented to the suggestion that the court certify the constitutional question to the Supreme Court, and the court so ordered. The legality of the law will thus be finally determined.

Lots at Auction.

The remainder of the beautiful property on Front, Richmond and Second streets belonging to the estate of Isaac L. Platt, will be sold at auction by T. J. Gillies, next Monday. We are informed that the sale is absolute, and any one in search of a bargain will do well to attend. Maps can be had of E. C. Mulford of the auctioneer, or of Ferdinand Fish, 149 Broadway, N. J.

No Borough.

The election held in North Plainfield last Tuesday to determine whether its citizens should have a borough government, resulted in the "No Borough" ticket carrying the day by 7 majority. The total vote cast was 441, of which 217 were for incorporation and 224 against incorporation. In the morning only one kind of ticket appeared—that of "For Incorporation," consequently it was some hours before the opposers of the borough system could get their tickets ready. In the meantime, those favoring a borough were putting in their work. There was but little excitement about the polls during the day.

The Shaughraun.

The above well-known and popular play was produced at Music Hall last Tuesday evening. Dion Boucicault appeared as "The Shaughraun," his son Dot as "Harvey Duff," and his daughter Nina as "Moya." They were supported in these principal parts by a strong company of first-class artists. The veteran actor was at his best in his role and was ably sustained by both son and daughter. The house was filled to its utmost seating capacity, 1,150 tickets being sold. There was but one drawback, and that was a lack of programmes, they failing to arrive from New York.

Lent.

The rules for the observance of Lent for the Diocese of Newark, were read in all the Roman Catholic churches Sunday last, by order of Bishop Wigger. The rules allow one full meal a day and a moderate collation in the evening, except on Sundays, when fasting is not observed. Meat may be eaten once a day through Lent on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, excepting Holy Thursday and the second and last Saturdays. On Good Friday a black fast must be observed, no white meats being allowed. All good Catholics are expected to observe these rules, except those who are engaged in laborious work, women nursing children, invalids and those under twenty-one years of age. During the season of Lent services will be held in St. Mary's church, this city, on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

One Way to Economize

The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, through its Receivers, have issued a circular informing those interested that in order "to reduce to a minimum all expenses at this time, the Receivers have, in accordance with the resolution of the Board of Managers of the Company, resolved to discontinue all advertising for the present," consequently, the eyes of those readers of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, which have been accustomed to glance over the time table of the present "P. & R." and the past "Central" management of this which "ought to be one of the best roads in the country," will have to look in another direction for information hereafter as to the time when trains leave and arrive at stations along its line. When the management of a railroad cannot afford to give its patrons necessary information, it is about time it "closed out" or passed into other hands. This last move is like stopping up the spigot and opening the bung-hole.

Training Art Workers.

The Metropolitan Museum's Art Schools in East Thirty-fourth street, New York city, of which Mr. John Ward Stimson is the general manager, are meeting with such deserved success as to command attention throughout the country. Mr. Stimson, who is by profession an artist, and was for years at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, believes that the true artisan needs to know something of art from the art student's point of view, as well as something of the executive part from a good mechanic's or workman's standpoint. His policy is intended to give the ambitious workman something more than a technical training, and to raise the work to a broad platform of artistic artisanship and to make the artisan more artistic and creative and the artist more practical and useful to the industries of the community. With this end in view Mr. Stimson has opened new classes and made new appointments, so that both classes of students shall be supplied with appropriate material and instruction. Mr. Stimson is a resident of this city.

The Philharmonic Concert.

The sixth entertainment of the Y. M. C. A. course, given in the Music Hall on the 12th inst., by the New York Philharmonic Club, assisted by Mrs. Annie Louise Tanner, Soprano, was, taken as a whole, as thoroughly enjoyable as anything that has as yet been given in that building. The club was particularly fortunate in its selections, which, although pleasing to the cultivated taste, were not entirely beyond the comprehension of the ordinary lover of harmony; and there was enough lightness to suit the popular mind in the arrangement of familiar American airs given by the club with Mr. Eugene Weiner as flute soloist. Although the temperature of the Hall was at first but a few degrees from freezing, it seemed to have no effect upon the spirits of the audience which showed itself very appreciative. A very warm encore was justly accorded to Mrs. Tanner, who is as pleasing a singer as any with whom we have been favored in some time, and the manner in which she reached notes several tones above high C showed her to be capable of even loftier soaring. Mr. Emil Schenck's solo upon the 'Cello, especially the "Pollacco" gave evidence of that gentleman's thorough understanding of the manipulations of that instrument, in the most literal acceptation of the word.

Fire!

Last Monday night, about 10 o'clock, when the wind was blowing "big guns," a fire broke out in A. D. Cook & Bro's stables on Fourth street, near Park avenue. The firemen were quick to respond to the alarm, and did excellent service in saving adjacent property. The building already on fire at the time of their arrival was beyond saving, and was consumed with its contents of hay and feed. The three horses stabled in the building were rescued with difficulty. A sett of double harness was destroyed, other harness and stock being saved. The night was bitter cold, and the firemen had a tough time of it, but, with apparatuses in good order, plenty of water and good judgment, the flames were stayed where they originated—probably from incendiary origin. The loss on building was $1,500. There was an insurance on it of $900. The following card has been handed us for publication by the Messrs. Cook:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Feb. 17, 1885.

GENTLEMEN:—Please allow us through your valuable columns to express our gratitude for the promptness and able management of the firemen of this city, at the fire in our building on Fourth street, last night. Also to the citizens for their united efforts in saving our horses.

Yours Respectfully,
A. D. COOK & BRO.

HENRY C. BELDON, one of the most prominent citizens of Hunterdon county, died at his residence in Flemington Monday morning. He was a leading Democratic politician for years and was known throughout the State as an active party worker.

Scarlet Knights.

The Scarlet Knights of Temperance will hold a gospel service in the Democratic headquarters, on Sunday evening, at 7.30. Reform men will address the meeting. Music conducted by Professor Butterworth, who will render the new piece dedicated to this Club, "When Scarlet Knights are Stronger," on the violin used by the renowned Ole Bull.

JOHN H. SAYERS, Commander.

Personalia.

Mr. Theodore F. French, of this city, has taken unto himself a new wife, having married Miss Melissa Colthan, on the 17th of this month. The couple started immediately on a bridal trip.

Invitations are out for the celebration of the 15th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. M. Mervin Dunham, at their residence, No. 30 Union street, Wednesday evening, March 4th, by a variety wedding.

Susan Collins, widow of R. L. Bliss, Sr., and mother of Rev. John C. Bliss, former pastor of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, this city, died on Saturday, Feb. 14th, beloved by all who knew her, and by not a few in Plainfield, who became acquainted with her during a visit here to her son's home.

Last Saturday evening "Uncle Dave" Smith was surprised at his residence on Church street by the appearance of thirty-one of his relatives; brother, sons, daughters, and grand-children, who proceeded to take charge of the premises and have a good time. It made Mr. Smith feel younger to see so many of his family gathered together.

Elizabeth B., wife of Henry W. Carpenter, died suddenly at her residence, No. 40 Duer street, North Plainfield, on Sunday last. Mrs. Carpenter was the daughter of Phillip P. VanArsdale, Esq. She was an most estimable lady, and beloved by all who knew her. In Sunday-school work she was always foremost, and an indefatigable worker. Her husband, Henry W. Carpenter, is cashier of the German branch of the N. Y. Metropolitan Mutual Life Insurance Company. In order to determine the cause of the death of Mrs. Carpenter, the family deemed it necessary to have a post mortem examination, which revealed the fact that death was caused by an abscess on the spleen.

The Cantata.

The sacred Cantata of Queen Esther, which has been in course of preparation, under the leadership of Dr. Utter, for the past six weeks, was given in Music Hall last Monday evening. The venture, while a risky one in this city of cultivated musical tastes, was successful, and deserving of a larger audience, although judging from the number of programmes issued, there were about twice as many there as were expected. As a spectacular performance it was fine, the costumes and scenery, although the latter was at times unavoidably modern, being all that could be desired. The acting was also, for amateurs, very good. The solos and choruses were, for the most part, good, and when we consider that the performers were, with very few exceptions, entirely volunteer, we must feel that much credit is due all that were interested in the work. The most severe criticism is due the curtain which was always in a hurry to fall, and which finally grew so tired that it fell at the beginning of the last chorus and had to be raised again. Toward the close of the entertainment a slight diversion was made by some "fire fiends" in the gallery. Why is there a detachment of these works of creation always in the gallery, and why are they always the first to hear the fire bells, and why do they always wear the heaviest boots and rush down stairs yelling "fire!" as if it were after them? And why, when such an occurrence is likely to happen at any time, will an intelligent audience in the body of the house always rise to its feet with the firm determination on the part of those in front to reach the door before any one else, and an equally strong resolution on the part of those in the rear not to let them, and all this before any one has seen a spark of fire, or smelled a bit of smoke, or even knows which way to escape? A panic of this kind is especially unjustifiable in the Music Hall, to which there are so many exits in all directions, that escape could not be cut off unless the fire broke out on all sides at once, which is improbable. By a few energetic words from some of the audience, the disturbance of Monday night was speedily quelled, and peace once more restored.

John Brute Holmes Again.

The following, relating to a citizen of North Plainfield Township, who does not enjoy a very enviable reputation in this vicinity, appeared in the New York World of Sunday. Holmes was lucky and "Lottie" unfortunate in not having the case tried in New Jersey:

"Miss Lottie Kohlmeyer sued City Surveyor John B. Holmes yesterday in the Fourth District Court, before Judge Alfred Steckler, to recover a balance of salary as housekeeper for Mr. Holmes, who is a widower with several children.

Miss Kohlmeyer is a blonde of statuesque figure, and when she stepped to the witness-stand she threw back her circular with the air of a tragedy queen.

Mr. Holmes, she testified, engaged her in October to keep his house in Plainfield at the rate of $20 a month. When she had been with him six weeks he made an improper proposal and she indignantly repulsed him. Next morning at the breakfast table he menaced her with a knife and discharged her, paying her only $10 on account. Mr. Holmes, a hale old gentleman, told a different story in his own behalf. Having forcibly denied that he had made any proposal of an improper character, he testified:

"I was in a hurry to get to New York that morning, having a survey to make for a bank. There was coffee, but no tea, on table. I like tea, and I asked Miss Kohlmeyer why there was none. She told me that I had directed her not to have tea, and I said that she was mistaken. 'You lie!' she said. 'Besides you insulted me last night. You gave the other young lady milk punch in the parlor and sent me a bottle of beer to the kitchen.' The night before I had entertained my youngest child's governess and her aunt with a milk punch and sent two bottles of beer to the kitchen, one for Miss Kohlmeyer and the other for the coachman. I directed Miss Kohlmeyer to quit the room. Thereupon she upset the boiling coffee over my head and I was scalded so that I could not shave for a month. I was under a physician's care. My sons poured a bucket of cold water over my head and tore off my clothing. On my way to the station I secured a constable and had Miss Kohlmeyer arrested. Then I relented and gave her $10. I only agreed to pay her $15 a month. This case has cost me three times that already."

"This old man lies!" exclaimed Miss Kohlmeyer, dramatically. "I cannot sit still and listen."

Judge Steckler told her that she must compose herself or quit the court-room, and she sat, with flashing eyes and heaving bosom, while several witnesses corroborated Mr. Holmes.

In rebuttal she testified that she did throw the hot coffee upon Mr. Holmes' venerable head, but in self defense, when he brandished the table-knife. She laughed derisively at the suggestion that she was jealous of the governess. Mr. Holmes did send her beer.

Judge Steckler gave judgment for Mr. Holmes, holding that his experience with his attractive young housekeeper had been sufficiently costly.

The Reticker Cured Feed.

The Reticker Cured Feed is a recent invented article of food for animals. It is composed of a variety of grains nicely cut and ground by improved machinery; many of these grains contain more nutriment than oats, three quarts of it are equal to or better than four quarts of standard oats. There is no tonic or medicine of any description in the feed to create a false appetite; the advantage being obtained from a thorough curing of the grain, and a knowledge based upon long experience of how to properly combine them to get the best results. It has been manufactured in Philadelphia since December, 1881, when it was first introduced and in no instance after a proper trial has it failed to be approved. It is a feed with oats and wheat, as a basis, reinforced by barley, corn, rye and rice. This feed is highly recommended by well-known turf men, and is being used by owners of blooded horses in this city, with great satisfaction. Mr. G. W. Watson, a guest at Netherwood, and owner of a fine span of roadsters, prides himself on the excellent appearance and condition of his horses by the use of this food.

New Rinkies.

The project to build a skating rink in Madison has been abandoned.

The fellow who skates "fancy" in a crowd will never be popular at any rink.

Michael Uhdal commenced excavating for the erection of the Evans rink on Thursday afternoon.

The champion child skaters, Willie Hyde and Miss McKibbin, are announced to appear on the 23d.

In consequence of the vast amount of boxwood used in skate rollers that article is becoming scarce and dear.

To-morrow, Saturday evening, "Little Tot" appears at the Casino Rink. She is said to be a wonder on the rollers.

A portion of the brick for the new Evans Rink on Broadway have arrived, and work will soon be commenced on the building.

She skated at the roller rink,
She sat down on the floor,
She didn't say a single word—
She doesn't skate no more.

The hymn, "Where is My Wandering Boy To-night?" used to be variously answered. The popular answer now is—"Down at the Skating Rink."

Oh, mother, may I go down and skate?
Oh, yes, my darling daughter;
But pray don't stay so very late,
Because you shouldn't oughter.

Chester is the latest place to fall a victim to the roller skating mania. The old spoke factory belonging to the Budd estate will have a skating floor placed in it and be transformed into a rink.

There was a mile race at the Casino Rink Monday evening last, between Messrs. Eli Long, Jr., Will Moffett, Will Williams and Sherwood Yawger. Long came in first, Moffett second and Williams third.

A young clerk in a grocery store
Who was never on roller-skates before,
Arose badly lamed,
And loudly exclaimed:
"Why the deuce don't they carpet the floor?"

At a carnival held in the New Brunswick rink last Friday night, Mr. John L. Force, of this city, attracted attention by his personation of "Ah Sin," and Fred S. Dunn, of Elizabeth, in his neat uniform of a Lieutenant.

The Roller Skater is the latest newspaper enterprise in the interest of roller skating. It is published by Homer E. Dudley & Co., at Buffalo, N. Y., and is brim full of spicy, paragraphs and articles on the "popular craze."

One romance of the rink has come to an unromantic episode. Prof. Osborne, the roller skater who eloped with Miss Rebecca Kearsley (worth $1,000,000) at Bucyrus, Ohio, and was given $15,000 to leave and never call for his bride, was arrested recently at Columbus and locked up for obtaining money on false pretences. They are trying to make out a charge of bigamy against him, but as yet have not succeeded.

Mr. Jones has sold the Casino Rink on Grove street, to Messrs. Joseph B. Dennis of Newark, and James D. Woglom of New York. Mr. Dennis is the well-known stationer of Newark, and owner of the Park Theatre of that city, also the Casino Rink. Mr. Woglom is a New York broker. Mr. Roswell Van Buskirk, Jr., of Newark, is the Treasurer, and Mr. H. McNamara, the floor manager. Some radical changes have been made by the management regarding prices of admission, etc., which appears in their advertisement in another column. The new management will no doubt be successful. Mr. Charles B. Frace and Harry Connett have been retained as instructors.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

During the high water last week, a New Brooklyn man went along the pond to shoot muskrats. He saw one on a hammock, fired at it and picked up six dead ones from the bog, which he had killed with the single shot.

Mr. Geo. Ricardo, Fish Warden of Bergen county, N. J., has stocked the Raritan River at New Brunswick, with 500,000 young tom cod fry. He expects to place about 1,000,000 smelt fry in the Raritan River the coming season. Mr. Ricardo is very thorough in his work, as his record in this State shows.

Reports from all over the West state that the quail crop has suffered greatly by the snow and cold weather since the middle of January. In Indiana, Illinois and Missouri a large number of birds have been found starved to death. The prospects of good shooting above the snow line for several years to come is far from encouraging.

It is stated that a great many fish have been dying of late in the waters at the lower end of Lake Hopatcong, many specimens of all weight and sizes having been observed floating about under the ice. As this is particularly the case in the vicinity of the works of the American Forcite Company, it is believed that their destruction has been caused by poisonous acids from those works flowing into the lake. Some day there will be a terrible shaking up of Morris county by an explosion from those works.

For some time past Mr. Pierre Lorillard has been devoting his attention to game preserving on his estate at Jobstown, N. J., and to shooting over his land when the open season came around. Recently he has become interested in the building up of a kennel of setters and pointers, and through his agent, Mr. Percy C. Ohl, of Plainfield, N. J., has been purchasing a number of good field dogs and several of the best brood bitches in the country. Among the first of Mr. Lorillard's acquisitions was Mr. W. A. Buckingham's native English setter dog Grouse Dale, a dog possessed of excellent field qualities. Later on the pointer Fate was secured. Then the blue Belton setter bitch Blue Bell, by Rattler, out of Daisy, was added. This superb dog was owned by E. W. Jester, of St. Georges, Del., and won the first prize in the native English setter bitch class at the New York dog show, in 1882. From Mr. James H. Goodsell, of this city, Mr. Lorillard, on the suggestion of Mr. John G. Heckscher, purchased the champion English setter bitch Petrel II., a pure Laverack, by Mr. Charles H. Raymond's Pride of the Border, out of Mr. John C. Higgins' Petrel. Petrel II. won the first prize in the New York show, in 1881, and her get has been unsurpassed. Mr. Lorillard has also bought the setter Vannette, of the same blood as Mr. R. M. P. Llewellin's famous winner, Count Wind'Em, and the setter Lavelette, besides numerous other dogs of valuable blood, which will be used for breeding purposes. Mr. Lorillard is now building a series of kennel houses at Jobstown, N. J., which, when completed, will surpass anything of the kind in America. Besides being an intelligent breeder, Mr. Lorillard is an excellent shot. Last autumn he abandoned the No. 12 guage gun, which is the size universally in use by gentlemen sportsmen in this country and in England, and shot entirely with a No. 20 gauge with great success. He has now ordered a No. 28 guage gun of four and a half pounds weight, whose charge will be two drams of powder and one half ounce of shot. This will be the second gun of this small size that has ever come to this country.

Unauthorised use of the name of Dr. Mott, late Government Chemist, by the Royal Baking Powder Co.

The statements published by the Royal Baking Powder Company as emanating from me and reflecting upon the purity of "Cleveland's Baking Powder" are false. I never knew of such publications until I saw them in print on the fifteenth of this month, January 1885.

I have, on several occasions during the past few years and without the knowledge of the manufacturers, analytically examined cans of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder purchased by myself in the markets, and I take pleasure in recommending it to public favor as a baking powder that can be relied upon for purity, wholesomeness and strength. I have never found it to be adulterated with Lime, or to be impure in any sense whatever.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE SILVERSPINS.

BY [illegible]

There were four Miss Silverspins, and Leona, the youngest of all, was married first!

Miss Silverspin was literary, corresponded with two or three country newspapers, wrote essays, and even tried her hand at poetry. Miss Eudora Silverspin was domestic, kept a big recipe book, counted the bars of soap, and nearly drove the one maid-of-all-work distracted with her constant criticisms and surveillance. Miss Rebecca, the third, belonged to the congregation of "St. Petrifactus-in-the-Highway," was one of a sisterhood, and visited the poor, until the poor were heartily sick of her. And little Leona, the 18 year old "baby" of the family, was considered as good for nothing in particular, except to be snubbed, scolded, and ordered around by all three of her sisters, until Mr. Motley came along and married her.

"The man must be crazy to fancy a chit of a thing like Leona," said Miss Silverspin. "I did think he had some literary taste, but of course he can't have, when he is satisfied with a wife who never read Carlyle, and knows nothing about either Hume or Macaulay."

"One would suppose," added Miss Eudora, acrimoniously, "that a man would select for a life companion one who understands the art of housekeeping, and can make his home comfortable! Leona never baked a biscuit in her life, and as for preserving, I don't think she knows the difference between a damson or greengage!"

"All this is merely folly and trifling," said the sister of St. Petrifactus, rolling her fine eyes skyward. "No man who is entirely devoid of the devotional element can be expected to show common sense in his matrimonial choice."

"Leona knows nothing at all about him," said Miss Silverspin, sharply.

"He may be a mere impostor, for all we know," said Miss Eudora.

"Leona will be sure to repent her headlong haste one of these days," said Miss Rebecca.

But in spite of all this croaking, little Leona was as happy as a bird. She loved John Motley, and John Motley loved her. What else was wanted to complete her bliss? She went to housekeeping in a bird's nest of a house with the curtains all looped back with blue ribbons, and plants and canary birds in every window, and the three Miss Silverspins came there frequently to breakfast, dinner and tea, although they took no [illegible] approbation of her match.

"Nothing but an engraver," said Miss Silverspin, sourly. "I did think, Leona, you would have looked much higher."

"It's a very respectable business, I am sure," said Leona, timidly.

"You'll be sure to repent it one of these days," said Miss Eudora.

"I'm sure I don't know why," said Leona, ready to cry.

"He is a free-thinker and an infidel," groaned Rebecca.

"He isn't!" retorted Leona, half frightened at her own boldness. "He reads the Bible every day, and is very regular at church."

"It's all a whited sepulcher," sighed the sister of St. Petrifactus.

"I wish they'd all get married, too," thought Leona, "and then, perhaps, they'd have enough to do attending to their husbands to keep away from here!"

The next week the three sisters arrived en masse, with faces a yard long and eyes a-glitter with gloomy triumph.

"I told you so," said Miss Silverspin.

"I foresaw it from the very beginning," said Rebecca.

"It's no more than you might have expected," added Eudora.

"Do speak out!" cried bewildered Leona. "I don't at all understand what you mean!"

"Did you know, wretched child," said Miss Silverspin, leaning forward and altering her voice to a sepulchral key, "that your husband had had another wife?"

"Of course I knew that he was a widower," said Leona, much relieved. "Do you suppose he has any secrets from me?"

"But did you know," struck in the devotee of the saint with the stony name, "that the first Mrs. Motley is still living?"

"Nonsense," said Leona. "She died within six months of their marriage and is buried at Milwaukee."

"Poor, deceived lamb!" groaned Eudora. "She's living now. It was not even a divorce—only a legal separation, and he has no more right to get married than—than any other man that is tied tight and fast to a living wife!"

Leona turned very pale.

"This is false!" she cried. "You are deceiving me!"

"Seeing is believing," said Miss Silverspin. "She's down stairs in the reception room."

"Who is?" gasped Leona.

"The first Mrs. Motley!"

Leona started up with glittering eyes and crimson cheeks.

"How dare she come here? Here, to my very house!" she cried out.

"Because she wants her husband," said Eudora. "Be calm, child, I entreat. Sister Rebecca, lead in the real Mrs. Motley."

And before Leona could muster words to remonstrate a tall female, wearing blue spectacles and a waterproof suit, stalked in.

"Who are you?" cried Leona, starting up. "And what do you want?"

"I am Mrs. John Motley," answered the gaunt female, with a wave of her umbrella, "and I want my husband. He married me out West three years ago, and now he's cleared out, and don't allow me one penny of maintenance. And he's been and gone and married again, and I'll have him up for bigamy as sure as my name is Phili Maria Motley! What's the use of laws, if this is the way a respectable woman is to be swindled out of her support?"

Leona sank back, pale and startled, as if she had seen a ghost. And so she had—not only the ghost of the woman she had deemed dead and in her grave years ago, but the sheeted spectre of her own married love and happiness.

Poor, trembling, pallid little Leona! And the three Miss Silverspins stood around, triumphing in her dismay, like exultant ghouls, crying in one voice:

"Didn't we tell you so?"

Just at this moment the door opened and in walked—Mr. John Motley himself!

"Hallo!" cried he. "What's the matter, Leo? What's all this about?"

"Deceiver!" shrieked Miss Silverspin.

"Bigamist!" shouted Miss Eudora.

"Villain!" croaked Miss Rebecca.

"Are you all mad?" said Mr. Motley, looking from one to the other.

"John, who is that? Speak!" sobbed out poor Leona, pointing to the tall woman in the blue spectacles.

"I'm hanged if I know," said Mr. Motley, looking her full in the face.

The three Miss Silverspins stared.

"She said she was your first wife," cried they in chorus. "She said she wasn't divorced, only legally separated. She said you were her lawful husband, and that Leona wasn't your wife at all."

"Then she has told a pack of confounded lies!" roared Mr. John Motley, with flashing eyes.

"Isn't this man your husband?" demanded Miss Silverspin, shaking the tall stranger by the shoulder.

"No, he ain't," sheepishly confessed the soi-disant Mrs. Motley. "My husband's name is John Motley, but he ain't this man at all. My husband is tall and stout, with red hair and whiskers, face marked with smallpox and only one eye."

"There's a John Motley keeps a grocery store down by the river," said the other possessor of that name. "Perhaps—"

"That's him," said the spectacled one, with alacrity. "He always knowed a heap about the grocery business. He's pretty sly, but he can't dodge me."

And exit the would-be destroyer of Leona Motley's domestic peace.

The three Miss Silverspins retreated in disorder, mutually reproaching one another. Leona had a good laugh and cry on her husband's shoulder, and Mr. Motley registered then and there a solemn vow that the three sisters-in-law should keep out of his house thereafter.

And he kept it, too.

Lime in Cleveland's Baking Powder.

DR. MOTT'S AUTOGRAPH STATEMENT.

"Dr. H. A. Mott Consulting Chemist,
"61 Broadway, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1884.

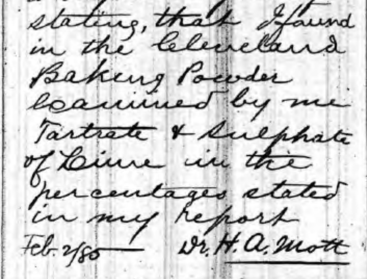
"I have submitted to analysis Cleveland's Baking Powder, and find the same to contain

"TARTRATE OF LIME,
"SULPHATE OF LIME,

in the percentages stated in my report.

[Signed] "Dr. H. A. MOTT."

The manufacturers of Cleveland's Baking Powder having endeavored to create the impression that their baking powder does not contain lime, and that Dr. Mott's analysis thereof, which showed the presence of lime, was published without authority, the following autograph letter from the Doctor is given, and will be found conclusive evidence upon both points:



I never intended to deprive you of stating, that I found in the Cleveland Baking Powder examined by me Tartrate & Sulphate of Lime in the percentages stated in my report

MISCELLANEOUS.

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of Scrofula about you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system.

For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh, CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

ULCEROUS SORES "Hutto, Tex., Sept. 28, 1882. "At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with ulcerous running sores on its face and neck. At the same time its eyes were swollen, much inflamed, and very sore. SORE EYES Physicians told us that a powerful alterative medicine must be employed. They united in recommending AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A few doses produced a perceptible improvement, which, by an adherence to your directions, was continued to a complete and permanent cure. No evidence has since appeared of the existence of any scrofulous tendencies; and no treatment of any disorder was ever attended by more prompt or effectual results.
Yours truly, B. F. JOHNSON."

Gray's Specific Medicine.

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

The Great English Remedy. An unfailing cure for Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhea, Impotency, and all Diseases that follow as a sequence of Self-Abuse; as Loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age, and many other diseases that lead to Insanity or Consumption and a premature grave.

BEFORE TAKING. AFTER TAKING.

Beware of advertisements to refund money, when druggists from whom the medicine is bought do not refund, but refer you to the manufacturers, and the requirements are such that they are seldom, if ever, complied with. See their written guarantee. A trial of one single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most skeptical of its real merits. On account of counterfeits, we have adopted the Yellow Wrapper, the only genuine. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to every one. POETRY.

A GOOD DRUGGIST.

A man who kept a store
Once wrote upon his door:
"Oh, I can make a pill
That shall ease ev'ry ill
I keep here a plaster,
To prevent disaster;
Also some good ointment,
To soothe disappointment."

When customers applied,
These words are what he cried:
"Now, Patience is the pill
That eases ev'ry ill;
Take-care is a plaster
Which prevents disaster;
Good-humor an ointment,
Soothing disappointment."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

PHIL RUDD'S UNCLE'S COUSIN.

"Well, to tell you the truth, Will, I feel as if I had acted very stupidly, but in the whirligig world of ours people will make blunders over the simplest things, and sometimes what seems very simplest at the first glance proves to be a conundrum when looked into."

"You say it is a question of relationship. Now, I can hardly see how any question of kin can be much of a puzzle, if you think it over a bit."

"Well, it has been to me, anyhow, and I'll propose it to you. What relation is my uncle's cousin to me?"

"That's simple enough. Your uncle was your father's brother, and your uncle's cousin was, of course, your father's cousin."

"I suppose so," said Phil Rudd, with a sigh.

"Suppose so! Why, my dear fellow, it's a self-evident fact, and your father's cousin is your second cousin."

"So they tell me, but look here, now, Will, my father's brother has children. They are my father's nephews and nieces and my cousins. They have children, and those children are my second cousins. How do you reconcile the two kinships?"

This did seem to puzzle Will Norris a bit, but he still persisted that he was right, and pulling away vigorously on his cigar, while he elevated his heels higher on the desk he was sitting by, for it was after business hours and the two young men were discussing matters and things in the office of Norris, on Broad street. He said:

"It puts me in mind of Maguire, the other day. I met him on Madison avenue and he said he was going to see his aunt, and invited me to go along. As I had nothing to do I accepted, and was taken to his mother's mother's house, which, ordinarily, would be called his grandmother's, where I was introduced to a very handsome, matronly-looking woman of about thirty-six or eight, whom I took for and addressed as his aunt, to the amusement of both, but without telling who she was, except that she was Mrs. Alburtis. Then an order was issued to bring down Aunt Maggie, and in a few minutes a nurse appeared with a laughing, struggling baby of eighteen months, who shouted and kicked to go to Nephew Bob, and was gratified in Maguire's arms. Mrs. Alburtis being Bob's grandmother on his mother's side."

"Why not? That's easy enough. His mother married at 17, and he was born when she was 18, just as her mother had done before her which would make his grandmother 36."

"Well, now, tell us all about your uncle's cousin, my boy."

"All right then, to begin at the beginning, you know that I do not remember my father, and that my mother died when I was seven, so that I scarcely remember her, and that I went into the hands of my uncle Dennis, whom you must remember well."

"Perfectly, and a more jolly, handsome old bachelor and thorough Irish gentleman than Dennis Rugg I never wish to see, and as lucky as he was seemingly reckless. I say seemingly, though I guess he was about as long-headed in business as any one had ought to be. Everything he touched turned to money."

"Well, you know, Will, I hadn't a chance to know my uncle much, for, as he was a bachelor and did not keep an establishment of his own, he was obliged to find somebody to take care of me, which he did in the person of a most amiable woman, whom he had known in Ireland, and whom he established as housekeeper for that purpose. You have heard me say that my father barely missed being an Irishman, my grandfather have come to this country when my uncle Dennis and Michael were large boys, while my father, Philip, and my aunt, Ellen, were both in New York. They are all dead now."

"Yes," said Will, sorrowfully. "It looks as though your family was destined to become extinct unless you marry and perpetuate it."

"Well, as I was saying, I saw a little of my Uncle Dennis while I was a boy, and of that little I don't remember much. At twelve years of age I was taken away from my lady guardian and sent to a school, from which I only came to New York once a year for a vacation of two weeks, which I always spent with my uncle at his hotel. The same rule followed me up when I went to Princeton College, and it was while there that I first heard of my uncle's cousin, but not enough about her to know much.

"All that I was told was that she was my uncle's cousin, that she was born in Dublin, that she was an orphan and had property. That she had been consigned to my uncle by her father, and that she was then living in the country with her governess, who had come over with her. Not a word was said about her age, her looks, or any particulars. In fact, I made up my mind then that my uncle did not wish me to know any more about his cousin, Miss Catharine Kiernan, and as I had no interest in her she dropped entirely out of my memory.

"After I graduated from Princeton, you know, I went directly abroad, at my uncle's particular request, for a three years' travel through Europe, and it was while on my way home that I received intelligence of my uncle's death, and returned to New York to find that I was his sole heir, under certain conditions, to a property that footed up to close on a million. These conditions were simply that I was to marry my uncle's cousin, Miss Catharine Kiernan, which, if I did not do, I was to make her amends by giving her one-quarter of my uncle's wealth.

"There was nothing at all strange in such a will. They were made every day and I had no right to find fault with it, for what privilege had I to expect more liberality from my uncle than his cousin. The time set for the consummation of this matter was to be one year after the death of my uncle, but I had no disposition to put it off and so a few weeks after my return I made up my mind that the first point to be achieved was to see Miss Kate and see what she was like.

"I had been in consultation with my uncle's lawyers, and from them had received a letter written by him a short time before his death, the duplicate of which, I was informed, they had forwarded to my uncle's cousin, Miss Kate Kiernan."

This letter was simply an affectionate screed, impressing upon each his earnestness in wishing to see them favor and consummate the terms of his will. Also they informed me that Miss Kiernan had been informed by his uncle of his wishes long before his death, while I was left to find it out by the will. From these attorneys I also learned that Miss Kiernan and her governess were at Richfield Springs at a certain hotel where they intended to remain the summer.

"With this information to guide me I started for Richfield with a plan in my mind which I had already communicated to the junior member of the law firm, and which was by him highly approved. I was to go to Richfield incog., see Miss Kiernan, and, if I liked her looks, declare my identity and see how I liked her mentally. Then I could make my acceptation or rejection, knowing exactly what I was doing.

"When I arrived at the hotel I entered myself as Mr. Clarence De Grey, determined that if names carried any weight I would have one of the most aristocratic bearing. My object of course was to look around for Miss Kiernan. To achieve this without making myself known I fraternized one of the clerks, and asked him if he knew Miss Kiernan by sight. Of course he did, as he told me afterward he had good reason to, and looked upon her as a clipper. If he had told me that at first it might have led to an explanation, as it was it only lead to a request on my part that he would quietly point out Miss Kiernan to me, which he did presently, as she passed through the hall on her way to the piazza, and I saw before me a tall, angular woman of about 30, perfectly devoid of everything that had the slightest claim to beauty; in fact, exactly as the clerk had described her, a sharp scolder, with a nipping and an eager air.

"Perhaps, though, she might have charms that would compensate for the want of physical ones, and I felt that I had no right to disregard my uncle's wishes without looking fully into the merits of the object of them, and so I made my way to the piazza that I might get a chance to study Miss Kiernan and, if possible, scrape an acquaintance as Mr. Clarence De Grey before assuming my real name.

"Both these points I found phenomenally easy; in fact the first was reversed, and I discovered in ten minutes that Miss Kiernan was studying me, and to such an extent that I was fairly driven off the ground and speedily retreated to a seat, where I had not been five minutes when the gentle maiden, who had been picked out by my practical uncle as my partner for life, came and took the next chair to me. Though I was a little shocked, I was glad of the opportunity of speaking to her, even though I might be repelled, and so summoning courage I said to her by way of trying to open conversation.

"Everybody seems very happy here, miss."

"Shure, why shouldn't they be?" she responded, fearlessly, in the broadest brogue; "they've come here for that purpose, and they've all got the manes in their pouches to injoy life."

This opened a field of talk, and I took advantage of it. I found Miss Kiernan intelligent, and, at times, quite ladylike, though frequently she developed a roughness not very pleasant. One quality was pre-eminent, but I could not call that Irish, but rather Yankee, and that was questioning.

"What's yer name, now?" was her style of asking.

I told her, though my tongue did not gracefully surround my chosen cognomen.

"Well, shure, that's a very proper name. De Grey, that's a Sassenach appellative. Now my name's Kiernan, and I'm Orish, though you'd niver think it by my spache, though you'd dishcover it by me name. What's yer nationality, and where do yees come from, thin?"

I told her that I was born in New York, but that for three years I had been traveling in Europe.

"An' mighty purty traveling it is, too, Misther Grey. I thraveled every bit of it, from Paris to Consthantinople, an' could do it agin widout shrinkin', so it was nechessary. Air yees married?"

I protested I was not, but said I didn't know how soon I might be if I should happen to meet such charming examples of the sex as herself. To this she simply said:

"Oh, batherashin, don't talk such fiddle. I can't lishten to it."

At that moment there passed along the piazza one of the most lovely little piquant creatures I ever laid my eyes on in my life, and as she passed she nodded to Miss Kiernan, who said:

"There, now, av ye talk av lovely examples av the shex, luk ye at that one. She's a lovely example. As handsome as they allow them in this blissid counthry, young—only 17—and as amiable as—as—I am meself, but the poor thing hasn't got any fortin', an' that's agin her."

Phil said he didn't think so, at all events, with her beauty, and asked her name.

"Oh! they call her Miss Katrina Helen Augusta Adaline Sophia De Montague," said Miss Kiernan, rapidly, "but everybody knows her as Miss Katrina. Why she couldn't be called Kate, like meself, I can't understhand."

Then came the questions from Phil of who she was. Well, she was born in England, lived in France, but had spent the last five years of her life in America; that was all Miss Kiernan could say. Then Phil asked if there was any way for him to obtain an introduction, and was told:

"Well, ye same a respectable b'y, and I see no harum in my givin' yees a [illegible] off wid her, and so the nixt time she comes around I'll just tell her to sthop."

All this Mr. Kiernan did, bringing what Phil thought the most perfect little beauty to his side (for Miss Kiernan gave up her seat and moved a little farther away) that he had ever seen. Phil found no trouble in opening a conversation, into which Miss Kiernan didn't drop, but rather seemed to slumber over it, as they had a kindred subject in their European experiences, and the time slipped happily away. She had been introduced as Miss Montague, and so Phil called her. He told her everything truthful about himself, except his real name, and there is little doubt that she told him all about herself, at least, as far as a woman can tell as openly on that topic as a man can, except what she did not.

At all events they seemed to spend a most happy evening, and when Miss Kiernan woke up with a yawn, she said that it was 11 o'clock striking, they parted, with the supposable chance that they might meet at breakfast, which they did, and, more than that, Miss Montague accepted an invitation for a drive, which Phil had coupled with Miss Kiernan's name, though he had hardly given it when he found that the invitation might have extended without a propriety attachment.

What is the use of telling the whole story? There's nothing new about it, and in some form or other the same thing has happened a hundred, a thousand, a hundred thousand times. Phil in three days was terribly in love with Miss Montague, and when she told him as plainly as words could speak that she would not tell him anything more that she had told him about herself until he had told her more about himself, he said, "I know not, I care not if guilt's in thy heart, but I know that I love thee, whatever thou art."

Then he felt that matters had reached that point where it became necessary in honor for him to declare himself to Miss Kiernan and give her a release, and so, acting on this resolve, he watched his opportunity when Miss Montague was away, and opened his whole mind to Miss Kiernan, and told her that though he saw her good qualities and admired them, he could not love her, simply because he loved another, Miss Montague.

"She's a mighty foine girrul," said Miss Kiernan, "and yees haven't made a bad choice. Go in, my b'y, and win her."

That point being settled, Phil went in to win her. He was not altogether satisfied about the winning, but after she had promised to be his wife, and he had got over the shock of how easy she was won, she told him the following story:

"In the first place," she said (after he had confessed his real name, and told how he had come to Richfield to woo his uncle's cousin, Miss Katharine Kiernan, and how, after he had seen her, though he respected her, it was impossible for him to make her his wife), "I have a tale of deceit to tell about myself, which, perhaps, after you hear it will affect your love and respect for me."

Phil's reply to this was the word "Never!" and a kiss to seal it.

"Very well, we will try. Firstly, my name is not Montague, but Katharine Kiernan, and I am your uncle's cousin."

Phil gave almost a shout of astonishment, and another of delight, and the real Miss Kiernan went on:

"The lady whom you mistook for me is very distant relative of the same name as myself. She is my governess and guardian. Your uncle's lawyers apprised me of your arrival home and your intention to come here incog., and sent me so accurate a description of you and of the time you would arrive, that I knew just when to and how to look for you. The clerk in the office is to be excused for pointing out my governess for me, as he only knows me as Miss Katrina, but Miss Kiernan by her full name. Miss Kiernan assisted me most ably in my plot, and you will find her, after this, very different from what you have taken her for. That is all my story, and now if you have altered your mind I'll release you."

The sheltering trees hid Phil's answer, which was by his lips and on hers, and both were very happy.

"Why, it's a charming romance," said Will Norris. "When are you to be married?"

"In October, and then we go to Europe for a year, and Miss Kiernan, who will then be the only Miss Kiernan, will go with us."

"And how has she turned out?"

"Charming! Lady like, and not a bit of brogue. She was only playing her part, you know."

SLEIGH BELLS.

How many boys and girls know how sleigh bells are made? The little iron ball is too big to be put in through the holes in the bell, and yet it is inside. How did it get there?

This little iron ball is called "the jinglet." When you shake the sleigh bell it jingles. When the horse trots the bells jingle, jingle, jingle. In making the bell this jinglet is put inside a little ball of mud, just the shape of the inside of the bell. Then a mold is made just the shape of the outside of the bell. This mud ball with the jingle inside the mold of the outside, and the melted metal is poured in, which fills up the space between the ball and the mold. When the mold is taken off you see a sleigh bell, but it will not ring, as it is full of dirt. The hot metal dries the dirt that the ball is made of, so it can be shaken out. After the dirt is all shaken out of the holes in the bell the little iron jinglet will still be in the bell, and will ring. It took a good many years to think out how to make a sleigh bell.

THE ROLLER RINK MANIA.

Peter Brown left Brockton, Mass., about three years ago, and last week he returned, and just as he was strolling down the street to his native town he met a farmer by the name of Smith, who was not prosperous when he left, and lived outside the town. Brown was surprised to see the stranger attired in a dress suit, with a silk hat, and a big diamond pin blazing on his shirt front, and he inquired.

"Been to a funeral to-day?"

"Why bless you, no!"

"No? I see you have got on your best clothes. Are you farming yet?"

"Farming? Well, I should say not. I'm running a roller skating rink down here."

"Where is your son Jim?"

"Oh, he's running a rink in H——."

"And your daughter Liz?"

"She's skating under the management of Tim Jones in a Boston rink."

"And your wife?"

"She's skipped out with Prof. Mechin, an instructor that I hired when I first opened the rink."

"Is Elder Longsermon preaching still?"

"No he resigned from the ministry and is now a rink instructor."

"Who's preaching in his place?"

"Nobody."

"Nobody? What's the matter?"

"Church's turned into a skating rink."

"You don't say!"

"Yes, true as preachin'."

"Where's Bill Beck, the groceryman?"

"He went out of the business a year ago. He's got the ice cream stand down in my rink."

"Pshaw! Where's Aunt Sally Bakon and Deacon Schultzer?"

"Why, dang it all, they're travelling around visiting rinks doing the old man and woman act on skates. I tell you they're immense."

"Is there anybody left in the town who does not skate?"

"Yes."

"Where are they?"

"Up in the cemetery on the hill."—

A slap, a flop,
A beautiful drop,
The roller skates upset her;
No more she'll soar,
The rink all o'er,
For her dear old pa won't let her.

BEHIND A FAN.

BY ALGERNON.

Scene: Mrs. Rawdon's drawing-room arranged for a dance; on the right, through the open doors, the staircase is seen, crowded with newcomers; on the left the refreshment room, into which enters Maud hurriedly, dressed in gray.

Maud—My fan! Where is my fan? I'm sure I laid it down here. To servant: Have you seen a large white fan, with a silver "M" upon it? No? It must be somewhere in the other room. I wouldn't lose it for the world. What a bother. Here comes my partner for the next dance. I must find it afterward—

* * * * * * * * *

He (soliloquizes)—What a crush! I shall just take things quietly and drift with the stream. Why on earth have I dragged myself out to another of these wretched dances? This will be just the same as the last. Hot crowd; matchmaking mammas and match-making daughters. I wish I weren't a great parti! I wish I hadn't a penny to bless myself with—then perhaps I might enjoy a dance. No, I shouldn't, for then I couldn't afford a dress coat to dance in. (Looks into the dancing room.) There is, just as I thought, the same old glare, the same old suffocation, the same old match-makers, same young ones. Why don't I turn back, then? I wonder if Maud Arnold is here to-night? Why should I wonder? I'm sure I don't care. She's not at all a pretty girl. Well, here I am at the top. Dash this glove button! why does it come off? No turning back now; Mrs. Rawdon has seen me.

Hostess—Ah, there you are Mr. Dennis, at last! I have been watching for you as a valuable aide-de-camp. Let me introduce you to a partner for the next dance.

He—Pray, don't let me trouble you, Mrs. Rawdon, I have so many friends here to-night that I am sure to find plenty of partners, and you must have enough work on your hands without me. (Proceeds to dancing-room and to soliloquize.) What's the use of introducing me? I shan't dance. I wonder if Maud Arnold is here. I don't care a fig whether she is or not—of course I don't. I've done with all that sort of thing long ago, thank goodness! All women are alike to me. If I find her which dance shall I ask her for? Where are we now? No. 3; shall I ask her for 4? No, I had better ask her sister first. I can't, though; she won't be here. I remember she said she wouldn't be back from Cambridge in time for this dance. There's Maud—there in the conservatory (moves toward it). Who's that with her? It's no concern of mine (moves nearer). I believe it's that idiotic young Wilson—young ass! What business has he to be flirting with Maud? Well, it's no concern of mine. It is Maud! Yes, I know the turn of her neck, and her hair, and her gray gown, and her fan; it's the fan I give her in the place of the one I smashed; I recognize it by the silver "M." I wish she wouldn't hold it before her face, though. What does he mean by standing so near her? I think I shall remain here; it's cooler than the rooms, and nobody will bother me (stands at a distance from them).

She (to her partner)—What a stifling night!

Her Partner—I think it's awfully jolly in here.

She—Perhaps you like heat!

Her partner—No; but I forgot the heat in the company.

She—Compliments are no use—they don't help one to get cooler.

Her Partner—Let me fan you (he leans over her as she gives him the fan). There are you better now?

He (from his corner)—Confound his impertinence! What can he be saying to her. Why, he is fanning her! She has given him my fan. I won't stand this! Why shouldn't I? It has nothing to do with me. Yes, it has. I don't like to see any girl, let alone a girl I know, treated like that by a man unless he means to marry her. Perhaps he does. Nonsense, he can't. Well, and what does it matter if he does?

Hostess (from behind)—Ah, here you are! I have been looking for you everywhere. Not dancing after all! Do let me introduce you to a young friend of mine who has just come out—an excellent dancer.

He—Thanks; but really——

Hostess—I will take no excuses; come along. There she is. My dear, are you engaged for this dance? No! Then let me introduce you to a partner. (Introduces them).

He (sulkily)—May I have the pleasure of this dance?

His Partner—I shall be very pleased. (To herself)—What an ill-tempered looking creature! but he has lovely eyes. (To him—What is the dance—valse or polka?

He—I'm sure I don't know.

His Partner—Would you be so kind as to go and look for me? I have paid him out now—well, he takes his time about it.

He (returning)—It's a valse—I mean a polka.

His partner—Thanks; I am equally ready for either.

He—I am a poor dancer at best, and tonight a polka is such hot work. Would you mind sitting out this dance?

His Partner (coldly)—Oh, no, not at all. Where shall we sit?

He—Shall we try the conservatory? It is nice and cool in there.

His Partner—He's getting a little better; but I must say I never saw such a bear. (They move into the conservatory). Why, he hasn't even offered me his arm, and he is looking much more at that couple over there than at me. (The couple in question—to wit, She and Her Partner—are still in their old places and positions at the other end, the latter fanning her as before).

He (to himself)—He's at it still. By George, he's moving nearer! I wonder what they are saying?

She—You fan me beautifully.

Her Partner—That is no merit of mine; the fan moves automatically; it is so glad to serve you.

She—What number was the dance—five?

Her Partner—Don't send me mad. This is no matter for trifling. If you care a bang for me take care how you treat me.

He (looking on)—His hand upon her chair! That is strong! What can they be saying? He looked as if——

His Partner—Have you been to the theatre lately!

He—No—that is, I believe so. (To himself)—And she doesn't move away. I don't suppose she so much as blushes. I wish I could see her face. Why does he go on fanning her in that violent way?

His Partner (to herself)—He is odd. (To him)—And the picture galleries of course you have "done." What do you think of the Grosvenor?

He—No. I don't like Irving. Cad! he looks as if——

His Partner—Those hideous Burne-Joneses spoil the Grosvenor for one; but I rather enjoy the academy. I like Marcus Stone's pictures so? I copied my dress at the fancy fair the other day from one of them.

He—Yes, hideous. (To himself)—No, this is too much; I believe he's going to kiss her.

Her Partner—Don't you know that I would die for you, and what is better, live for you? Don't you know that I can't live without you?

She—What answer would you have me give you?

Her Partner—That you love me; that you will stay with me always; that you will be my wife.

She—You have it then; "Yes." (They kiss behind the fan; then a long pause).

He—Confound it all! I won't see the girl I love treated like that! (Steps forward and overhears their words).

She—We must really show ourselves in the dancing-room again. Oh, how my cheeks burn! In spite of your having fanned me the whole time without stopping.

Her Partner—Did I? I didn't know I was doing it. Here is the fan back again now at any rate. You had better keep it, or I shall be carrying it off. (Gives her the fan; she shuts it up).

He—Good heavens! What's this? It isn't Maud after all!

She—Don't do that, because it isn't mine; it belongs to my sister. She would never forgive me if it got lost. Besides, I ought never to have taken it. If she has noticed its absence she will be worrying herself dreadfully. I must really bring it back to her.

Her Partner—Put it in a safe place till this dance is over. We must have it together. The music is maddening me. Come. (They go out; as they came into the dancing room they pass him. He has moved thither before them. On seeing him she puts out her hand).

She—How do you do, Mr. Dennis? You see, I am back from Cambridge, after all. Do you happen to have seen my sister? I want to restore some stolen property to her (holds up the fan). I think she must be in the refreshment room.

He—If you will allow me I will take back the fan to your sister myself. (Exit to find her).—London World.

THE AMATEUR COWBOY.

Cowboys are born, not made. Some men are born cowboys, some acquire cowboys, and others have cowboys thrust upon them; but the genuine genius is born to bestride the barbarious pinto in pursuit of the fleet-footed Maverick. History is replete with instances where men from other walks of life have sought to become cowboys and failed. The shores of Time are white with their bleaching clavicles. They did not have the afflatus. They were not en rapport with the Texas steer. They thought that to be a cowboy they only needed to let their hair grow long and tie it with a blue ribbon at the back.

The gentle reader may not believe it, but I saw an amateur cowboy land in the far west whose long and waving hair was tied with a knot of pale-blue ribbon, and who wore a new suit of buck-skin that had never been wet.

A meeting of "Kavveyard No. 2" was at once called to take action in the matter of entertaining the new, and beautifully picturesque terror. In calling the meeting to order, the Most Exemplary Booger of the Lariat stated that there was an apprentice at the outer gate of the Corral who desired to become a free working Knight of the Quirt.

A programme was then arranged by which the young man was to be entertained and fully instructed in the signs, degrees, grand hailing signs, grips, passwords, explanations and signals of the order.

The name of the apprentice was Claude. Anybody would almost know that to look at him. He wanted the pure air of the plains to fan his brow, he said, and fill him with vigor. He wanted to learn how to rope a steer and conquer him, and make him subservient. The gentlemen of the "Kavveyard" said that his morbid curiosity should be gratified.

First, however, he must wet the new buckskin clothes. They went into a gilded hell, and drank a great deal of common cooking whiskey at Claude's expense. Then they took him to an irrigation ditch and saturated him with moisture. After that, under the auspices of "Kavveyard No. 2," he was kept out in the hot sun till his buckskin clothes began to dry and shrink.

Slowly as the sun rose higher, Claude's pantaloons proceeded to ditto. He began to attract attention. With his hair looped back and festooned with a pale-blue ribbon with grease on it, and a suit of buckskin that was getting so tight that it might crack down the back at any moment, people began to gather around him and express an interest in him. Boys stopped in crowds to ask where it came from, and business men halted and said it was queer what funny things we could run across when we didn't have a gun.

Finally they took Claude out to the stock-yards to "rope a steer." They didn't dare to turn him in with a real rear-surp enough wild steer, but borrowed one of a man who kept wild steers to let out on occasions.

Claude chased the ferocious brute around the yard nearly all day before he threw his lariat so to catch on. The loop went over the steer's back, but unfortunately the fierce young solitary horseman got his own neck tangled up in the other end of the string. Those who know the habits of the steer, even when domesticated, will remember that it takes a man with a very muscular neck to outjerk him when he is good spirits.

This steer jerked Claude head first across the arena, the ambling steed bringing up the rear. It was an exciting scene. The steer had one end of the lariat, the horse the other, and Claude was suspended between them in the hands of friends.

Sometimes the steer would jerk and then the horse would retaliate. Then they would allow Claude to get his breath, and the exercises would be renewed. Finally the secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Texas Steers came in and cut the lariat.

Claude went home in a few days after this episode, wearing a look of chastened disappointment and human clothes.

At the Academy of Design at Cheyenne there may be seen a shrunken and emaciated suit of buck-skin clothes with short sleeves and Knickerbocker pantaloons, also a solid knot of blue ribbon. They are mementoes of Claude.

Young Authoress—"My dear, I want a heroine for my new novel. Can't you give me an idea?"

Her Husband—"Certainly, love. You want her to possess a combination of traits never before dreamed of, I suppose?"

"That's it, that's it. But it must be a combination calculated to make a man love her to distraction."

"I see. Well, in the first place she should be literary."

"Of course."

"The author of a book?"

"Just the thing; but how shall I make her entirely different from other literary ladies?"

"Have a look over her husband's wardrobe and sew on buttons before starting any new novels."

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

DEMOCRACY.

The Democratic policy of government has ever been a plain and practical administration of public affairs, based upon rigid accountability, and free from the incubus of unnecessary debt and taxation and unjust exactions of every kind.

That is Democracy and it is for the good of the people. In vindication of such distinguishing trait the battle flag of the Democratic party is nailed to the mast.

Of course, those gentlemen who believe in class distinction, in a magnificent government, decked and adorned for show, and extending an iron hand artfully gloved, a government wherein taxation is held to be the servant of privilege, and the prerogatives of consolidated wealth of far greater account than the individual rights of toiling industry, cannot support the party of Democracy, and should not, because between their opinions and aims and those of Democracy there is an impassable gulf.

Not so with the patriotic American masses, who look upon and value government in its truthful character of a genial and protecting friend, not an imperious master. They stand ready to support and defend a government of the people, and only ask that the simplicity, fidelity and efficiency provided by its founders may be strictly maintained, and a free and equal chance be given for all legitimate interests to flourish and safely enjoy the fruits of honest labor.

That is Democracy.

ENGLAND AND THE SOUDAN.

The area of the colonial possessions of England is about 8,500,000 square miles, or equal to that of the Russian Empire.

When the fact is considered that all, or nearly all of that vast domain was brought under British rule by conquest, or by treaties conquest based, and most of it through military power unjustifiably exerted, shame clouded is the glory of England.

Conquered, not purchased, is her faulty title.

What a nobler and far different record the United States can show—Louisiana purchased of France, Florida of Spain, California and New Mexico of Mexico, Alaska of Russia, and all paid for honestly in cash.

Our title is clear and just.

Still England hungers for more conquered territory. Her present war in the Soudan, a realm stretching far southward towards Equatorial Africa, means, if successful, an additional boom to the arrogant boast that the martial drum-beat of old England keeps company with the rising sun.

The fiery hordes of El Mahdi may bar her designs.

What business has military England in the Soudan?

Justice sternly replies None!

If, in lieu of the thousands of lives that will surely be lost and the millions of money squandered in that uncalled for Egyptian conquest, England concentrated her might near home by improving the condition of oppressed Ireland, humanity would be joyous and nineteenth century civilization respected.

SILENT ELOQUENCE.

Inanimate things oft times possess the power of awakening profitable meditation, fully equal to the spoken word or written essay.

There is a notable proof of that in the recent journey of an old cracked bell from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, to the New Orleans Exposition.

Why did thousands of people assemble at the various stations along the route of transportation and gaze with intensity of interest upon that old cracked bell? Its silvery tones were hushed. It could no longer arouse popular enthusiasm by pealing forth soul-stirring music. Yet, dumb as it was and rusted with age, it uttered silent eloquence, no less effective than the burning oratory of Patrick Henry when from Southern soil he hurled defiance at the minions of a British King and urged battling on for liberty or death.

That bell has a glorious history. It links the present with the patriotic past. When the Declaration of Independence was adopted in 1776, from lofty belfry that grand old clarion proclaimed—"Liberty throughout the land and to all the inhabitants thereof."

That is why such vast audiences greeted with joyous emotion its presence. It is a relic of the Revolution. It heralded the act that finally transformed thirteen weak and struggling Colonies into a strong armed Union of almost two score peacefully independent States. It silently attests the cost of securing Independence, and bids the American people of to-day remember that the foremost duty of loyal citizenship is to cultivate national harmony, and preserve and transmit unharmed to the latest generations the blessings of freedom.

A swaying influence may abide in voiceless eloquence.

Experts have decided that the City Treasurer's accounts, of Trenton, are correct, rumors to the contrary having called for an examination.

Ex-Congressman Lewis A. Brigham, who was a member of the 42d Congress from the Fifth District of this State, died at his residence in Jersey City on Thursday night.

Lay Judge John M. Garretson, of Somerset county, died at his home near Ten-mile Run, on Monday last, of kidney trouble. He was appointed Lay Judge in 1878. He was highly esteemed by the community in which he lived.

The Yonkers carpet-weaving girls, to the number of 2500, are out on a strike, and as they confess they do not know why they quit work, nor upon what terms they will return to their employers, and seem merely to be enjoying a general picnic with a month's wages in their pockets, this remarkable revolt may fairly be set down as a striking performance.

Judge Knapp has decided in the appeal case taken in the Hudson County Supreme Court, regarding the disputed election case of Charles Rub, Democrat, and Frederick Frambach, Republican, that the Legislature alone had the power to go behind the count, which must stand as first reported, therefore Rub is entitled to his seat in the House of Assembly.

TO THE INAUGURATION.

There is every indication now of a large travel to Washington, on the occasion of the Inauguration of the President. Citizens from all parts of the country will take part in the interesting ceremonies and aid in making the event a memorable one. The inaugural procession will be grand and imposing, and the ball promises to be a brilliant affair. Ample provision has been made for the accommodation of all visitors. The Pennsylvania Railroad company is fully prepared to transport the large number of passengers who will be attracted to the Capitol, from points all along its system. Almost unlimited facilities of transportation, and a station on Penn avenue in the very heart of the city, renders the company fully equal to the task of handling, in the most satisfactory manner, its thousands of patrons. Excursion tickets will be sold on March 2, 3 and 4, good to return until the 7th, from all stations on the Pennsylvania railroad, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad, Northern Central railway, Philadelphia and Erie railroad, West Jersey and Camden and Atlantic railroads, at greatly reduced rates. From Baltimore and all points south thereof, on the Baltimore and Potomac and Alexandria and Fredericksburg railroads, excursion tickets will be sold on the 3d and 4th, good to return until the 5th. For full and detailed information, apply to local agents of the Pennsylvania railroad and its branches.

DEDICATING WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Saturday last was a red letter day in the history of our country. A monument in memory of the immortal Washington was then dedicated with appropriate ceremonies at the Capitol seat. We have before given a description of this national honor, and again re-produce it. The monument dedicated last Saturday is the highest monument in the world, its cap stone being 555 feet above the ground. It stands on a spot approved by President Washington in 1791, and can be seen from all parts within twenty miles of the elevated spot of ground on which it is erected. The corner-stone was laid July 4, 1848, when Robert Winthrop, then Speaker of the House of Representatives, made the principal address. The cap-stone was put in position Dec. 6, 1884. The entire cost of the monument was $1,187,710, and of this sum Congress contributed $900,000. At its base the obelisk measures 55 feet square and the walls are 15 feet thick and at the roof 7 inches thick. The pyramidal top begins at the 500-foot mark, where the dimensions are 34 feet 6 inches. The roof is 55 feet high, the weight of the crown-piece is 3,300 pounds, and the weight of the entire shaft is 82,000 tons. The area covered by the foundation is 16,002 square feet; the sub-foundation is composed of Portland cement concrete, 15,000 barrels of which were used in the work. The visitor finds comfortable means of ascent to the summit from within the monument. An iron stairway of 900 steps and an elevator of seven tons capacity are provided for this purpose.

GLEANINGS.

Gen. William F. Rogers, present member of Congress from New York State, is anxious to be Public Printer at Washington. Reports say he will resign his position as Congressman to take said position.

Lulu Hurst now attributes the loss of her magnetic power to the fact of her having been interviewed by pretty much all the reporters in the country, but then the newspapers took all the magnetism out of the man up in Maine.

A Cincinnati girl danced from early twilight until 2 o'clock in the morning, and then dropped dead at her partner's feet. The young man secured another girl and went on with the "mazy waltz," without dropping a note or losing a step.

The North Carolina negro who fired a bullet into his mouth, thinking the pistol had only a blank cartridge, and then played the fiddle at a ball until midnight with the bullet in his head, ought to join the British forces in the Soudan.

Phillips Brooks, of Boston, boasts that he never yet has employed the professional assistance of a lawyer or a doctor, and as he is 6¼ feet high and weighs 275 pounds, he has not yet called in the help of Prof. John L. Sullivan.

A company has been incorporated in New York for the manufacture of instruments to be used in telegraphing with cars and railway trains while in motion. The connections are formed through the rails and upon which the car runs.

The man who discovered one of the richest silver mines in Leadville received $40,000 for his find, and the two purchasers made $1,000,000 each within a year. The discoverer applied recently for a night's lodging in a Leadville station house.

Alexander Mitchell, of Milwaukee, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad system, and a prospective Secretary of the Treasury, is worth $26,000,000. He went to Milwaukee a poor boy, and got his start in life as a brewer.

Ostrich farming in South Africa has advanced with such strides that the number of tame birds there is estimated to have increased from eighty in 1865 to at least 70,000 in 1884, producing feathers for export of the value of about $3,000,000 per annum.

The seacoast of California has been visited this season by several varieties of birds which have never before been known to leave the mountains. This has generally been supposed to indicate a severe winter, but according to Science, the migration is more probably due to the prevailing scarcity of all kinds of seeds in the mountains this season.

The once famous Peaks, the bell-ringers, or what there is left of the family, to-wit, the old man and the old woman, respectively seventy-six and seventy-five years old, are now in the Cortlandt County Poor-House and are dependent upon public charity for food. Thus the Peaks who were once at the top are now near the bottom, and as they were for years efficient workers with John B. Gough in the temperance cause, and did great service in persuading thousands to sign the pledge, it would seem as if those who persist in putting down St. John might assist in putting up the Peaks, or at all events in putting up something for them.

The Marvin Safe Company's Factory on West 37th street, N. Y. city, was totally destroyed by fire on Thursday morning last, involving a loss of $240,000, on which there was an insurance of only about $125,000. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been from spontaneous combustion.

STATE ITEMS.

The New Brunswick Hosiery Company has presented $250 to the firemen who worked at the recent fire. Janeway and Co. also contributed $150.

It is stated that Receiver Wilkinson, of the defunct Newark Savings Institution, has declared that he could dispose of the assets of the institution in his hands at a discount of 25 per cent. from the valuation of the appraisers and realize a sum sufficient to leave a surplus of $80,000 after paying off all the old accounts and indebtedness.

A new and very handsome and powerful engine has been placed on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. All of the locomotive's machinery is on the outside and in full view. Recently the engine, attached to a passenger train, while on its way to Jersey City, and when between Easton and Metuchen, was "let out," and made three miles at the rate of fifty-six seconds per mile, and one single mile in fifty-seven seconds.

Harmon H. Reed, a well known farmer, residing near South Branch, had a public sale of his farming goods on Thursday of last week. A shepherd dog had just been put up, and Mr. Reed bid $9.50 to start it. Some one else bid $9.60 and, the owner said to Auctioneer Hope "Let him have it," and then dropped to the ground dead. Mr. Reed was a son of Joseph Reed, who still lives in that vicinity. He leaves a widow and children.

Matthias Vandyke Cruser, of Rocky Hill, one of the oldest residents of the place, is dead at the age of 91 years. "Uncle Dike," as he was called, was for two-thirds of a century the great fisherman and gunner of Central New Jersey. He could find foxes and kill them when no other marksmen could. Parties from abroad in quest of fishing and hunting sport frequently enlisted his services. He and his wife, who survives him, recently celebrated the 60th anniversary of their wedding. Three sons and two daughters are also left to mourn the old man's loss.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

The Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias of New Jersey, held its annual meeting last week. The following Grand Officers were elected: G. Chancellor, John Miller; G. V. C., James E. Moon; G. P., Henry Housel; G. M. of Ex., Jacob P. Fowler; G. K. of R. & S., Eugene V. Lorton, and G. M. at A., Wm. B. Ludlam; G. I. G., A. B. Race; G. O. G., Joseph Shephard; D. D. G. C. for this district, John H. Carney, of Plainfield. The time of meeting was changed from the third Wednesday in February to the first Wednesday in December. During the past year the membership in the State has increased 541. The amount paid for relief during the year was $33,000.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Governor Abbett sent two vetoes in to the Senate and one in to the House on Tuesday. One of the Senate measures vetoed sought to strip the State Board of Education of its power of appointing County Superintendents of Public Instruction, vesting it wholly in the Boards of Chosen Freeholders in the different counties. The State Board of Education is composed of the Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney-General, Comptroller, President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, together with the Trustees of the State Normal School.

"To take away this power from such a body of men," declares the Governor, "and vest it in a body elected without reference to their special fitness to deal with the question would be a dangerous experiment." There will be a strong effort made to pass the bill over the Governor's veto. The House measure vetoed was with reference to cemetery companies. It provides that one-half the receipts from the sale of lots shall go toward the embellishment of the cemetery and the other half to the stockholders—really the original land owners. The laws of the State exempt cemetery property from taxation. The Governor declared that this bill allowed speculation in cemetery property and he claimed that speculative cemetery enterprises should be as amenable to the laws of taxation as any other speculative enterprises. He also vetoed an act regulating the manner of appointment and removal of certain officials therein. This veto was based on purely constitutional grounds, declaring it was not an honest classification, but a specification.

The Senate in executive session Tuesday morning received the following appointments from the Governor: For Judge of the Warren County Common Pleas, Uzal Canfield; for Prosecutor of the Pleas of Bergen county, Abraham D. Campbell, re-appointed.

Senator Griggs severely attacked a bill on Tuesday which compels the study of the liquor and tobacco questions in every public school in the State. He declared that the act was so worded that only the publications of A. S. Barnes & Co. could be used, and the State would require a supply of 300,000 books. After amending this feature of the bill it was laid over till Wednesday afternoon. There was a long debate in the House Tuesday afternoon over the adverse report of the committee of Senator Nichols's concurrent resolution submitting to a vote of the people an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the manufacture or sale, or keeping for sale, of any alcoholic or intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, and regulating by law the manufacture and sale of such liquors other than as a beverage. The adverse report was sustained by a vote of 37 to 21.

Assemblyman Vetterlein on Tuesday introduced two bills into the House as follows—292, provides for a detail of two firemen at each place of amusement to watch for fires and to guard against false alarms during each performance, their compensation to be thirty cents an hour, to be paid by the proprietors of the theatre, and the detail to be made by the chief of the fire department. 293, increasing the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace to $200.

Senate bill 38, providing for the appointment of a law judge in Somerset county, passed that body on Tuesday last.

The Senate has agreed to adjourn sine die March 20th. The Hygienic text-book bill passed the Senate on Wednesday.

Before the next issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, Providence permitting, Grover Cleveland will have been inaugurated President of these United States, and the reins of our Government once more placed in hands of Democratic management. Let us hope that the Democracy have gained wisdom in their twenty-four years of exile and that the administration of the next four years will be one the people can point to with pride. We are confident such will be the case.

Plainfield City Directory For 1885-86.

The very favorable reception accorded the last edition of Boyd's Plainfield Directory for 1883-4 has induced the publisher to commence the canvass for his new work for the years 1885-6. This volume will contain a complete, general and business directory of Plainfield, Somerville, Bound Brook, Raritan, etc., and a large list of farmers having business connections with the community of these several towns. Other full and exact information, official, municipal and statistical, concerning each city and town will be given, thus affording ample, yet well digested details of everything regarding them likely to be of interest or value to those seeking information. In a word the publishers intend making this publication so valuable as will entitle it to the support of all business men hereabout.

Madam Jarley at Netherwood.

There was a large gathering of guests and friends from the immediate neighborhood at Hotel Netherwood last Friday evening, to participate in the enjoyments consequent upon Madam Jarley's entertainment. The characters were all well assumed and acted. After the exhibition there was music and dancing, and a most enjoyable time experienced. The following was the programme:

PROGRAMME.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The meeting this week, Friday, will be a "social," and we would advise every member to be present.

Library of 1500 volumes open from 2 to 10 p. m., books of reference, etc. Young men always welcome.

The Ladies' Auxiliary have recently taken hold of the Junior Society of the Boys Branch with good success.

At one of the meetings a short time ago, Mrs. Coard, president of the Band of Hope, gave the boys a very interesting talk, and it is to be hoped she can be secured again.

Next Tuesday evening, March 3d, Mr. Ernest Knauff will talk to the Society on "art." Mr. Knauff is "art critic" on one of the leading N. Y. dailies and is well fitted for this work.

We would call attention to the reading room open every week day from 9 to 12 a. m., and from 2 to 10 p. m., supplied with all the leading daily, weekly and monthly publications. Also chess, checkers and other games.

The Senior Society of the Boys Branch are in a flourishing condition. Dr. Tomlinson delivered a talk before them on Friday, Feb. 13th, taking for his subject "How to preserve the body." It was very interesting and was listened to with marked attention.

The outpost meetings at Mt. Pleasant and Washingtonville were omitted last Sunday evening on account of the Union services. The young men's meeting held on Monday evening has also been omitted the past three weeks, the committee having felt that it was better to join in with the churches.

Reform Club Anniversary.

Sunday and Monday last were red letter days for the Plainfield Reform Club, Sunday being the anniversary of the formation of the club. Mabee and English, the great temperance reformers, were present at the Reform Club rooms on Sunday afternoon, where interesting exercises were held. Rev. A. H. Tuttle of the M. E. church, opened the services by prayer. He was followed by President French, who gave a review of the past year's work. Mr. Burnett, cornetist, Mrs. Burnett, accompanist, Mr. English, Mr. and Mrs. Mabee then rendered some excellent music, after which Mr. Mabee addressed the large audience present. After more singing by Mr. English and the choir, that gentleman in his impassioned manner delivered one of his soul-stirring addresses, during which he heartily congratulated the Reform Club on the good work performed by them the past year in the cause of temperance. In the evening, the First Baptist church was crowded to overflowing to listen to the great temperance workers. Rev. Dr. Yerkes opened the exercises with prayer, after which Mr. Mabee held his listeners spell-bound with his remarks for a considerable time. Mr. English added to the evening's interest by temperance songs, accompanied on the organ. Rev. Dr. Lewis also made some telling remarks for the temperance cause. Ex-Mayor Marsoo and President French were also among the speakers of the evening. Two persons, a young man and miss, came forward and signed the pledge. There was an overflow meeting held in the M. E. church, conducted by Rev. Dr. Hurlbut. Monday afternoon another large meeting was held in Reform Club Hall, presided over by Mr. Mabee. This meeting was under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., and much interest was manifested therein. In the evening there was another large gathering at the First Baptist church to listen to these great reformers, and when it was announced that there was a debt of $900 hanging over the club, it needed only a short appeal to meet with a ready response in liquidating this debt. The entire sum was raised in a few moments and the club is now out of debt. Seven persons came forward and signed their names to the pledge.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

A surprise party was held at the residence of Mr Albert Drake on Monday evening last.

Mr. William Farrier will take possession of his new purchase, the Blackford property, on March 1st.

A social in aid of the Baptist church was held at the residence of Mr. Lloyd S. Nelson last Thursday evening.

The pamphlet containing an account of the finances of the township of Piscataway for the year ending Feb. 11, 1885, has been issued.

Mr. Robert Pierce will vacate the house owned by Mr. Eugene Runyon, which is offered for rent, and has not found a tenant yet.

Notwithstanding the talk of the want of employment, it is a fact, if you want to hire a man of all work in this neighborhood, you cannot find one.

Mr. Charles Ward of Plainfield, has opened a general store in the Titsworth place, and enters into competition for a share of public patronage.

Mr. J. P. Benbrook will remove to Orange next week, leaving a vacancy and an excellent opening for a painter, decorator and paper hanger, of which we shall have none.

Mr. Frank Ransom has put in another new press. "The Universal" making three in all, in his Dye Works Printing establishment. He is shortly to introduce steam power to run them with.

Washington's birthday passed without recognition. The scholars of the public school assembled as usual but were dismissed. Did the school officials forget it was a public holiday and omit to notify their teachers?

Mr. Ryno will remove into the house now occupied by Mr. Harrold; Mr. Kelly will take possession of the dwelling now occupied by Mr. Farrier, and Mr. Charles Ward will instal his family in the residence now occupied by Mr. Kelly.

Lenten services were announced and commenced on Ash Wednesday in Holy Innocents church, on Sunday morning last, the subject of discourse being "A Lenten Prayer," one of six sermons from the "Parable of the Sower." The card issued calls this church at Dunellen; if it is in Dunellen, then there is no New Market. Why not call things by their proper names? Is New Market too high toned for Dunellen residents?

The past week has been the most severe one of the season, the thermometer playing around zero and making traveling both difficult and uncomfortable. The sidewalks were not cleared after the last storm, at least only so far towards us as the road master of Dunellen came, our road master being absent, and no deputy doing the work that is as essential for the comfort of the taxpayers as any money ever expended. The road master did wake up to the exigencies of the occasion after Tuesday night's snow fall, by sending the snow-plow out to clear the sidewalks.

BROAD BRIM.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Andy claims first water over the chimney.

The dog lawsuit before Justice Jaques last Monday was settled without trial.

At a special meeting of Empire Engine Co., No. 2, held on Tuesday evening, Frank R. Pennington received the nomination for chief, and A. Z. Chambers for second assistant.

Our residents who use the sidewalk on Elm street to the depot, should not forget that Mr. John Knapp keeps them clear of snow and ice. Every dime and quarter would be thankfully received.

Any of the residents of our town wishing to attend the entertainments at Music Hall, Plainfield, can secure their seats in advance by calling upon Mr. Neighbor, the telegraph operator at the depot. Doc. is ready and willing to get their tickets for them.

On Monday morning last, the small shop and wagon shed near Parkhurst's Mill, was destroyed by fire. The Parkhurst Bros. besides losing the building, had a mowing machine and three plows burned. The building caught fire from a stove in the room, which the colored men working for Mr. Parkhurst occupied.

The following letters are advertised in post office: A. C. Clark; Miss O. French, Lucy Stanway Jenkson, E. P. McCann, Fred Milton, Geo. Ordleb, (3) Miss Susan Sever, Robert Sanders, Clark Scudder, Miss Ann H. Taylor, Mrs. Willibis, J. B. Crawford, Genevefa Scherf, Maggie E. Curtis, Mrs. Annie Williams, Hattie H. Avis, Mrs. William Simpson, Charlie Weaver.

It will no doubt be of interest to our residents and taxpayers to know in which road district they reside. The following are the districts as designated by the Township Committee at their late meeting, under the act of the Legislature passed at the present session. They have made some slight alterations in a few of the districts: Road district No. 1 shall include Springfield road past Wm. Schoonovers, to Springfield township line, the road past John T. SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

During the firemen's dinner here on the 23d, some malicious miscreant cut the traces of the team of Zephyr Hook & Ladder Company. Unsparing efforts will be made to discover the scamp.

The minstrel entertainment given Saturday evening, Feb. 21st, for the building fund of Excelsior H. & L. Co., brought out a full house. The very liberal promises of the programme were fulfilled with great fidelity. Good music, amusing dialogues and sketches were rendered with more than amateur ability. The musical direction was ably supplied by Mr. T. J. Nicholl. Mr. T. A. Gore assumed the sable dignity of "middle-man," with his usual success, and the entertaining drolleries of the end-men, Messrs. W. R. Stanberry and J. G. MacNair, were received with delight and applause. "The Banjo Lesson," between J. E. Miller and J. G. MacNair, could be rated professionally excellent. The "Trained Elephant," a very mirthful sketch, arranged by Mr. T. A. Gore, was performed uncommonly well by Messrs. C. J. Nicholl, J. B. Martine, Charley Cooper and J. G. MacNair (elephant). Mr. H. B. Rowe assisted with several comical recitations and sweet melodies, showing him to be a performer of unusual versatility. The entertainment concluded with an original extravaganza written by Mr. T. G. Henshew, "The Crazy Quilt," in which the entire company participated, introducing the opera, drama and ballet in gorgeously grotesque and picturesque patches.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla
Is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier that can be used. It invariably expels all blood poisons from the system, enriches and renews the blood, and restores its vitalizing power. It is the best known remedy for Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin, as also for all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood, such as Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, and Scrofulous Catarrh.
Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.
"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years.

TOWNSHIP elections March 10th.

THE charter election of Rahway comes off April 14th.

REGULAR monthly meeting of Common Council next Monday evening.

NOT an arrest on Washington's birthday in Plainfield. Cleveland is President.

THE "Boroughites" of North Plainfield say that they shall "try it again" as soon as the law allows them to do so.

ISAAC MELBOURNE sold two houses situated on Ninth street and Third place, on Wednesday last, to Mr. Lebbeus Martin.

TUESDAY evening, March 10th, will be an event in Music Hall. The well-known musical director, Thomas, is then expected to appear with a full orchestra.

THE team of Zephyr H. & L. Co., No. 1, are engaged in hauling brick from the depot to the new rink to be erected on Broadway. The contract calls for the carting of 50,000 brick.

NORTH PLAINFIELD is to have another excitement shortly. On the 10th of March the Township election comes off. Already the warriors on both sides are girding on their armor.

LAURENCE PAOLI, the North avenue peanut merchant, will in the Spring erect a three-story brick building on the lot adjoining his present location, and recently purchased by him of Cook Bros.

THE March Century has followed the example of its recent predecessors and gone out of print,—this time within two days of issue. A second edition of 35,000 is on the press, making the total 225,000.

THERE was an effort made to oust the old Board of Directors of the Somerset Agricultural Association at the annual election last week. The old Directors were, however, "too many" for the movers in the scheme and consequently were re-elected.

NATE LAING captured a species of wild duck in a snow drift on Park avenue last Saturday morning. The bird was floundering about unable to fly. It had probably been driven inland from its native waters by the recent severe gales and had become exhausted.

THE advertisement of John Ross & Son appears in this issue. They claim, with good reason, to have clear and pure ice, free from sewerage or road filth. The pond from which their ice is cut is located just off Park avenue and is formed from springs of pure water.

MUSIC Hall was crowded last Monday evening to witness the rendition of Uncle Tom's Cabin. The play was under the management of Mr. Mattox, property-man. We are pleased to learn that he netted a handsome and deserved sum from the "benefit."

MR. JOHN WILSON has purchased and is putting in position a twelve horse-power boiler and engine at his stone crusher works in North Plainfield. With two steam stone crushers, material ought to be cheap enough to admit of macadamizing all our thoroughfares.

THE Park House has again changed hands. The new proprietor is Mr. Hopkins, an old New York hotel man. In the retirement of Mr. Johnson, who has so ably conducted the Park House the past year, his many friends wish him success in any new venture he may undertake.

SOME people pay no attention to the ordinance requiring them to clear their sidewalks of snow within a limited time, while others obey the law with alacrity. The latter receives the praises of the pedestrians, the former the execrations. Why, oh, why, is not the law enforced in this matter.

THIS cold weather cannot last much longer, and then you will be wanting Spring clothing. There is no need of going out of town for such goods. Go to Alex. Titsworth's, 41 West Front street, where you will find all the latest and fashionable styles of Spring and Summer wear. Garments cut and guaranteed in the most fashionable style and at reasonable prices.

VERY decided improvements have recently been made in Force's Hotel, by painting and papering. That part of this popular Hotel, presided over by Mr. Isaac Bowman, where the thirsty go to be relieved, has undergone a wonderful change through the manipulation of Mr. Isaac Squiers, painter and paper hanger. Other improvements are soon to be made to accommodate the increasing patronage of this House.

WE are in receipt of the Columbus, Ohio Register, forwarded us by our friend James Frazee, once a resident of this city and proprietor of the "Rock House" and now residing at Columbus. From the Register columns we notice that the names of old residents of that vicinity, who voted for Jackson as well as Cleveland are being hunted up. The roster of Morrow county, Ohio, now foots up sixty-two of these old partriarchs. It is proposed by the Democrats of that county to give them a grand dinner on the fourth March. Hunterdon county, this State "takes the biscuit" however for its number of Jackson veterans, 114 of them being thus far heard from.

AN ugly rumor was circulated last week relative to the present Postmaster of New Brunswick, John F. Babcock, a veteran newspaper man. We are pleased to reproduce the following item relative thereto, clipped from last Sunday World:

> "Postmaster Babcock, of New Brunswick, returned from Washington yesterday. In regard to the report in this morning's papers that he is a defaulter, he says: "I hold in my possession official vouchers that the difference between the Auditor of the Post Office Department and myself is but $1,395, a sum overpaid by me on orders of the department, but since disallowed. The Auditor of the Post Office will verify this statement."

On Tuesday last the President nominated Robert Carson Postmaster in place of Mr. Babcock.

A Free Ride.

Last Friday morning conductor Hibler noticed a little girl sitting complacently in a seat of one of the cars of his train as it was speeding toward New York after leaving the Plainfield depot. She could give no account of herself only that she was taking a ride. "Billy" took the little one to the end of his route, and brought her back with him on his return trip. At Elizabeth Mr. David S. Campbell, of North Plainfield, who teaches a district school in the vicinity of Fanwood, boarded the train and at once recognized the little one as Gracie, the four-year-old daughter of Peter Emmons, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, and took charge of her, conveying her to her anxious mother, who, in the meantime, was assiduously inquiring about her missing offspring all over the neighborhood. The little one was delighted with her trip. How she managed to get aboard the train is a mystery.

The Sparrow Must Go.

Both branches of the Legislature have passed the bill excluding the sparrow from all protection of law.

The Boom Continues.

Real estate agent M. M. Thorn has within the past three days sold and made transfers of property in this city, aggregating in value $27,000.

No Bonds For Them.

Both of Plainfield's representatives at Trenton, Senator Livingston andAssemblyman Kirkner are against any bill which smacks of bonds. They vote against such measures every time.

Trouble Never Comes Singly.

On the evening of the birthday of the Father of his Country Squire Mattison of North Plainfield united in the holy bonds of matrimony a young couple of this city and the following morning issued a warrant for the groom's arrest in a semi-civil suit begun by a young girl through the overseer of the poor of this city. He was put under bonds.

Children's Home Association.

From the eighth annual statement of the Plainfield Children's Home Association, for the year ending Dec. 1884, we glean that the institution is in a flourishing condition. The receipts for the past year have been $2,313.44, and expenditures $1,704.31, leaving a balance of $609.13 in the Treasury. There are now in the Home 24 dependents. This institution is ably managed and should meet with ready support from the public by contributions.

Washington's Birthday

Was celebrated on Feb. 23d, in this city, by a general suspension of business. During the forenoon, Mr. Thomas McDonald, a veteran of the late war, fired a salute of forty guns from the brass piece of the Plainfield Artillery Company. Generous citizens assisted him in his laudable efforts by contributions to procure powder. "Tom" is too patriotic to even let the event of Washington's birthday go by without letting the people know it in firing a salute in honor of the day.

Prof. John Fiske.

In consequence of the Denman Thompson performance at Music Hall Saturday evening, Feb. 28th, the date of the first lecture of the course of thirteen, advertised to be given by Prof. Fiske on the "American Revolution," has been set down for Saturday evening, March 7th.—These lectures are highly spoken of and the name of Prof. Fiske should be a sufficient guarantee to ensure full houses on the occasion of each lecture. The tickets are $3,00 for the course. The lectures will be delivered every Monday and Saturday until the completion of the course.

Sale of Valuable Real Estate.

At the sale of the "Norwood" property, on Front street, last Monday, there was much interest manifested. Mr. S. Milliken, Jr., secured the lots on the south-east corner of Front and Richmond streets, 157 feet frontage on Front street, with 150 feet depth, for $2,725. Ex-Councilman John Cameron purchased a plot on the north-east corner of above streets, 105 feet frontage, by 300 feet depth, for $3,275. Mr. Ford. Fish was the purchaser of 75 feet frontage, adjoining Mr. Cameron, for $1,750. Other lots were sold to New York parties, and the sale was adjourned to next month, due notice of which will be given. The purchasers of above property have bargains.

The Last Entertainment

Of the Y. M. C. A. course, Thursday evening, March 5th; promises to be something grand. Mr. H. H. Ragan will then deliver his lecture on "Paris, the Magnificent," to be illustrated by a powerful stereopticon. The popularity of Mr. Ragan's lectures are such as to call together large and enthusiastic audiences. Dr. J. H. Vincent, whom every one knows in this vicinity, writes as follows about the lecturer: "For brilliancy of illustration, for elegance of diction, for charming style of delivery, and for fullness of instruction, Mr. Ragan's lectures are pronounced by old and cultivated Chautauquans unsurpassed since the very beginning of the Chautauqua Institution." Secure your reserved seat at Reynolds' pharmacy.

Fire at Netherwood.

About ten o'clock Thursday night last flames were discovered issuing from the handsome residence of Mr. Wilton Randolph, on Belvidere avenue, near the Netherwood Hotel. The alarm brought out the department in a short time, and the excellent speed made in reaching the scene shows what an advantage horses are hitched to an apparatus. The distance was full a mile and quarter. Water was procured from the large cistern adjoining the hotel, and for four hours No. 1 engine remained at the scene until the water was exhausted. After working awhile No. 2 engine was ordered home, to be ready in case another fire should break out. The truck company did good service in pulling apart the burning building, while "Alert's" hose was used in the long line. The building was entirely destroyed with all the fine furniture. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Randolph was at a lodge meeting in this city, while his family was absent on a visit. A student's lamp left burning in the room may have been the cause of the fire. The loss is estimated at $10,000. We learn that there is about $9000 insurance on house and furniture.

While assisting to unreel hose, James Martin, a member of No. 1 engine, had his hand badly injured in the gearing of the apparatus.

Personalia.

Mrs. Joseph N. Randolph, of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, is dangerously ill at her residence.

Mrs. Peter H. See, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, is in a critical condition on account of a severe attack of pneumonia.

Miss Anna L. Borst, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, has returned from a three months visit among friends in the Keystone state.

Mr. Horatio S. Bilyeu, a former resident of North Plainfield, informs us through the Florida press, that he is now located at Emporia, Florida.

The numerous friends of Miss Sadie Haines, daughter of Mr. Joseph Haines, freight agent, at our depot, will be pained to learn of her serious illness by reason of fever.

The Supreme Court for Attorneys and Counsellors' degrees closed last Thursday at Trenton. Among the successful applicants was Mr. William K. McClure of this city. We congratulate you "Billy" on your success.

Isaac F. Cooley, the father of Martin I. Cooley, of the dry goods firm of Bates, Reed & Cooley, a resident of North Plainfield, died Thursday of last week at his home near Greenwood Lake. Mr. Cooley was eighty-four years old and was a native of New Jersey. He was all of his life a farmer, living quietly and taking no part in public life, except in 1861 and 1862, when he served in the Legislature as an Assemblyman.

The many friends of Rev. John C. Bliss, former pastor of the Crescent avenue church will be pleased to learn that their beloved associate was not seriously injured in a railroad accident as reported in the prominent daily papers. The following is from last Sunday's World:

> "Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss, of Philadelphia, who was reported as having been seriously injured in the railroad accident at Four-Mile Run, Va., has arrived at his home. He sustained but slight injuries."

Temperance Institute.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth will hold a Temperance Institute in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, of this city, on Tuesday, March 3d, 1885. The committee having the matter in charge are Revs. W. E. Honeyman, W. H. Sampson of this city, and N. W. Cadwell of Westfield. The pastor of the Institute is Rev. W. R. Richards. Meetings will be held at 1 a. m. and 2 p. m., and 7:45 p. m. The programme selected is an interesting and instructive one.

Revival Services.

The interesting revival services of the W. C. T. U. will be continued in Reform Hall next Sunday at 4 o'clock, p. m. An account of a gospel meeting will be given which was held by the W. C. T. U. of Newark, N. J., in Essex county jail in that city nine years ago, being the first meeting ever held by them in the jail, and which has been continued once a week ever since with remarkable results. Recently converted persons will also be given an opportunity to speak of the new change in their life. Unconverted persons, and especially those addicted to strong drink are especially invited to this meeting. Good singing by Mr. Dunham's choristers.

Young People's Association.

Despite the fact that other and numerous attractions have been offered the public the past winter, by reason of the Music Hall, Y. M. C. A. entertainments, etc., the Young People's Association of the Park avenue Baptist church, have fulfilled their promises and given a series of entertainments both instructive and pleasant, as announced early in the season. Their last of the course, the Valencia Orchestra, was fairly attended despite other attractions that night, (Feb. 19) and the concert good in every particular. Under such adverse circumstances as quoted above, the course was not a success financially, nevertheless, those who did attend were well repaid and pleased.

Sensational Journalism.

It is too often the case that sensational journals publish incorrectly, and even maliciously, statements about one thing or another in order to gain notoriety. Recently, a statement was published reflecting upon ex-Freeholder Daniel S. Cory, regarding the settlement of the estate of the late Jacob Adams, of North Plainfield. His son, Daniel C. Adams, has handed us the following card with a request to publish it:

> In justice to Daniel Cory, the administrator of the estate of my father, Jacob Adams, I would state that all reports implying dishonesty on his part in settling up the estate are base falsehoods, and further that the thinnest part of the story is that Anal Wendell is fighting in the interest of the heirs.
> Yours Respectfully,
> D. C. ADAMS.

Joshua Whitcomb.

The Music Hall management are to be congratulated upon the grand success attending their efforts the past few weeks in their endeavors to give the Plainfield public first-class entertainments by first-class artists. That they have succeeded in their efforts has been attested by the overflowing audiences at each entertainment, composed of the first-class element of our city. The next entertainment announced for the pleasure of the Plainfield public is that of the play, "Joshua Whitcomb," in which the celebrated actor, Denman Thompson, has made himself immortal. The Columbus Ohio News thus speaks of the piece:

> "Like the gurgle of a mountain brook or the first breath of spring, when sweet primroses peep out from their green beds, so is "Joshua Whitcomb," the New Hampshire farmer, in the hands of that superb character actor, Den. Thompson. It is a play of which the public never tires; it is so simple, so home-like, the very odor of clover and grasses that hang about Swanzey are transplanted to the stage, and we laugh and cry in quick succession at the intense yet natural situations with which it abounds. "Joshua Whitcomb" is not a play; it is as if, in which the mirror is held up to nature itself. Mr. Thompson is a native of Swanzey, "thirty miles from Keene," and all the characters he brings into the entertainment are taken from real life in his old New England home. His work is beyond criticism; he has long since been beyond the reach of the carping critic, and the writer who would attempt to pick any flaw in his work from the time he makes his first run to a fire until the curtain goes down on the happy company at Josh's farm, would at once advertise his ignorance of what true acting is."

Firemen and Fun.

Excelsior Hook & Ladder Co., No. 1, of Scotch Plains, celebrated Washington's birthday by testing the power of the hand engine that has been lodged with them by Gazelle company of Plainfield, to add to the protection of the village against fire. A large number of Plainfield and Westfield firemen were present and the Gazelle boys had the satisfaction of making the old machine send a strong stream of water from Green Brook, fully ten feet over a chimney sixty-three feet high at Harser, Hollingsworth & Darby's Fur Mill, ex-Chief T. O. Doane of Gazelle Engine Company having command. The Excelsiors were delighted with the achievements and manned the brakes themselves, and did equally good work. The presence of the apparatus will in all probability encourage the location of much needed cisterns, in the thickly built portion of the village. On the return to Excelsior Hall, the members and guests were invited to a most delicious and substantial spread, which was heartily enjoyed after the exercise in the keen winter air. Foreman T. J. Nicholl presided with his customary good taste and management, and many happy responses met his call. Veteran Alex. Titsworth of Plainfield delivered a masterly eulogy upon firemen; his closing remarks which described them as "heroes who willingly risk their lives for the safety of others and feeling abundantly compensated by success" were loudly applauded. Mr. Geo. R. Nicholl, foreman of Scotch Plains Bucket Company, No. 1, another time-honored fire-servant of this and New York State, gave an eloquent address upon the noble career of a fireman. He also kept in mind the day celebrated and closed his remarks with Byron's beautiful stanza to George Washington. The Rev. J. H. Parks, pastor of Scotch Plains Baptist church, also a member of Excelsior, paid a graceful tribute to the fire department generally and quite won the hearts of all present, when he said he derived his enthusiasm legitimately, as his father was at one time Chief Engineer of the N. Y. City Volunteer Fire Department. Plainfield and Westfield speakers congratulated the organization of Scotch Plains in a most fraternal manner. After the feasting and speaking, Mr. J. E. Miller, an amateur vocalist of decided merit, delighted the company with several choice songs; the "Irish Christening" provoked great merriment. Messrs. Wilbur and Flannery also sung very creditably. Mr. Jno. H. Carney's humorous recitation, "Patter of the Shingles," set every "table on a roar." A beautiful feature of the evening was Mr. T. G. Hanshew's recitation of "Shamus O'Brien." Mr. H. lost none of his popularity as an actor by his artistic rendition of the pathos, humor and description, for which the poem is famous. The meeting closed with the heartiest evidence of good feeling and many rounds of loud cheers. Among the guests the following Plainfield gentlemen were present: "War Horse" Brower, an ex-foreman of Excelsior, Fire Commissioner Cutter, Assistant Chiefs Smith and Saltzman, Foreman Moore, of Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, brother fireman Martin, Mumford, Corell, Becker, Stover and Miller. Westfield was represented in part by brothers Peek, Pennington, Seeley, Marsh, Chambers, Godschalk, Hart and French.

In Want and Sadly in Need of Assistance.

Joseph Stiles, a veteran of the late war, who has two honorable discharges from the service, one dated June 25th, 1863, and one June 13th, 1865, now lies sick and in extreme want for the necessaries of life at his hut on the mountain top in the vicinity of the Green Valley Mills in North Plainfield. Stiles has been sick for some months and his wife, who has a young child, is unable to provide for him. On Sunday last three members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., called at his home and were surprised at the poverty-stricken appearance there to be seen. Notwithstanding Stiles does not belong to the G. A. R., he undoubtedly will receive some assistance from them. Had it not been for the kindness of Mrs. Geo. Dembler, the unfortunate family would not have had anything to eat last Sunday. It is the duty of the North Plainfield authorities to assist them.

The Latest Rinkles.

"Little Tot" drew a large audience to witness her performances at the Casino Friday evening last.

Postmaster Benj. Little of Bound Brook, fell and broke his arm while practicing on the rollers at the Eureka Rink in that village on Friday night last.

The new Metropolitan Roller Skating Rink, at Newark, was opened on Thursday evening of last week. Master Hyde and Miss McKibben gave an exhibition of fancy skating.

The splendid floor of the Casino Rink has been holy-stoned under the direction of the new management. The floor was excellent before, but now there is none better in the State.

An exchange has an article on "The rise of the roller rink." This ought to confirm the theory of the young man new to the rollers that the floor flew up and hit him in the back of the neck.

At the skating carnival given in Temple Rink, Elizabeth, last Monday evening, Mr. John L. Force, of this city, was among the "specials" awarded gifts for his representation of a Chinaman.

Many were disappointed in not seeing the little skaters, Hyde and McKibbin, at the Casino last Friday evening. They are announced to appear there this (Friday) and to-morrow afternoon and evening.

There are said to be thirty thousand roller skating rinks in the United States. We don't see what this country needs of any more matrimonial agencies, then. Young people of both sexes fall together so easy in skating rinks, you know.

Bishop Mullen, of the diocese embracing Oil City, Pa., has condemned roller skating rinks, and pastors of Catholic churches have notified their flocks that sacrament will hereafter be denied to those visiting such places in future.

The popularity of roller skating rinks has been proof against reflection upon their morality and warnings against danger to health and limb. But if the latest charge—that the skating enlarges the feet—shall be established, it will be good-by rinks. The girls will never stand that.

The arrangements for the great international six days' go-as you please roller skating tournament at the Madison Square Garden, N. Y., are now completed, and the race will begin Monday, March 2. The list of entries is already very large, although it will not close till the 25th inst.

We do not tell it for a fact, but simply for what it is worth, to wit: A Flemington woman called upon a wealthy and benevolent gentleman and told a distressing tale of poverty. His feelings were touched and he gave the "poor" woman a ten dollar bill. Did she go and fool it away for bread? No; she went to the hardware store and bought her little girl a pair of roller skates at a cost of six dollars and a half.

A telegram from Cleveland, Ohio, last week announced that a well-known married lady of that vicinity who has long been a regular skater at the rink, was taken suddenly ill while skating and a physician was summoned. Her condition was apparent and a suggestion was made that her skates be removed. This she objected to positively, saying she had an engagement to waltz when the music began playing. A few minutes later she gave birth to twins.

Work is progressing favorably upon the Evan's rink on Broadway. When completed it will be the finest rink in New Jersey. The construction is in the hands of competent management, and as soon as weather permits, will be pushed to a speedy completion. Isaac Pangborn, the well-known builder, has the contract. The trenches for the foundations are nearly excavated through the efforts of the contractor, Mr. M. Undal. King Frost is the only obstacle to the speedy completion of this model building for pleasure.

Silver medals were awarded the successful competitors in two races at the Casino Rink last Friday evening. The first was for boys. George Blazier and Willie Miller were the contestants, and the distance one mile. Master Blazier won the race easily. The second race was for young men; one mile distance. The starters were Fred. S. Dunn, of Elizabeth, F. Conger, J. Utzinger and Chas. Greader, of Plainfield. Dunn outstripped all others at the outset, keeping the lead easily to the end, winning the race and medal by over half a lap. Conger came in second. The others dropped out in the early part of the race.

The new managers of the Casino contemplate radical changes in the interior of this celebrated rink. The feeling against the new management in consequence of the new rules adopted when they took possession, is gradually wearing away, and to-day one sees old and familiar faces as the many skaters glide by. The public are to be accommodated with more commodious dressing rooms, a smoking room, and better light by the addition of sixty-five gas jets along the sides of the rink. The Casino is gaining popularity every day under the management of Mr. Roswell Van Buskirk, Jr., Treasurer. Mr. H. McNamara, manager; Mr. Heath at the door, Harry Connett at the box office, and Charley Frace as instructor. Messrs. Dennis & Woglom, the proprietors, are to be congratulated upon such an able corps of employees.

Washington's birthday, or rather, when that event was celebrated, Feb. 23d, was well observed at the Casino. In the morning there was a large attendance of ladies and children. In the afternoon, each skater was presented with a bon bon. In the evening there was a banner parade, something new at this rink. Thirty-two couples skated around the floor. Boys were stationed at each end of the room. A disinterested person was blindfolded and stood at the post where the handle of the wire leading to the electric bell was suspended. At a given signal all the skaters moved around the rink, the banner being placed in the hands of a lady as she passed one of the boys. As this lady approached the boy at the other end of the room, she gave him the banner. He in turn passed it to the next lady passing him, and so on as each lady skater passed the boys. After the blindfolded judge had counted six hundred, he rang the electric bell. The lady then holding the banner was entitled to the prize, which consisted of a five pound package of Heyler's candies, put up in neat shape in a basket, accompanied with gold finger tongs. The fortunate winner was Miss Minnie M. Arnold, of North Plainfield, daughter of James K. Arnold. Her partner was Mr. William Angleman. The judge was Mr. James E. Bailey.

OBITUARY.

ALFRED BERRY.

In the death of Alfred Berry, Plainfield has lost one of its best citizens. His demise was not unexpected by those most intimate with him and his ailments. When he took to his bed some weeks ago, he remarked to a friend that he was "worn out," and we, who hold his memory in high esteem, are of the same opinion. He had led an active life for many years, was the friend of the poor and needy, and honest in all his intentions and dealings. Such an active life as he pursued would wear out any mortal in time.

Alfred Berry was born at Dover, Morris county, New Jersey, January 19, 1812. In his younger days he earned his living as a "yankee notion" peddler, traveling through Morris and adjoining counties. He came to town in 1832 and engaged as clerk in store of B. & R. Stelle, then doing business on the site where Joseph S. Cutter's building is now located. In 1836 he formed a co-partnership with the late Alexander Dunham, in the dry goods and grocery business, the location of the firm being the site of Mr. Joseph S. Cutter's present store. Later on he went into the hardware business, with Mr. Abraham Runyon, (father of Chancellor Runyon) as partner. A few years afterward this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Berry continued the business alone. Finding age creeping on him, he surrendered his growing business to his only son, Daniel S., and son-in-law, Alexander Thorn, who have since continued at the old stand, corner of Front and Cherry streets, (now Park avenue) under the firm name of Berry & Thorn. In public affairs, he held many positions of trust in his lifetime. For a number of years he was President of the Plainfield Mutual Assurance Company. He was a staunch friend to the Fire Department, and at one time a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners. He was also one of the Directors of the First National Bank of Plainfield. Indeed, he has served in that capacity since the Bank was organized, some twenty years ago, with the exception of one year. He was also a Director of the Music Hall association. Parties interested in the settlement of estates after death, sought his advice and appointed him with power to close up such estates, which was always done to the satisfaction of those interested.

In politics, Mr. Berry was a staunch Republican, and under the administration of that party, he has held local offices of trust, such as town committeeman of North Plainfield and School Trustee. Three years ago he was elected Collector of Somerset county by the Board of Freeholders. So well were the people satisfied with his faithful performance of duties that the following year he was re-appointed to the same position, although the Board was Democratic. He also held the office of Justice of the Peace, of North Plainfield, at one time.

Alfred Berry was a man of peculiarities. It only required one to understand him to know him thoroughly. Full of generous impulses, he never refused a worthy person a favor, if it lay in his power to grant it. Bluff in his way, but sound at the heart, his memory is revered by those who knew him best. He leaves a widow and two children, Daniel S. and Marcy A., the latter the wife of Mr. Alexander Thorn. Peace be to his ashes.

Patriotism In The High School.

The morning exercises at the High School on Friday last were of a patriotic and very interesting character, inspired by the approaching birthday anniversary of the illustrious Washington. The programme was prepared under the careful supervision of the principal, Miss Julia E. Bulkley, who presided with her customary efficiency. It consisted of an appropriate essay written and admirably read by Miss Edith R. Leonard, followed by national songs, and readings and recitations on the part of many other pupils of the school, all of which were well chosen and rendered. Miss Flora Randolph did herself credit at the piano. Several visitors honored the occasion with their presence, and Judge Harper represented the Board of Education. We give Miss Leonard's choicely worded production in full. It was as follows:

WASHINGTON.

If there is one name which stands out pre-eminently among the many glorious ones that fill the page of our Nation's history; if there is one name which serves as a watchword to spur free Americans on to right and justice, if there is one name which by its very sound calls forth responsive echoes in the heart of every man, woman and child of our great republic—that is the name of George Washington, the country's peerless hero. Fitly has he been called "the father of his country;" for do we not look up to him with the love, reverence, and admiration of children? He has taught us by his noble example, and in his pure, generous, upright life, has delivered a powerful exhortation to the pursuit of that which is good, and the avoidance of that which is evil.

> "No life
> Can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife
> And all life not be purer and stronger thereby."

With all a child's love and reverence do we regard him, with all a Nation's pride do we view our mighty "father."

Other nation's have had their heroes—their Alexanders, Cæsars, Wellingtons and Napoleons—but where in all history can a rival be found for our great and glorious Washington? Other generals may have surpassed him in military skill, other orators may have pleaded more eloquently in their country's behalf; but who of all the generals, orators and statesmen whom the world has ever seen, in such an hour of trial, with his country's salvation depending upon him, with a fierce enemy around him, and his men dying by hundreds at his side, could still have maintained his resolute courage, his noble patriotism, and above all his high Christian character? Who amid such horrors as those which filled the winter spent at Valley Forge, could have stood undaunted in the defence of his native land?

We honor Cæsar and Napoleon for their wonderful bravery, their marvelous victories often in the face of great odds; but was it for their country, or for their own ambition that they battled? Even their warmest admirers must confess that they were animated by no such lofty patriotism as that which sustained Washington. The aim of Cæsar and Napoleon was to exalt themselves; that of Washington, to exalt his country. That was all the difference; but what a wide difference it was!

In admiring the noble character of Washington, however, we must not lose sight of his military genius. From the time when young Col. Washington of the English army in the Colonies won for himself fame by rallying the fleeing forces of Braddock, and facing the hostile French and Indians, until the day on which Gen. Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army, received the sword of Cornwallis at Yorktown, we find him almost constantly in the field. At one time, dashing down upon the enemy, he is achieving a brilliant success; at another, encamped in a strong position, the "American Fabius" is waiting in patience for a favorable opportunity for an attack, parrying meanwhile the blows of the enemy.

Difficulties surrounded him on every side, difficulties great enough to have daunted many a hero. The resources of the American army were few, and Tory traitors were all around him. But still he never lost his faith that somehow, impossible though it seemed, the Nation would be delivered from its bondage.

Always encouraging and aiding his men, and always thinking of their comfort while he himself shared their distresses, he won the love of the whole army. No soldier was ever so humble or so poor that the aristocratic master of Mt. Vernon did not meet him with a kindly word, or friendly shake of the hand. For were they not comrades fighting for the same cause? Perhaps we can in some measure account for the wonderful heroism of the American troops in the attack upon Trenton if we remember the words of their leader spoken just before the battle.

"There! my brave friends; there are the enemies of your country, and now all I ask of you is just to remember what you are about to fight for. March!"

What oration could have been more inspiring to men fighting for their homes and liberty? Would the little army have dared to brave the great force of Hessians without their encouragement?

With such a leader, with such an example ever before them, what wonder that the men of America were stimulated to do their utmost in the cause of freedom? What wonder that the unskilled recruits were able entirely to vanquish the mercenaries of Great Britain, and to perform exploits which even Frederick the Great declared the most remarkable in all history?

But when the war was ended, and peace fully established, when the army had been disbanded, and its Commander-in-Chief had returned to his quiet home, when the wisest men of the Nation had made a Constitution stating that there should be a President of the United States elected every four years by the people—then the question arose as to who should be the first President. It was hardly a question; for there could not be the slightest doubt in regard to its answer. The man who had been the Nation's support through long years of trouble was the man to be its guide through years of prosperity.

So again at his country's call he came, for eight long years did he labor for the good of his countrymen, and then, at length, he retired to his well-earned rest in his old Virginia home.

Noble, indeed, had been his life; and when at last on that winter's morning, almost a hundred years ago, news came that the gallant general, the skilful statesman, the staunch patriot had breathed his last, the whole world mourned for him, and wept in sympathy for the Nation bereft of its great "Father."

Misrepresentation of the New York State Board of Health by the Royal Baking Powder Company.

At a meeting of the State Board of Health held February 11th, 1885, it was

Resolved, That the advertisement of the Royal Baking Powder Company quoting the State Board of Health of New York, as recommending, through one of its analysts, its pure, etc., is a misrepresentation. In no case does the State Board of Health or its representative cause such examination to be made with a view of recommending particular products.

A Teutonic friend ran a foot race and lost it, but ran again and won. He said: "I'm first at last if I vas pehind pefore."

It is a good rule to accept only those medicines as have, after long years of trial, proved worthy of confidence. This is a case where other people's experience may be of great service, and it has been the experience of thousands that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best cough medicine ever used.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine for everyone in the spring. Emigrants and travelers will find in it an effectual cure for eruptions, boils, pimples, eczema, etc., that break out on the skin—the effect of disorder in the blood, caused by seasick and sick on board ship.

A St. Louis man is so lazy that he has worked but once, and that was when he was laboring under a mistake.

OIL FROM NATURE'S WELLS.

The skin on the head is kept soft and flexible by a secretion from the oil glands. When these are clogged the hair dries and falls out. Parker's Hair Balsam renews their action, restores the original color to the hair and makes it soft and glossy. It also eradicates dandruff. Not greasy, not a dye, deliciously perfumed. Delightful for a lady's toilet table. The best of dressings. Preferable to all similar articles because of its superior cleanliness and purity.

It seems funny to say that a person is homesick when in reality they are away sick.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by Chas. A. Butler.

A boy can give advice, but it is only the stout-hearted man who can calmly receive it.

ARE YOU TIRED OF BEING SICK?

We want to say a word to the men, women and girls who work in stores, offices and factories. There are hundreds of thousands of you in the country. Very few of you are well. You are shut up too much and exercise too little. In this way you get sick. Your blood is bad, your digestion poor, your head often aches, and you don't like work. Your liver, stomach and kidneys are out of order. Parker's Tonic has cured hundreds of such cases. It is pure, safe and pleasant.

The ice man may not be much of a skater, but he is able to make fancy figures on ice.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

TWENTY DOLLARS.

BY O. G.

"I must have one," said Cathie Hartford.

Cathie was sitting at the breakfast table.

"'Must is for the Queen,'" said Mr. Hartford, reaching out for another muffin.

"Now, uncle, please!" implored Miss Cathie.

"How many hats have you got already?" inexorably demanded Mr. Hartford.

"Nothing that is suitable for this occasion," responded Cathie. "Ladies dress so elegantly for Mrs. Harte-Willoughby's morning concerts. And Madame Persiana has the loveliest opera hat she will let me have for twenty dollars—only half price, uncle, dear; because Miss Hyde, for whom it was made, has gone into mourning and decided not to take it!"

"Indeed!" said Uncle Hartford.

"Dear uncle, you'll give me twenty dollars!"

"I'll give you nothing of the sort," said Uncle Hartford, decidedly.

Cathie Hartford cried a little when her uncle had gone to his office.

"Mean old thing!" said she, apostrophizing the portrait of her grand uncle, which hung stiff and simpering above the mantel. "With all your oceans of money to grudge me a poor twenty dollars for a dress hat! But I won't go shabby, that I'm determined on! I'll stay at home first! And Paul Atherton is to be there, and Rose St. Felix will have him all to herself—the hateful thing—and—and——"

And a new gush of tears followed this dismal foreboding.

"Lend you twenty dollars, Mrs. Apsell? What do you want me to lend you twenty dollars for?"

Paul Atherton was looking very kindly down upon the pale, pinched little widow in her rusty crape and worn bombazine, and Mrs. Apsell took courage to reply:

"It's interest money that I owe on the mortgage my poor Herbert gave Mr. Hartford, the banker. And if it isn't paid promptly, I'm afraid he'll foreclose; and all the living I make for myself and the children is by keeping boarders in that little house. I have hoped all along to raise the money without troubling you, but my best boarders left me last month, and the rooms are vacant yet, and——"

Mr. Atherton put his hand in his pocket at once.

"No more apologies, I beg," said he. "If I can't spare a little money to Herbert Apsell's widow, I ought to be cashiered. Here's a twenty dollar bill—I've rather been keeping it for good luck, on account of the Maltese cross drawn in red ink on it, but I can afford to transfer the balance of luck to your account, I think!"

And Mrs. Apsell went immediately—the tears of gratitude bedewing her poor, little weak eyes—to No. — Fifth avenue, where Cathie Hartford was yet bewailing her affliction.

"What is it, Bruce?" said Cathie to the pink-ribboned parlor-maid.

Uncle Hartford would not consent to a man in plain livery, although Cathie had declared, over and over again, it was quite essential to their standing in society.

"Please, miss, it's a person as insists on seeing you, if Mr. Hartford isn't in. A person to pay some money, miss."

Cathie roused up at this and went out into the vestibule, where Mrs. Apsell was meekly waiting.

"It's twenty dollars, miss," said Mrs. Apsell, "that I owe Mr. Hartford, your father——"

"Uncle," corrected Cathie, rather stiffly.

"Uncle—begging your pardon—for interest on a mortgage on the house in Hooper street; and if you'll kindly give it to him——"

"Oh, certainly, certainly," said Cathie; and Mrs. Apsell went away.

"Now," cried our disconsolate young damsel, "I'll have that dress hat at Madame Persiana's, or I'll know the reason why. Uncle won't know the money has been paid in, and next week, when my quarterly allowance comes in, I'll make it all straight."

Miss Cathie Hartford appeared at Mrs. Harte-Willoughby's in a superb white velvet hat, trimmed with snowy ostrich bats and silver wheat, tipped with crystal dewdrops, and Mr. Atherton thought he had never seen so pretty and fascinating a little creature in all his life.

"I do believe," said Mr. Atherton, "I'm falling in love with that little girl."

He went home to his hotel. Mrs. Apsell was sitting in the reception-room waiting to see him.

"Hallo!" said Mr. Atherton.

"He's going to foreclose, sir," sobbed the widow. "Mr. Hartford is going to foreclose."

"But he can't foreclose if the interest is paid up to time," remonstrated Atherton.

"I don't know how that is, sir," whimpered Mrs. Apsell. "I never did understand law matters, but——"

"Did you pay that twenty dollars?"

"I paid it into Miss Hartford's own hands, sir."

"I'll go and see about it myself," said Mr. Atherton. "Go home, Mrs. Apsell. I will take the conduct of this matter into my own charge."

Half an hour later Mr. Atherton presented himself at the office of Harpagon Hartford, in Liberty street.

"How's this about Widow Apsell's mortgage?" said he. "I hear you're about to foreclose."

"Didn't pay her interest," curtly returned the banker.

"How much is due?"

"Twenty dollars."

Atherton paused for a minute or two, and wrinkled his brows in deep thought.

"I'll settle it," said he; and he settled it accordingly, thinking within himself: "Poor soul! I dare say she had forty ways at once for her money, and hoped to see her way clear!"

And then he went home, stopping en route at the cigar merchant's to pay a quarter's bill. The merchant gave him in change a twenty-dollar bill with a red Maltese cross sketched upon its face.

"The deuse!" cried Atherton. "How came you by my lucky bill, Mr. Smokeybridge?"

"Let—me—see," said Mr. Smokeybridge. "My wife took it from one M. Achille Persiana."

"Can you give me his address?"

"Oh, certainly. His wife is the fashionable milliner on —— street."

And to M. Persiana's our hero went, resolved to see what Mrs. Apsell had done with the money he had given her in good faith.

M. Persiana was obliging enough, in a flowery, French way. He had received the money from Aurelie, his wife. Madame, summoned to the conclave, referred to her books and immediately informed them that she had taken the bill from Miss Catherine Hartford, on Tuesday, Feb. 8.

From Catherine Hartford! And Mrs. Apsell had solemnly declared that she had herself paid it into Miss Hartford's hands.

"I'll see this to the end," said Mr. Atherton, compressing his lips a little; and he called on Cathie Hartford.

"Excuse me if I ask what may seem some rather impertinent questions," said he.

"Ask what you please," said Cathie, all smiles.

"You bought a dress hat on Tuesday?"

"Certainly," said wondering Miss Cathie.

"You paid for it with a twenty-dollar bill?"

"Yes."

"With this bill?"

He held it up. As he did so, Cathie colored scarlet.

"And you received this bill from Mrs. Apsell to be by you given to your uncle in part payment of a sum of interest due to him? I must beg for an answer."

Cathie began to cry.

"I—I meant no harm," said she. "My quarter's allowance is due next week, and——"

"That will do," said Mr. Atherton. "A thousand pardons for annoying you."

And he went away, and Cathie Hartford never saw him more.

She had got her dress bonnet, but she had lost her lover!

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE KING'S GARDEN.

BY VIRGINIA LOWE, AGED NINE YEARS, NO. 833 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

It was many hundred years ago.

It was in a king's garden.

The queen and her little son, the prince, used to go into the garden every pleasant day.

All sorts of beautiful flowers grew in the garden.

One day a little weed sprang up.

The tall red roses would not look at it.

The tall white lilies thought it had no right to be in the king's garden.

But the little weed stayed there.

One day, when the weed had grown up quite large, a big, ugly worm crept up its stem.

"The rose and the lily shook me off," the worm said to the weed, "so I have come to you."

"What do you want of me?" asked the weed, in a kind voice.

"A place to rest, and something to eat," replied the worm.

"Here are plenty of leaves," the weed said. "Take just as many as you want."

By and by the worm went to sleep.

The kind weed did not try to shake the worm off.

At last the worm began to spin a web for itself from leaf to leaf.

The web began to get whiter and whiter and thicker and thicker.

One day the weed said:

"I wonder what the worm is going to do? I guess he is making a house for himself, and means to stay here always."

At last the web began to look like a bird's nest.

After a while the worm came out no more.

A few days later the queen was walking up and down in the garden in the shade of the wall. The little prince was with her.

When he saw the weed he ran to pull it up.

"There must be no tall weeds in my father's garden," he said.

When he saw the ball he took it up gently and carried it to his mother, the queen.

She was standing on one of the bridges.

The ball slipped out of her hand into the water.

The little prince ran to find his pretty plaything.

Something had happened to it.

It had not opened, but a long string was hanging from one end.

This string began to unwind like the string of his kite.

Then a pretty butterfly came out.

The worm was a silk-worm.

The wonderful ball was taken to the palace.

Wise men came from far and near to see it.

It was the first silk-worm cocoon that had ever been unrolled.

The thread was a silk thread.

There are about thirteen thousand yards of silk thread in a cocoon.

The weed was a young mulberry bush.

In a few years the whole garden was planted with mulberry bushes.

So the proud roses and lilies had to make room for the useful weed.

A LITTLE VARIETY.

White is always the popular color in roses.

Chinese primroses will last till Easter time, a florist says.

England paid $25,000,000 last year to foreigners for cheese.

Kansas City trade increased 35 per cent. during the past year.

Kansas City sold $5,000,000 worth of liquor at wholesale in 1884.

Montana shipped 1,258,034 pounds of wool and 76,650 head of cattle in 1884.

Great Britain sent $68,309,880 worth of manufactured products to Australia in eight months last year.

A hen belonging to John Brine, of Greencastle, Pa., has a record of having laid 204 eggs during last year.

The lightships of the English and Irish coasts have been connected with the mainland by telegraphic cables.

Sparrows are so numerous in Australia that one county last year paid bounty on 25,840 dozen sparrow eggs.

The late Dr. Theodatus Garlich, of Ohio, had in his aquarium several educated trout, which would swim to him when called and otherwise intelligently carry on to the delight and wonderment of small boy visitors.

THE FIGHT FOR PURE FOOD.

The agressive war waged by the Royal Baking Powder Company against all forms of adulteration in baking powder has produced a good effect. The manufacturers of the low grade, cheap, adulterated, and poisonous powders have been driven into an attempted defense of their goods, wherein they have exposed their names and the character of their powders to the public.

The Royal Company set out upon this crusade several years ago. It was the first to bring to light the use of alum for this purpose, and to expose the infamous practices of those manufacturers who were endangering health and life that more profit might be derived from their powders. The exposures then made, a disgusted public, and the influence of the press were the means of banishing most of the alum powders from the market.

All forms of lime baking powders are now being foisted upon consumers in this vicinity. Their use has been universally condemned by chemists and physicians. The presence of lime, like alum, can only be detected by chemical analysis, and the purchaser is unaware of its use until its effects have shown themselves in a disordered system.

It is because of the continued and vigorous pursuit of these dangerous, adulterated baking powders that their proprietors and peddlers are now endeavoring to vent their spite and revenge their disappointment by circulating absurd falsehoods and sham analyses against the Royal Baking Powder.

The Royal Baking Powder has, during the last quarter of a century, earned a reputation throughout the world which no such dishonorable or tricky adventurers can pull down or destroy. It has stood the test of a long, actual, practical use, and has been endorsed by the Government chemists, Professors Love and Mott, and by the most eminent chemists of the country, as in all respects absolutely pure and wholesome and of the very highest leavening power. It is not possible for either the new, experimental, and suspicious baking powders, or those well-known to be adulterated with lime, alum, and other impurities, to supplant it in the public favor.

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

The Great English Remedy. An unfailing cure for loss of Memory, Universal Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Vision, Premature Old Age and many other diseases that lead to Insanity or Consumption and a premature grave.

BEFORE TAKING. AFTER TAKING.

Beware of advertisements to refund money, when druggists from whom the medicine is bought do not refund, but refer you to the manufacturers, and the requirements are such that they are seldom, if ever, complied with. See their written guarantee. A trial of one single package of Gray's Specific will convince the most skeptical of its real merits. On account of counterfeits, we have adopted the Yellow Wrapper, the only genuine. Full particulars in our pamphlet, which we desire to send free by mail to every one. The Specific Medicine is sold by all druggists at $1 per package, or six packages for $5, or will be sent free by mail on receipt of the money, by addressing

POETRY

VOICES OF THE NIGHT.

When bedtime comes and curtains fall
And round I go the doors to lock;
Ere the lamps go out, my wife doth call:
"Remember, dear, to wind the clock."

When boots are off and for the day
All irksome cares are put to route,
I hear wife's voice from dreamland say:
"Be sure you put the kitten out."

When stretched beneath the sheets I lie
And heavy lids crased to wink;
From trundle bed there comes a cry:
I want a drink! I want a drink!!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ONLY TWO BEECHNUTS.

A REVOLUTIONARY STORY.

An old brown farm house has stood for years on the highway between Ridgefield and South Salem, in Connecticut. It was so near the New York and Connecticut boundary line that a stone could be thrown twenty yards or more from the door steps into either State.

It has sheltered generation after generation of the same family for more than a hundred years. A few days ago it became necessary to tear down this old building, and in removing the discarded furniture, that had grown shaky with years of solitude in the musty garret, a small chest was found.

Nothing was in it but a package no larger than a spool. On opening the tattered faded paper covering, two beechnuts were disclosed, exactly alike, perfectly preserved, and whose shells were as hard as glass. An examination of the crumbling inclosure revealed some writing that was scarcely legible. The almost vanished sentence was deciphered as follows:

"These are the beechnuts that Philip and Martha exchanged October 19, 1778."

The little nuts that had lain for a hundred years untouched are now to be carefully preserved, especially as associated with them is a family tradition. The history which the discovery of these beechnuts has revived is as follows:

A huge boulder frowns upon the old Salem turnpike, perhaps a mile from the New York State line. It conceals the highway toward the west by reason of the sharp turn that it makes around it.

Leaning against this boulder one mild afternoon in October, 1878, was a young man. His eyes were resting on the vista of buff, brown and scarlet foliage that stretched far away, and through which patches of blue water of the lake beyond could be seen.

"Beautiful," he said. "Ah, if I only—if I had not this business in hand; and their outposts are just beyond."

Even as he spoke he started, listened, and an instant so changed his manner that he seemed a tired and listless soldier, with no care for the landscape that had charmed him.

As the footsteps that had caused the change of manner approached, and seemed about to round the boulder, he still kept his eyes half closed with the expression of weariness, nor did he lift them until the steps stopped in front of him. Then looking up he saw a child, a girl of ten or twelve years may be. The little one spoke.

"Where is your musket?" she asked.

"Are you then so used to seeing soldiers with guns, my maid, that you wonder I haven't one?"

"Not always, but now. My father and my brother John have gone away with their muskets, and so have every one."

"Mayhap they have gone shooting the game."

"Oh, no; for they put on their three-cornered hats, like yours, and I did hear my brother say surely there'd be a battle to-morrow."

The young soldier no longer assumed the look of wearied indifference. His manner, however, did not suggest to the child that he burned within.

"My little maid," he said, "I have something better than a flint lock. I will show it to you."

From the inner folds of his homespun coat he drew forth a small portfolio, and then, sitting on a shelf of the rock, opened the case, placed it upon his knee and then sharpened a crayon.

"Your little face, my maid, is set so charmingly by the bright leaves, on the bank, back of you, that if you will let me I will sketch it, and you may have the portrait."

The child's eyes sparkled, but she said: "You were tired and almost asleep as I came."

A slight, quick smile, though tempered with sadness, flitted over the young man's face, and he said:

"Yes, but you have awakened me. Now stand as still as you can."

With quick, vigorous strokes the young man plied his crayon, now and then glancing up at the child's face. Both were silent some moments. At length he said; "And so your brother does predict a battle to-morrow?"

"Yes. He did say so, and did ask sister Martha to make cartridges for him."

"And now he has gone—there, there, my maid," for he saw her chin quiver. "He will come back. Mayhap there'll be no battle."

They were silent a few moments longer, then he said:

"Which way did your father and brother go, my child?"

"By the turnpike to the White Plains."

"Oh, ho! oh, of course, to the White Plains. There," holding up the portrait, "there. I have shortened the nose a little too much. When I have fixed that it will be done." Then with a few rapid strokes he finished the sketch, and gave it to the child.

"It's my face! it's my face!" cried the child.

"Now, what is your name, that I may write it beneath the portrait:

She told him and he wrote:

"Ruth Phillips, by Philip."

"There," he said, "my first name is the same as your last one. That is nice, isn't it?"

As she stood gazing at the portrait the young soldier quickly took a small map from his portfolio and traced with his finger a highway until it stopped at a point marked White Plains.

Then he studied it a moment, and was about to turn away when the clatter of horses hoofs startled him. The rider, by the sound, was pressing his steed to his best mettle.

Almost abruptly the young soldier seized the child and led her to a seat on the rock. Then with such fluency as caused her to raise her eyes in some surprise, he spoke of the picture, and was thus engaged, as he intended to be, when the horseman dashed by.

The horse was checked as suddenly as though shot dead, and the young man thereupon lifted his tall figure that had been bending over the child, turned slowly, and when he looked up the weary care-worn expression was again on his face. It was changed, however, to a look of surprise that was not counterfeited as his eyes fell on a young woman.

Though the soldier steadfastly received the look that the girl gave him from eyes rounded with astonishment as they were luminous and searching, yet he did not fail to notice the exquisite picture that they made.

The high and jaunty poised riding hat that the burning leaves of the maple almost touched as with a fiery plume; the thick coil of hair, the complexion that was brighter than that of a leaf that almost rested on the cheek; the figure, seated as though horse and rider were moulded together; the coal black animal gently pawing on the earth, all backed by the brilliancy of the forest—this picture gladdened his artistic eye.

Yet his active mind was busy with queries as to her identity. But the little girl solved the question. She said:

"Oh, Patty, see the picture of me the man did draw."

The elder sister put out her unoccupied hand and received the portrait, not yet taking her eyes from the soldier.

At last she glanced at the portrait, then scrutinized it more closely, till it seemed to the young man that many minutes had passed. At length she turned to him and said: "You did this?"

The soldier bowed, and the young woman made mental note of the grace with which this common soldier made courtesy.

"What for?" she asked, though her tone was not so abrupt as the words.

"The little maid pleased me."

"It is almost perfect."

"I am as well aware as you that it is not so."

"Who are you?"

He smiled slightly, for he could not help it, at the imperious manner of the girl, but he said, quietly, "A Continental soldier."

"You are ill, mayhap, and fell behind?"

The soldier bowed.

"Don't you know you are on dangerous ground? You are within the British lines."

"I hope soon to be safe."

The young woman gathered up her reins, saying as she did so; "Ruth, you should not stray so far away from home. Come with me." Then she seemed to hesitate, and at length said to the young soldier, who had not stirred, "How long a time needed you to draw this?"

"But a few minutes."

"They are precious. Dare you draw me?"

"It would be a pleasure."

"Will you?"

"Remain, then, as you are." Again drawing forth his portfolio, and taking one long, searching glance at the girl, he began his work. As he went on she had both desire and opportunity to observe him. She saw that he was tall, sinewy, young and, as he looked up with the inquiring glance of the artist, it was impressed upon her that he was handsome and strong beyond all men she had ever seen. She saw the quick, sometimes delicate strokes of the crayon, and saw grace in both. He ventured not a word. At length the girl said:

"Who is your commander?"

He seemed not to hear, and she asked again. Without pausing in his work he said, "Colonel Tyler, of the Seventh Connecticut."

"You are from below?"

"I was."

"That is what I mean. You were a portrait sketcher?"

"Yes, in New York before the war."

Suddenly she said: "Do you know you may be killed to-morrow?"

"Perhaps."

"I mean that a great battle is expected."

The young man made a most vigorous stroke, but without looking up said quietly: "You are better informed than I. I shall reach my command to-night."

"I have been doing my part," she said. "I myself rode to Danbury this morning, bearing the commission to the commanding officer that the British troops were gathering at the White Plains, and that he and his command must march at once and concentrate at Bedford before daylight. I tell you," she added, "because by taking the short cut you might fall in the sooner with the army."

Here the young man snapped a crayon, and while sharpening it said; "I thank you for the suggestion. It must be ten miles to Danbury?"

"Yes."

"You must have pushed your horse."

"Indeed I did."

When next he looked up the portrait was done. He gave it to her with a graceful bow, and the manner of indifference, but she saw that his face was as white as the paper itself. For some moments she studied the picture. Then she said: "It is a marvel. It must be my very faithful portrait. I thank you, sir," and she extended her hand.

As he took it she said: "I wish I had something that I migt give you in return for this. I fear now that I was far too presumptuous to ask you to do this."

"You honored me, and have repaid me."

"We may meet again, sir, when I can better repay you."

He said: "We may; who knows?" Then as his eyes fell on the ground he spied a number of beechnuts that had fallen from the tree overhead. He picked up two of them.

"See," he said, "these nuts are exactly alike. You said we might meet again. I will give you this one and will keep the other. If we meet again we will put them side by side as they are now. You can repay me by doing this. It is only a whim of mine."

She looked at him curiously for a moment and then said, "why that is a playful thing to do, but if you wish it I will," and she thrust the beechnut under her glove.

When she looked back after she had gone down the road a piece, he still stood there with head uncovered as when she quitted him. Had she looked later she would have seen the young soldier rushing with mighty strides in a direction opposite to what he had all day been taking, and if she had read his thoughts she would have known that he was thanking God he had met her.

One evening in mid winter, more than a year later, there was gathered about the open fireplace in the living room of the Phillips mansion the young woman Martha, her little sister Ruth and an elderly woman, who was plainly the mother. A tap at the door did not fail to cause all three to start.

Troublesome times again had come on this part of the country. Rumors of an advance prevailed. Father and brother had again set out with the contingent troops to repel a threatened invasion.—However, Mistress Martha did not hesitate to open the door. So far, at least, their home had been respected by both armies.

There stood on the steps a tall man, whose great coat was slightly sprinkled with the snow that was beginning to fall. He did not offer to enter until bidden; but he said, with great courtesy, that he was a belated traveler, compelled to ask for shelter and food, if so be the inmates felt safe in extending such hospitality.

"Bid the gentleman in, Martha," said the mother, and when he had, with exquisite grace, bowed and thanked her, he asserted that nothing but the direst necessity would have compelled him to intrude himself.

"These are, indeed, sad times, sir," said the mother. "Twice before my husband and son have been called away to defend the country. I know not where they may be to-night, but the good Lord will protect them and us."

"Is there then disturbance in these parts?" asked the stranger.

"Have you not heard and seen, sir, and you a traveler?"

"I had supposed the operations were to the west, else I might not have ventured on my journey."

The old lady glanced quickly at him for a moment, as though wishing to scan so strange a person as this, who did not know what was going on about him, but neither by hint or word or action did she betray any surprise.

The stranger was young and heavily dressed in a heavy, close fitting surtout which reached to his top boots. His hair, which was long, fell in curly locks almost to his shoulders and it was of a yellow tinge, almost approaching whiteness.

The old lady at once perceived that whoever her guest was he was a gentleman, she found herself interested in him.—Though she frequently referred to the topic that was uppermost in her mind, he seemed to care little about the war.

The old lady decided that he must be a merchant from below who ventured thus far toward the British outposts—which then included the Phillips homestead—for the purposes of business.

Meanwhile Margaret herself had prepared a repast, of which she at length invited him to partake. Then for the first time he took note of the girl.

"We have simple fare now," she said.

"The simplest fare has always been my choice and habit," he said, and then added, "This must be a lonely life for you, though perhaps an exciting one."

"Not lonely when father and brother are here and when there is no war."

"Your father and brother are in the field?"

"Yes, sir."

"It is a pitiable lot for you indeed?"

"No, sir; no indeed! We are glad we have a father and brother to fight for our country."

The stranger looked at her for a moment with such admiration as could give no offense. Then he said, "That is indeed true patriotism."

She was silent for so long a time that he stopped for a moment as he ate and said, "Is there then to be fighting near by?"

"Father said when he went away there would be no general battle, but he was going with the contingents and regulars to cut off the approach of the British. They do expect by night or to-morrow to have thrown up such forts or defenses as will head off the British, and as it is but twelve miles away where they do so at the Carmel Cross Roads, maybe father and brother will be home Saturday."

Here the stranger seemed much occupied with his meal, nor did he pause in the eating of it until, seemingly conscious that some one was gazing fixedly at him, he looked up and encountered the steady eye of little Ruth. He smiled pleasantly and said, "How then, little maid, do you, too, miss your father?"

"You do make me think of my picture man," the child said.

"Have you a picture man?"

"The man who drew my picture. Shall I show it to you?"

"Yes, indeed."

The child brought not only her own, but the crayon of her sister.

"They are all well done; well done little maid. But you have grown older since this was made."

"Yes, more than a year."

"A year, indeed," said he, half meditatively.

"My sister Patty looks every day at hers, and wonders if she shall ever see him again."

"Hush, Ruth, the gentleman cares for nothing of that sort," said Martha.

"But I am interested."

As they sat by the fire chatting, and while Martha was meditating upon which of the two spare rooms to put the stranger into for the night, there was heard without a sound that rose above the moaning of the wind.

"What is that?" asked Martha.

The stranger hastened to the window, and even as he did so the sound grew louder and more significant. It was the yell of maddened men, and now as the curtains were tossed aside they saw a yellow light through and between the thick falling snowflakes. The light grew brighter and brighter.

"It is the army," said Martha.

"Which one," asked the mother.

"The British, I think. Look, they are burning Neighbor Keeler's house. They will come here. They have threatened before. They will burn the house and they may kill us. See there, over the hill; they are coming. There, they have set fire to the hay rick. Mother, be calm—They shall not hurt you. I will not let them," and the girl turned with flashing eyes and flushed cheeks and seemed to be going to seek for a weapon.

But she was stayed. The stranger, whom they had forgotten, had gently restrained her. She looked at him enquiringly, and he said, "They will do you no harm."

The madmen rushed on down the hill, and there were two big fellows at the front. They wore the uniforms of the British army. They were, indeed, on a tour of devastation and ruin.

Just as they reached the stone fence that inclosed the yard before the house, and were about to surround it, the stranger went out and stood with the snow whitening his bare head.

He lifted his arm and the two big men stopped, as did those behind them, and after the stranger had said a word or two to them, they turned and went their way.

When he returned to the house his manner was as calm as it had been an hour before. To their thanks he simply replied, "You deserve protection. You have earned it."

Then he bade them farewell, though they expressed much astonishment thereat and pleaded with him to stay.

"I must hasten on my journey," he said. "Before I go, however, I would ask if Miss Martha can produce the counterpart of this?" and thrusting his hand into his bosom, he drew forth a beechnut.

"I knew it. I did know it," said little Ruth; but Martha made no response, only turned for a moment so that her face and bosom were turned from him, and when she again faced him she too held in her hand a beechnut.

"I am very glad," he said, "when you meet me again you will not know me except by this same token."

He said this somewhat sadly, and before another word was said, departed. A moment later he mounted a horse that had been held in waiting for him in the highway, and galloped forth into the snow and darkness.

When the buds, were bursting into blossoms some five months later, and when Martha was reaching her dimpled arms up among the lilac flowers, one day, she turned suddenly and there behind her stood a tall young man in the uniform of an American officer. His hair was black, his face pale and unshaven and he was plainly laboring with excitement or trouble. He said nothing until she had first spoken.

"You have come again," she said, with a tone half tremulous, half cold.

"This time, a suppliant. I see you know me now. I am my natural self, but for these clothes. Protect me, mistress, I beseech you!"

"Protect you!"

"Yes, for unless you do in an hour I shall be captured. I can escape no further."

"Why should I? You saved us that night; you—you—no, I will not. You betrayed my girlish, foolish confidence twice, and may thereby have cost us our country's cause. From my words the day you drew my picture you learned enough to enable your army to defeat us at White Plains. From my foolish speech the night you rescued us you gathered enough to foil the plans of our people, and caused thereby my brother to be brought home dead. I trusted you then for what you assumed to be. They have told me whom I did then harbor."

"Then you know my name?"

"Yes."

"Well, tell me."

She leaned forward and her face was as white as her neck as she whispered.

"Yes," he said, "I am he."

"Then you must go your way."

"You forget. I only did my duty and I never asked you for the words you spoke."

"And I must do my duty now."

"My pursuers will be after me in a moment."

"Do not ask me to do this. I cannot."

He turned and saw the cavalry coming over the hill, and then he turned again and looked at her with unspeakable sadness. She saw the horsemen, too, and knew that he had given up hope. He tore open his vest and drew some papers therefrom that he rapidly destroyed. Reserving one he held to her and said in the saddest tones she had ever heard:

"To-morrow will you read this?"

She would neither take it nor speak; but the paper was taken from his hand by little Ruth, who had come there unobserved.

"I will, Mr. Picture Man."

"Thank you, and bless you, my child. You keep it, and give it to your sister by noon of to-morrow."

The cavalry had now spied him and were putting their horses to their best. He held his hand out to Martha. In it was the beechnut. Without taking her eyes from his, she thrust her hand into her bosom, and when she withdrew it there was within it the beechnut. When the soldiers a moment later seized him, he bade Martha farewell and kissed little Ruth. Then he took Martha's limp hand and placed therein the beechnut. Then they led him away. At evening two soldiers delivered to Martha a crayon likeness of herself that they said their commander had instructed them to bring. They said that it had been taken from the man who was captured there that morning. It had been drawn from memory according to the note at the bottom.

"Where is he now?" she asked.

The soldiers seemed confused. At last one pointed to the ground, and then they both rode rapidly away.

"Dead," she said, "I did not think it meant that. I let them kill him," and an hour later they found her there under the lilac trees. When a year later, just after they returned from the burying ground, where they had laid Martha's body, they found among her other treasures the two beechnuts wrapped together. They put them away in the old chest.

A STRAIGHT DIAGNOSIS.

"The doctor says it is malaria."

"How did you get malaria?"

"Oh, Aunt Mary, just as if one could tell anything about malaria! It is like the wind. It cometh from no one knows where, and bloweth where it listeth;" and the invalid turned her pretty flushed face on the pillow with a movement of unmistakable irritation.

"Blanche, dear, have the kindness to look at me a minute," said Miss Mary Harrington, firmly but kindly. "We don't wan't to make any mistake to start with. You know I am very blunt, and you know that I have opinions——"

"And I know there is nobody in all the world like you when one is ill," the young lady interrupted; "and that is why I begged and prayed mamma to send for you."

"That is very pleasant and encouraging as far as it goes," said the lady, "but I can remain, Blanche, as your nurse, only on the condition that you obey me. I am ready to unpack and stay, or put on my hat and go."

Miss Harrington's gray eyes were tender and smiling, and her whole face was aglow with active benevolence; but the broad brow and the firm mouth had also much to say of careful study and strength of character.

"Why, auntie, I should give up entirely if you disappoint me now," the invalid replied, with quivering lips. "I have just lived on the thought of your coming."

"Well, will you obey me?"

"Yes, auntie, and I hope you'll remember that obedience is not my strong point."

"But I have your promise, and that will do," said the nurse, cheerfully; "and now we'll see."

"Nineteen years old," Miss Harrington said to herself, "and confined to her bed eight weeks with malaria? Bosh! A bad tongue, feverish, more emaciated than I had expected to find her, pain in her side, intermitting pulse, constant oppression of the chest, backache, acute headaches, cold extremities and no appetite. And this is malaria? Bosh again! I wonder what the doctors did before the word 'malaria' came into use. I must ask this physician his reasons for calling this a malarial attack."

Miss Harrington was as good as her word, and forcing her opinions and her doubts quite into the background, started on her tour of investigation with an appearance of implicit faith in the ability of the medical man to answer her questions.

"Is there anything the matter with the plumbing?" the lady inquired.

"There isn't a sanitary precaution that your brother has not taken," the doctor answered.

"Do you know of other cases of malaria in this locality?"

"Oh, yes; malaria is by no means a rare product in this neighborhood."

"But it is very high and dry, and constantly swept by the sea breezes."

"Yes; very high and dry."

"And very gay?" Aunt Mary suggested, demurely.

"Yes; exceptionally gay."

There was a comical twinkle in the gentleman's eye that told of a quiet appreciation of his companion's remark.

"And late hours, and thin shoes, and low necks, and salads, and [illegible] sometimes induce malaria, I suppose?"

"Without doubt."

"Well, why don't you say so, then?"

Aunt Mary had kept her claws [illegible] just about as long as was possible.

"A physician cannot safely meddle with the private life of his patients except in extreme cases," was the unruffled response, "If I were to take the broad platform which you recommend," the gentleman added, "I should not only not do the least bit of good, but I shouldn't have a patient left. My reputation would be simply that of an old busybody and an old fool. But, madam, this is an excellent field for you, and I am sure we can work together with the utmost harmony."

"Perhaps you are right," said Miss Harrington, thoughtfully, "but I don't exactly see it. Of course, if your patients are all idiots, that settles it."

"You would scarcely call your niece an idiot," said the doctor, "and she is as fair a representative of the class as I could name."

After a few days of Aunt Mary's efficient nursing her patient felt able to sit up, and her maid was directed to get together the necessary articles of wardrobe. Among the first things presented were a pair of black silk stockings and a pair of kid slippers.

"What are these?" Miss Harrington asked.

"Why, they are the newest style of slippers, auntie," said her niece.

"Paper soles, and three inch heels tapered down to a cherry pit in the middle of the foot. I presume you wear them all the time you are in the house?"

"Why, of course, auntie."

"In the dead of winter as well as in the dog-days?"

The young lady laughed merrily at her companion's old fogyism. "Certainly. Just see how pretty they look with the silk stockings."

"How many corns have you, Blanche?"

"Oh, only two or three little bits of ones. I send for a chiropodist once in a while, and then I'm all right for ever so long."

"A girl of nineteen with her feet in a chiropodist's hands?" said auntie, with a wry face.

"That isn't anything. Why, almost all the girls——"

"Not the slightest doubt of it," the lady interrupted. "You have nothing else, I suppose, to put on your feet but these things?"

"No, auntie, and I wouldn't wear any others if I had."

"I have now accounted for your backaches, Blanche," said Miss Harrington, "and we will proceed to eliminate the spinal column from the charge of malaria; it is perfectly innocent." And now the nurse examined the other articles laid out for use. There wasn't an inch of flannel to be seen; nothing but the finest and most elaborately beruffled and embroidered linen.

"And you do not own a flannel petticoat, Blanche?"

"What in the world do I want of flannels? You know I almost always go out in the carriage, and there are lots of warm robes."

"It is about as I supposed," Miss Harrington remarked sadly. "Your breakdown is due to perfectly plain and natural causes. There is nothing in the least mysterious about it. You have deformed your feet, weakened your spine and consequently your whole nervous system, by the shoes you have worn. By a series of exposures you have reduced your vital force to such an extent that reaction was impossible without further prostration and a complete cessation of irritating causes. Here are your corsets. How much do they measure, please?"

"Nineteen inches, auntie," the young lady was almost ready to cry now, "and they are a whole inch larger than most girls of my size wear."

"What is your size? Here is a tape measure, and I will soon tell you. You have lost considerable flesh, and I shall have to allow for shrinkage. Twenty-four inches just as you are, Blanche. Think of it? A twenty-four inch waist squeezed into nineteen-inch corsets! We will now clear the heart and lungs from the charge of malaria. Your irregular pulse, the cutting pains in your side, your uneven, and most inadequate respiration, can be traced directly to tight lacing. Now I have this to say, my child. I shall not permit you to wear one of these articles as long as you are under my care. If you will accept a pair of my quilted slippers, and allow me to wrap you in blankets till you have some clothes suitable for a convalescent to wear, all right. If not, you must find some one else to take care of you. My time is altogether too precious to throw away. This may seem very cruel, Blanche, but I really think it would be far better for you to die now than to be nursed back to the old shameful conditions. There is nothing before you but a life of invalidism if you decide to go on as you have begun."

"But how can I wear horrid old shoes and old scratchy flannels, and have a waist like a washer-woman's?" the girl inquired, between laughing and crying.

"You haven't said anything about galoshes and leggings yet, but perhaps you'd like to have me wear those?"

"Shall I get the blankets and my quilted slippers, Blanche?" Aunt Mary inquired.

"Yes; bring the gunboats and the flannels," her companion replied. "And if you can find a few hen's feathers to stick in my hair the resemblance to a Sioux squaw will be still more striking."

After this Miss Blanche had some lessons in physiology and hygiene, and very interesting and profitable topics they proved to be. She learned the reasons of things, and had sense enough to accept and utalize them.

Indescribable garments, low-necked with ribbon-stripe forming arm-holes, invade the realms of ball-room fabrics while creamy lace insertions and flowers finish them at the bottom. Not white according to well-worn usage, but as blue as a morning-glory and pink as a wild bramble rose with cut teeth stitches everywhere. Deliciously rosy and creamy flannels as soft as a baby's cheek have cut up into short skirts edged with lace embroidered with flosses, or appliqued in ribbon flowers run under others of the fairy-like muslin.—St. Louis Republican.

EXPERT Mullen has rendered his report, concerning the financial condition of Trenton, N. J. It shows a deficiency in eight years of $348,[illegible], and had there been a budget in 1884 the deficiency would amount to $[illegible].42. The Sinking Fund Commissioners had up to March last redeemed $234,[illegible], an excess of $[illegible]. The report also shows that there are $6,500 still outstanding on the bond book in the Treasurer's office. The total bonded debt now outstanding to be met by taxation is $597,[illegible], a sum less by $131,813 than that of 1878. If the present floating debt be added to the bonded debt it will make a total to be met by a taxation of $716,810.37.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

THE SHIP OF STATE.

After the long period of twenty-eight years another Democratic President has been inaugurated at Washington.

During that lengthened interval varied and strange events have occurred. Domestic war has raged with bitter violence, old established customs have been changed, new legislative experiments have been ventured upon, and the governing rule of extreme partisanship has been sedulously upheld.

Still the Democratic party has lived down opposition, and in spite of political hostility, maintained its integrity and increased numerical strength.

Again called to administer national affairs it is found amply qualified to discharge that duty.

The best and most experienced statesmen are within its ranks.

Principles founded upon justice and truth sway its every action.

The equitable rights of the people, irrespective of class or condition, inspire its patriotic efforts, and, as of yore, the Constitution is its steering chart.

Every thing that an unscrupulous opposition could do to prejudice public sentiment against the party of Democracy has been done, but without lasting effect.

Calm and unmoved, that grand Jeffersonian organization has fearlessly braved every blast, stood manfully to its colors, knowing well that the sober thought of intelligence would prevail, and the time come when the honest people, tired of misrule, would again commission it to take charge of the Ship of State.

That time has arrived.

Grover Cleveland, a Democrat, is the duly elected and installed President of the United States.

Without ostentatious display he assumes the high responsibility conferred upon him by the sovereign will of the people, and devoid of the least taint of selfish personalism, he will, to the utmost of ability, make official position a sacred trust.

He will strive to cleanse the public service of imbeciles and corruptionists.

Put honest men in and turn rascals out.

Sanction laws framed to advance the general public good, instead of enriching special favorites.

Make Honesty, Equity and Patriotism dominant, and there partisan aggrandizement subservient.

He will, in the name of Constitutional Democracy, endeavor to confer upon the whole of our widely extended Union the blessings of harmony and enduring prosperity.

No doubt the venom of political foes will be hurled against President Cleveland and his Cabinet, but, happily, the day has also arrived, when men who dare to do right are sure to receive popular approval.

The Ship of State is now heading for the port of safety.

The Constitution is on board.

An honest and competent commander stands upon her quarter-deck.

It is singular to find in the Tribune a story to the effect that Blaine and Elkins lost $60,000 in the Hocking Valley speculation; that the projector, Lee, has a chance of reorganizing the scheme, but that he cannot move hand or foot until he pays off Blaine and Elkins. Is our memory at fault, or were there not some letters written before last November denying that Mr. Blaine then held or ever did hold a dollar's interest in the Hocking Valley speculation?—World.

President Cleveland delivered his inaugural in a most impressive manner. He stood erect with his coat closely buttoned and resting his left hand upon his hip, and his right, when not used in gesture, upon the railing. In his left hand he held a small card, upon which were written the heads of his topics. Four times he referred to this. He spoke without hesitation and without any attempt at oratory, in a plain, forcible, straightforward manner, using few gestures. He addressed mainly the vast audience before him, rarely turning to the distinguished audience on the stand.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

No. 143. By Mr. Brinkerhoff—Provides that for the government of hospitals, convents or other governing bodies, may select citizens from any of the counties in the State.

No. 144. By Mr. Pancoast—To regulate the printing of tickets for general elections in this State; provides that where there are mixed tickets of different parties such fact shall be indicated in the heading.

No. 151. By Mr. ———— Fixing the compensation of persons appointed to assess taxes, etc., by salary at $1,800 per annum instead of a per diem.

BILLS PASSED.

S. 127, to authorize boroughs of the first class to provide for Police Justices; H. 258, authorizing School Boards to make their own examinations, passed 17 to 0; H. 176, to provide additional shops at the State Prison, appropriating $15,000, passed 17 to 0; H. 21, to enable encumbered cities to levy special tax; H. 51, to repeal road act of March 23d, 1883.

HOUSE.

The Senate Joint Resolution asking Congress to redeem the trade dollar came up last Thursday. Mr. Harrigan moved to postpone till July 4. Lost. Mr. Corbin moved to indefinitely postpone. Tabled.

H. 214, prohibiting the selling of liquor in less quantities than two gallons where only a United States license is held, came up Monday. At present as small a quantity as a quart is allowed to be sold. Mr. Haines explained the bill. It was a blow at the country groceries with a bar in the rear, which promoted intemperance in rural districts, and paid no revenue to State, county or township.

A motion to postpone till July 4th was lost, 22 to 34.

Mr. Haines explained that drug stores were included in the provisions of the bill. Mr. Holsworth thought the bill would only cause more drinking than now. Mr. Caminade asked Mr. Haines what the expression "mixed liquors" in the bill meant. Mr. Haines gave it up. Some one suggested that it meant "cocktails." Mr. O'Connor moved to strike out the enacting clause. A long debate followed, in which Messrs. Braker, Caminade, Parker, Harrigan, Haines, Gangewer, Chapman, O'Connor and others took part. A motion to recommit was carried, 35 to 2.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

No. 236, By Mr. Ludlam—Makes orders for the payment of salaries due school teachers and for incidental expenses bear interest at the legal rate until paid. (Education).

No. 327, By Mr. Haines—Makes it unlawful to kill, sell or have in possession any rabbit, pheasant or Virginia partridge between December 25th, and November 10th, following under $15 penalty. (Fisheries).

No. 329. By Mr. Braker—A local option bill for the various townships, towns, boroughs and cities. The vote to be taken at the regular elections. (Revision of Laws).

BILLS PASSED.

H. 221, providing for the publication of unclaimed dividends of all insolvent banks. The committee on elections reported H. 217, changing election hours to 6 a. m. (opening), and 6 p. m. (closing). The committee recommended to strike out these hours and leave the law as at present. Mr. Haines, introducer of the bill, opposed the amendment. Mr. Wildrick supported it as there are numbers of poor men whose only chance to vote is after 6 p. m. Mr. Corbin spoke against the amendment, repeating Mr. Haines' argument, that the crooked work was all done after dark. Mr. Besson thought the crooked work would be done before 7 a. m., when few people are around.

Mr. Besson favored cutting election districts up into smaller sections; that would enable the boards to count up the returns at an early hour.

Mr. Keasbey and Mr. Braker favored recommittal. Mr. O'Connor thought the hours of election ought not to be shortened; it would disfranchise numbers of citizens. He instanced persons residing in Newark and working as far away as Elizabeth, who do not come home to dinner. Mr. Chapman thought the election laws need no change in the line here indicated. The bill was after debate recommitted.

The Senate during Tuesday spent the first hour in discussing the question of adjourning and joining the festivities in Washington on inauguration day. The Republicans attempted to be facetious and repeated the old joke of giving the Democrats the one chance of their lifetime of witnessing a Democratic inauguration. It was finally decided not to adjourn. The bill making the legal rate of interest 5 per cent., which went through the House, was defeated in the Senate. Jersey City received a black eye in the House by the defeat of the Citizens' charter, known as Assembly No. 23. It was an attempt to simplify the city government on the Brooklyn plan, and was backed up by a petition of 10,000 names. Every Republican except Hock voted against it. Mr. Wildrick, of Warren, having reached his eighty-second birthday, was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers and a very attractive clock.

A Stormy Winter.

The past winter will be remembered as one of the most fluctuating we have had for many years. Violent and rapid changes of temperature, showers, warm winds, then sudden lowering of temperature, resulting in snow storms, severe winds, heavy freezes, ice and then again soft winds, thaws and rain. Altogether they have made a winter of unusual severity. Such weather is very trying on the health of people. The utmost care is necessary to guard against severe colds, which rapidly drift into dangerous forms of disease. The severe weather appears to have been widely extended. Florida and the several Southern States have had periods of unusual severity, the frosts nipping the early vegetables and flowers, and doing considerable damage to the fruits. At New Orleans the weather is blamed for the partial failure of the Exposition. So at the West, a winter of almost unprecedented severity has occurred. The biting winds have at times been almost unendurable. In Chicago, a few days since, the people were driven from the streets, and business was nearly suspended, by the severity of the cold. The same cause and the storms, which had blockaded railroads, had prevented the theaters from being opened. Thus in all parts of the country the past month has been marked by variable and generally severe weather. Such a winter is anything but desirable but we are not able to control the weather. Sound philosophy requires that we prepare as fully as possible for the changes, use every precaution against colds, be unusually careful to protect ourselves against sudden changes, and to keep up our vitality by generous warmth and good food. Such a course will be apt to lead to sound health, and bring us to Spring with unimpaired vitality.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

Thousands witness his inauguration at Washington—Even the Sun smiles over the Country's Redemption—Cleveland's Address to his "Fellow Citizens"—Brief and concise but upright and weighty.

The grandest demonstration in honor of the inauguration of a President of the United States, occurred at Washington on Wednesday last. Preparations for the festivities were made on the most extensive scale, and the event surpassed the wildest expectation of the most enthusiastic. The skill and ingenuity of the decorator was tested to the utmost, and every public building, the hotels and many residences showed evidences of his workmanship. Pennsylvania avenue, from the President's mansion to the Capital, a distance of more than a mile, was one stretch of banners, bunting, flags and streamers. A demonstration unprecedented in magnificence, unrivalled in magnitude, resulted. The sun shone down upon the bedecked city and its thousands with all the glory it could display. Nature and the heavens seemed to join with the victorious Democrats in rejoicing over the country's redemption and in doing honor to the inauguration of the country's saviour. The city was astir early, and by nine o'clock martial airs could be heard in any and every direction. Civic and military organizations were marching to their respective rendezvous, and streams of people were pushing their way to the line of march. Before 9 the tide of people flowing to the Capitol was on the flood. Crowds of persons not fortunate enough to secure tickets of admission to the Senate lounged listlessly about as if the coveted admission were to be won by patient waiting. By 10:30 the space east of the main entrance of the Capitol was literally packed with human beings. Many persons took positions on the steps of the house wing as early as 7 o'clock, in order to have a good view of the proceedings. Both sides of Pennsylvania avenue, from 15th street to the Capitol were lined with a surging mass of humanity. The stands erected along the line of the route were crowded and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. At 10:30 the Senate Committee called at the White House, and with President Arthur drove to the Arlington, where the President-elect was in readiness. Mr. Cleveland occupied the left seat. Beside him sat President Arthur, and in the seat facing them were Senators Ransom and Sherman, members of the Senate Committee. The carriage was an open barouche, drawn by four bay horses in silver mounted harness, and with white reins. Following them came Vice-President-elect Hendricks and Senator Hawley and the National Democratic Committee in carriages. Promptly at 10:35 the procession, headed by a squad of police, started for the Capitol, Major-General Slocum, Chief Marshal, in command. The 1st Division, composed entirely of U. S. and District troops, followed as the military escort. The march to the Capitol was an uninterrupted ovation to the incoming President. Frequently President Cleveland responded to these enthusiastic demonstrations by lifting his hat, and so without incident or mishap the Presidential party and escort reached the Capitol. After the usual ceremonies in the Senate Chamber the distinguished company proceeded to the eastern portion of the Capitol, and after taking the oath of office President Cleveland delivered the following address:

FELLOW CITIZENS:—In the presence of this vast assemblage of my countrymen, I am about to supplement and seal by the oath which I shall take the manifestation of the will of a great and free people. In the exercise of their power and right of self-government, they have committed to one of their fellow citizens a supreme and sacred trust, and he here consecrates himself to their service.

This impressive ceremony adds little to the solemn sense of responsibility with which I contemplate the duty I owe to all the people of the land; nothing can relieve me from anxiety lest by any act of mine their interests may suffer, and nothing is needed to strengthen my resolution to engage every faculty and effort in the promotion of their welfare. Amid the din of party strife the people's choice was made; but its attendant circumstances have demonstrated anew the strength and safety of a government by the people. In each succeeding year it more clearly appears that our Democratic principle needs no apology, and that in its fearless and faithful application is to be found the surest guarantee of good government. But the best results in the operation of a government, wherein every citizen has a share, largely depend upon a proper limitation of purely partisan zeal and effort, and a correct appreciation of the time when the heat of the partisan should be merged in the patriotism of the citizen.

To-day the Executive branch of the Government is transferred to new keeping. But this is still the Government of all the people, and it should be none the less an object of affectionate solicitude. At this hour the animosities of political strife, the bitterness of partisan defeat, and the exultation of partisan triumph should be supplanted by an ungrudging acquiescence in the popular will, and a sober, conscientious concern for the general weal. Moreover, if, from this hour we cheerfully and honestly abandon all sectional prejudice and distrust, and determine, with manly confidence in one another, to work out harmoniously the achievements of our national destiny, we shall deserve to realize all the benefits which our happy form of government can bestow.

On this auspicious occasion we may well renew the pledge of our devotion to the Constitution, which, launched by the founders of the Republic and consecrated by their prayers and patriotic devotion, has for almost a century borne the hopes and the aspirations of a great people through prosperity and peace, and through the shock of foreign conflicts and the perils of domestic strife and vicissitudes.

By the Father of his country our Constitution was commended for adoption as "the result of amity and mutual concession." In that same spirit it should be administered in order to promote the lasting welfare of the country, and to secure the full measure of its priceless benefits to us, and to those who will succeed to the blessings of our national life. The large variety of diverse and competing interests subject to Federal control, persistently seeking the recognition of their claims need give us no fear that "the greatest good to the greatest number" will fail to be accomplished, if, in the halls of National legislation, that spirit of amity and mutual concession shall prevail in which the Constitution had its birth. If this involves the surrender or postponement of private interests, and the abandonment of local advantages, compensation will be found in the assurance that thus the common interest is subserved, and the general welfare advanced.

In the discharge of my official duty I shall endeavor to be guided by a just and unstrained construction of the Constitution, a careful observance of the distinction between the powers granted to the Federal Government and those reserved to the States, or the people, and by a cautious appreciation of those functions which by the Constitution and laws have been especially assigned to the Executive branch of the Government.

But he who takes the oath to-day to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States only assumes the solemn obligation which every patriotic citizen, on the farm, in the workshop, in the busy marts of trade, and everywhere, should share with him. The Constitution, which prescribes his oath, my countrymen, is yours; the Government you have chosen him to administer for a time is yours; the suffrage which executes the will of freemen is yours; the laws and the entire scheme of our civil rule, from the town-meeting to the State capitals and the national capital is yours. Your every voter, as surely as your Chief Magistrate, under the same high sanction, though in a different sphere, exercises a public trust. Nor is this all. Every citizen owes to the country a vigilant watch and close scrutiny of its public servants, and a fair and reasonable estimate of their fidelity and usefulness. Thus is the people's will impressed upon the whole framework of our civil policy—Municipal, State, and Federal—and this is the price of our liberty and the inspiration of our faith in the Republic.

It is the duty of those serving the people in public place to closely limit public expenditures to the actual needs of the Government economically administered, because this bounds the right of the Government to exact tribute from the earnings of labor, or the property of the citizen, and because public extravagance begets extravagance among the people. We should never be ashamed of the simplicity and prudential economies which are best suited to the operation of a Republican form of government, and most compatible with the mission of the American people. Those who are selected for a limited time to manage public affairs are still of the people, and may do much by their example to encourage, consistently with the dignity of their official functions, that plain way of life which among their fellow-citizens aids integrity and promotes thrift and prosperity.

The genius of our institutions, the needs of our people in home life, and the attention which is demanded for the settlement and development of the resources of our vast territory, dictate the scrupulous avoidance of any departure from that foreign policy commended by the history, the traditions, and the prosperity of our Republic. It is the policy of independence, favored by our position and defended by our known love of justice and by our power. It is the policy of peace, suitable to our interests. It is the policy of neutrality, rejecting any share in foreign broils and ambitions upon other continents, and repelling their intrusion here. It is the policy of Monroe, and of Washington, and Jefferson—"Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations; entangling alliance with none."

A due regard for the interest and prosperity of all the people, demand that our finances shall be established upon such a sound and sensible basis as shall secure the safety and confidence of business interests, and make the wage of labor sure and steady, and that our system of revenue shall be so adjusted as to relieve the people from unnecessary taxation, having a due regard to the interests of capital invested and workingmen employed in American industries, and preventing the accumulation of a surplus in the Treasury to tempt extravagance and waste.

Care for the property of the nation, and for the needs of future settlers, requires that the public domain should be protected from purloining schemes and unlawful occupation.

The conscience of the people demands that the Indians within our boundaries shall be fairly and honestly treated as wards of the Government, and their education and civilization promoted with a view to their ultimate citizenship; and that polygamy in the territories, destructive of the family relation, and offensive to the moral sense of the civilized world shall be repressed.

The laws should be rigidly enforced which prohibit the immigration of a servile class to compete with American labor, with no intention of acquiring citizenship, and bringing with them and retaining habits and customs repugnant to our civilization.

The people demand reform in the administration of the Government and the application of business methods to public affairs. As a means to this end civil-service reform should be in good faith enforced. Our citizens have the right to protection from the incompetency of public employees who hold their places solely as the reward of partisan service and from the corrupting influence of those who promise, and the vicious methods of those who expect such rewards. And those who worthily seek public employment have the right to insist that merit, that competency, shall be recognized instead of party subserviency or the surrender of honest political belief.

In the administration of a Government pledged to do equal and exact justice to all men, there should be no pretext for anxiety touching the protection of the freedmen in their rights, or their security, in the Government, of their privileges under the Constitution and its amendments. All discussion as to their fitness for the place accorded to them as American citizens, is idle and unprofitable, except as it suggests the necessity for their improvement. The fact that they are citizens entitles them to all the rights due to that relation, and charges them with all its duties, obligations, and responsibilities.

These topics, and the constant and ever-varying wants of an active and enterprising population, may well receive the attention and the patriotic endeavor of all who make and execute the Federal law. Our duties are practical, and call for industrious application, and intelligent perception of the claims of public office, and, above all, a firm determination by united action to secure to all the people of the land the full benefits of the best form of government ever vouchsafed to man. And let us not trust to human effort alone; but humbly acknowledging the power and goodness of Almighty God, who presides over the destiny of nations, and who has at all times been revealed in our country's history, let us invoke His aid and His blessing upon our labors.

LITERARY NOTES.

Murat Halstead, of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, in the March number of the North American Review, contributes an article on "The Revival of Sectionalism." In the same number, Archdeacon Farrar presents his views on "Future Retribution," and Prof. N. K. Davis discusses "The Moral Aspects of Vivisection" in a way that brings together briefly nearly everything that any person of note has said on the subject. Max Muller describes the astonishing ideas of the Buddhists on the subject of Charity, and George John Romanes opens up a great subject with an article on "Mind in Men and Animals." The other articles are one by President Gilman on Titles (chiefly scholastic), one by Judge John A. Jameson on "Speculation in Politics," and one by John W. Johnston on "Railway Land-grants."

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The farmers in this vicinity predict an early Spring.

Every voter should turn out and vote on next Tuesday.

The town committee and health board hold their last meeting of the year this Friday, March 6th, at 2.30 p. m.

We are glad to see Mr. J. N. Randolph, the harness maker, again at his place of business, after his recent illness.

Mr. Still has rented his house on Mountain avenue to Mr. Martin Alpers, of Brooklyn, who expects to occupy it about the middle of next month.

Mr. Oliver Badgley who has resided in our town for the past two years, removed on Wednesday last to Belvidere, N. J. Mr. Badgley intends to manage a farm at that place.

Oakley A. Johnson's name appears on the list of delinquent taxpayers by mistake. On authority of the township collector, he is not nor has not been a delinquent taxpayer.

Miss Helen M. Nessersmith, a young lady who formerly boarded in our town with Mrs. Ladd, died the first of last month in Switzerland, where she had been traveling for her health.

Frederick Baldwin, who recently sold his house and lot on Central avenue, purchased of George R. Lines this week a building lot on Orchard street, on which he intends erecting a dwelling.

The primaries for the nomination of township officers have been called, that of the Republicans for Saturday evening, March 7th, and the Democrats on Monday evening, March 9th, at the town rooms.

Empire Engine Co., No. 1, held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening. Resolutions of condolence were unanimously adopted, to be presented to J. Warren Brown, President of the Company, on account of the death of his mother on Saturday last.

The H. & L. Co., No. 1 held their regular monthly meeting on Monday evening last. John M. C. Marsh was elected foreman in place of Howard P. Manning, resigned, he having been elected first assistant engineer of the fire department. Samuel Gottschalk, of H. & L. Co., No. 1, received the nomination for chief engineer and B. H. Woodruff for second assistant.

Atlas Lodge, No. 125, F. & A. M., held their annual supper at the Westfield Hotel on Monday evening last. After sitting down to a bountiful supply of eatables, speech-making was indulged in, in which Messrs. Pennington, Hodges, Nichols and others took part. Some very fine singing was executed by Mr. John Miller, of Fanwood, and Wm. Amitrano, of our town.

Mrs. Dolly B. Brown, aged 73 years, widow of the late Joshua Brown, died at her late residence on Saturday last, of pneumonia. Her funeral occurred on Tuesday, March 3d, at 12 o'clock. Services were held in the Baptist church, of which the deceased was a consistent member. The body was taken on the 1.28 p. m. train for interment in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery.

The following letters remain uncalled for in our post office:—J. B. Crawford, Genevia Scherf, Mrs. Annie Williams, Miss Hattie M. Avis, Geo. Ortleb, Mrs. William Simpson, Charlie Weaver, Mrs. Ellie Clark, Margaret Cunningham, Eliza Gardner, Octavia Harris, Alice E. Ross, August Hocker, Roller Rink Manager, Mr. S. Scudder, Mrs. G. M. Barton.

The fire boys are considerably exercised over the election to be held on Wednesday evening for a chief and second assistant engineer of the fire department. Mr. Frank R. Pennington, of Empire Engine Co., and Mr. Samuel Gottschalk, of the H. & L. Co., have been nominated for the office of chief. Both are good men, and, whoever wins, the firemen will have a good and able leader. The [illegible] may be said of the candidates for second assistant, Mr. Benj. H. Woodruff, of the Rocket Engine Co., and Mr. A. J. Champers, of the H. & L. Co.

A Card.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Will you please express my thanks to the members of the Plainfield Fire Department, for their remarkably prompt and efficient handling of the fire which occurred at my house last Friday? And also for the care they exercised in tearing up to prevent further damage. Receiving a call at 2 o'clock in the morning for a fire of that description, and extinguishing it with less than $300 damage, reflects credit well deserved.

Respectfully,
FERDINAND FISH.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to pass the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., March 2, 1885.

AN ORDINANCE

To Repeal certain Ordinances.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

That the following Ordinances be and the same are hereby repealed:

"An Ordinance designating a council chamber and a city court room," approved November 16, 1874.

And

"An Ordinance regulating the sale of goods, wares and merchandise at auction," approved January 8, 1874.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

O. B. LEONARD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., March 2, 1885.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment of property and the collection of taxes within the City of Plainfield for the year 1885.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. There shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the current expenses of this city for the year 1885 the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.)

SEC. 2. There shall be further assessed, levied and collected by tax for the support of the City Poor for the year 1885 the sum of Thirty-five Hundred Dollars ($3500) at the same time and in the same manner as the said sum of Ten Thousand Dollars mentioned in Section One of this Ordinance is assessed, levied and collected.

SEC. 3. There shall be still further assessed, levied and collected by tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield a sum equal to one-fifth of one mill on the dollar on all the taxable property in said city, such tax to be levied and collected at the same time and in like manner with the amount mentioned in Section One of this Ordinance, and the moneys when collected shall be held as provided in Chapter CLXIII Laws of New Jersey for 1883.

SEC. 4. That in addition to the taxes to be assessed, levied and collected by the first section of this Ordinance, there shall be assessed, levied and collected for the use of the City of Plainfield for the year 1885, an extra tax to wit, the sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) pursuant to section Twenty-six of the City Charter and the vote for "Money" at the city's [illegible] held on the second day of December, 1884, said sum of Five Thousand Dollars to be assessed, levied and collected at the same time and in the same manner, and the commissioners of appeals on said [illegible] shall [illegible] at the same time as [illegible] by law in the case of the [illegible] city taxes.

Theodore Thomas'
CONCERT!
MUSIC HALL,
MARCH 10TH.
In response to repeated requests from the public the Music Hall Association have engaged Mr. Thomas and his full Orchestra to give a Grand Concert in the Music Hall, on March 10th. The expense involved in engaging Mr. Thomas is much greater than that of any other attraction offered to the Plainfield public. If this concert is well patronized, it is proposed to give one or two Thomas Concerts in the Music Hall annually; if the public fail adequately to support the Concert of March 10th, it will doubtless be the last Thomas Concert to be offered here for several years. Upon payment at Reynolds' or Shaw's drug stores or to any of the Directors, at $1.50 per ticket, receipted slips will be given entitling the holder to select his seat.
Holders of such receipted slips (and only such holders) will be entitled to select seats in the order of their application at the drug stores above named, on Friday, March 6th, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. On Saturday, March 7th, some of the seats not previously taken may be marked down at $1 each. A limited number of general admissions to the Hall (seats not guaranteed) will be sold at the box office on night of the Concert.

A HOME DRUGGIST
TESTIFIES.
Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—
RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.
SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

WHEN you enclose a postage stamp to a business house, or a friend, don't lick a corner of it and stick it fast to your letter. This is vulgar. Take a pen-knife and cut two slits in your paper, a quarter inch apart, and an inch long, and that will hold the stamp.

ON Sunday of last week the Salvation Army at Asbury Park gathered in fifty new converts. At that rate it won't take long to christianize the place. But those most in need of salvation didn't seem to get it, for the Asbury Park Journal reports chicken stealing to be still a prominent branch of industry in the western part of the town.

THOSE who remember the first concert of the Columbia College Glee Club in the Park avenue Baptist church of this city, and those who know of the high standing of that organization vocally and personally, will understand that there is a musical treat promised the public by the announcement of the reappearance of the club, Friday evening, the 20th inst., in Music Hall.

A NUMBER of commuters over the P. & R. railroad leave the train at Elizabeth and take the Pennsylvania road to New York, on account of the report that the bridge is not safe. A correspondent of the New York Dial says the Reading Company started the report so that they could have an excuse to build a new bridge, charge it to the Central Company, and make a big profit by the same.

THE annual meeting of the Presbyterian Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held in the Chapel of the First Presbyterian church at three o'clock p. m., on Tuesday next. At 3:30 o'clock in the church, Mrs. Dr. Jackson, Missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will address the meeting, giving an account of the medical missionary work in India. Ladies and gentlemen are cordially invited to be present.

THE entire community will learn with deep and sincere sorrow of the death, during this (Thursday) morning, of Mrs. John H. Cuthbert. Probably no one was more admired for her many virtues than the deceased, and her loss will be long felt with regret wherever her kind heart, her christian influence and her gentle presence is remembered.

A LARGE number of our best citizens gathered at the late residence of Mr. Alfred Berry, last Saturday, to take silent part in the funeral ceremonies of the deceased. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiated, and the pall bearers were Messrs W. McD. Coriell, D. J. Boice, P. M. French, D. F. Randolph, R. M. Kitsworth, and L. M. Compton.

The Elizabeth Presbytery.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth held a temperance institute in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church of this city on Tuesday. The committee having the matter in charge were Revs. W. E. Honeyman, W. H. Sampson, and Rev. N. W. Cadwell of Westfield. The pastor of the institute was Rev. W. R. Richards. Meetings were held at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7:45 p. m. The programme selected was an interesting and instructive one.

Joshua Whitcomb.

A very fair sized audience greeted Denman Thompson at the Music Hall last Saturday night, and received the full measure of dramatic treat promised. The acting of the one who took the title character was good enough to carry through the play successfully in itself. The support, however, afforded him was most excellent, and the combination resulted in a performance of great merit. "Uncle Josh" drew from his audience tears and laughter at will. Seldom have Plainfielders the pleasure of witnessing a theatrical entertainment so well rendered throughout.

Monmouth Park Racing This Year.

President George L. Lorillard has announced four events for the first summer meeting at Monmouth Park, seventeen for the midsummer meeting, and five for the second summer meeting. There will be twenty-three days of racing and $125,000 added money. Racing will begin on Saturday, July 4th, and will continue on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays until August 25th. Mr. Lorillard has also sent out the conditions of the Champion Stallion Stakes for 1886, which are now open for colts and fillies now yearlings. There will be $5,000 added to the $500 subscriptions. This year promises to be the best in racing annals ever known.

In Memoriam.

The First National Bank adopted the following memorial at their meeting on Tuesday, March 3, 1885.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Almighty to remove from us by death, Alfred Berry, for many years one of the directors of this bank, therefore

Resolved, That we have learned of the death of our fellow director with unfeigned sorrow, and we hereby tender to the afflicted family of the deceased our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this, their great bereavement.

Resolved, That in the death of Alfred Berry, we realize that this bank has lost one of its most active, energetic and faithful directors; this city, one of its most enterprising and reliable merchants; and this community, one of its most valued and trusted citizens, whose place in these varied walks of life it will be exceedingly difficult to fill.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered at length upon the minutes, and a copy thereof forwarded to the family of the deceased.

Plainfield, N. J., March 3d, 1885.

Annual Township Reports.

The township of Warren presents a very fair showing in its annual statement for 1885. The recapitulations show that there is in the hands of Collector Harmon H. Tunison, for special school purposes, $804.75; other school money, $1,383.67. Township money in hands of Treasurer, W. Howard Toms, $207.89. There is due for delinquent taxes $190.62, delinquent special school taxes, $101.74. Peter Newmiller is the Town Clerk, and is a careful and efficient officer.

The report of the Collector of Fanwood township, William Hetfield, shows that the affairs of that township are in a healthy condition. There is in the hands of the Treasurer, L. W. Miller, $372.64. There is due for taxes 1882, $22.95; 1883, $59.03; 1884, $500.54. Collector Hetfield reports a balance for school purposes of $1,735.24.

The 13th Annual Report of the condition of North Plainfield township, is most satisfactory. The Collector, Mr. Wm. H. Shotwell, shows a lesser amount of unpaid taxes than in any previous year, compared to the amount of the duplicate. The bonded indebtedness of the township was reduced during the past year, $4,000. There has been paid over for school purposes, $10,342.88, and there is a cash balance on hand of $5,343.15. The total cash balance in the hands of the Treasurer, Mr. Francis H. Gardner, is $7,150.24, divided as follows: Township, $1,026.21; Poor, $268.74; Roads, $184.03; Interest (bonded debt) $1,010.01. Sinking Fund (bonded debt), $4,301.25. The expenses for the year, were: Township, $2,439.71; Roads, $2,348.78; Poor, $1,414.95.

For Sleepless Persons.

When nervous wakefulness ensues at night-time, when there is a desire to sleep, but on account of a peculiar state of mind and body rest will not come, inhalation of pure air is a safe and efficient soporific. It is observed in these conditions that a person only breathes halfway, and that the oxygen in the lungs is kept exhausted. A physician recommends a full respiration as the best remedy for this kind of wakefulness, which is produced frequently by the condition of the atmosphere as well as state of the mind.

Knights of Pythias.

The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias at its annual meeting at Trenton made some very important alterations in the Grand Lodge constitution, which should be read by every member of the order. The time of the annual meeting has been changed from February to December, and the fiscal year will therefore end in June instead of December, as heretofore. The per capita tax for the ensuing year was fixed at twenty cents. A motion was made to have the next meeting at Newark, but it was lost, and it will therefore be held as usual in Trenton.

Temperance Notes.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the "Scarlet Knights" held a very enthusiastic and interesting meeting on Sunday evening last. John N. Sayers, Sir Knight Commander and Thos. C. Price, Senior Vice Commander, addressed the meeting on the evils of intemperance, from personal knowledge. One adult signed the pledge and Roll of the Order. This Order although young, is steadily growing in numbers, and is destined to wield some influence among the working classes. Meetings are held every Thursday and Sunday evenings, in Democratic Hall, on Front street.

The Next Vocal.

The second private concert of the Plainfield Vocal Society, will be given in Music Hall, next Tuesday evening. The programme selected is more generally within the power of the members than usual, and will consequently be the more pleasing to the subscribers than is customary. The music will be as follows:

"Fair Ellen"	With Mrs. Lazar-Sisselwed and Mr. Stoddard as soloists.
"By Babylon's Wave"	Ch. Gounod.
"Hear My Prayer"	Mendelssohn.
"Alone a Bale"	R. L. DePearsall
"Rosalie Coquette"	F. Champneys
"The Miller's Wooing"	A. Faning.
"Night"	J. Rheinberger.
"Rest"	R. L. De Pearsall.
"O! Wert Thou in the Cauld Blast"	Mendelssohn.
"There is an Hour of Hallowed Peace"	E. J. Fitz Hugh.

A few subscriptions for this and the next concert, with four reserved seats to each, at $7, may be obtained of W. R. Cock.

Fires.

Friday of last week occurred two fires, in this city, that fortunately were not specially disastrous. The first was discovered at about two o'clock in the morning at the residence of Mr. Henry Demarest, on Park avenue, next to the Art Gallery, owned by Mr. Ferd. Fish. The fire broke out under a grate where the beams had charred and smouldered for many a day—as they are doing in various other houses throughout the city. Second Assistant Chief Saltzman was in charge of the Department, and no fire was ever more quickly extinguished and with less damage to its surroundings. Through some error No. 1 Engine Co. was sent in a wrong direction, but whose fault it was cannot be satisfactorily settled in the column of a newspaper. The damage was about $200, which was fully covered by an insurance on the property of $4,000.

The barn of Mr. P. Lynch, on Elizabeth street and Plainfield avenue, was fired by some unknown cause, Friday afternoon. The Department turned out, but in spite of the fact that Mr. Lynch pays his fire tax regularly, and is consequently deserving of protection, the apparatus was ordered back under the mistaken idea that the property was situated outside of the fire limits. Before the Department was in possession of three high-priced teams, its members had been known to almost drag their arms off in their efforts to reach the moon, or the reflection of a fire in some distant county. Friday afternoon, however, the fire was permitted to burn itself out and destroy the contents of the barn. Two horses were saved, but the loss is estimated by Mr. Lynch to be $600 on which is an insurance of $300.

The window drapery in the nursery of Mr. J. H. Poillon's residence on Putnam avenue, caught fire Wednesday morning from a small spirit lamp. The courage of Mrs. Poillon in tearing down the inflammable curtains and beating out the flames which spread quickly among the soft little articles that are so necessary a part of a baby's toilette, saved the entire property. The loss will possibly exceed $100.

High License a Protection.

From the Trenton Times we copy as below, one of the most comprehensive arguments on the question of high license that we have seen. Its figures we can endorse as accurate, and its reasoning as sound:

The Plainfield Times attacks the Trenton Times because we advocate so vigorously high license. It quotes us quite at length and then tries to explode our arguments by instancing Plainfield. It says there is a strong temperance sentiment in that city. High license also prevails there. Every saloon in Plainfield pays five hundred dollars license, and every hotel pays three hundred dollars for license every year. The Times remarks that instead of closing up saloons they have increased under high license. In 1882, when high license went into force, there were eleven licensed saloons. This year there are fourteen licensed saloons.

Therefore, chuckles the Times, high license is a failure. Saloons have increased rather than diminished. Granted. But high license didn't increase the saloons. The fact is the last part of our Plainfield contemporary's argument contradicts the first part. Public sentiment is not so strong in Plainfield as is supposed. That is all. The liquor trade, like all trade, is regulated by the principle of supply and demand. Fourteen saloons wouldn't pay nearly $7,000 for licenses unless Plainfield citizens consumed enough liquor to warrant the expenditure of that sum. There may be a strong temperance sentiment, but there is also a pretty fair demand for alcoholic drinks. If the license fee was less there would be more saloons. The small increase of saloons is not due to high license, but to a greater popular demand for drink. Let Plainfield reduce its license fee to the sum required in most cities and its saloons would double.

But more than this, Plainfield stands to-day, despite the arguments of the Times, as a magnificent example of the benefits of high license. According to the last census, Plainfield's population was 8,125. If there are fourteen saloons, then there is but one drinking place to nearly every 600 of the population. Elizabeth, with 28,229 population, has 134 saloons, or one drinking place to every two hundred of the population. Rahway, with 6,455 population, has more saloons than Elizabeth. Newark, with 136,508 population, has several thousand saloons. Jersey City is proportionately high. There are scores of towns in the State ranging in population from 1,500 to 5,000 in population that have as many saloons as Plainfield. They wouldn't have one-third as many if the license was high.

Then take Plainfield as an example of the financial benefits of high license. The nine saloons and five hotels of Plainfield yield an annual revenue to the city of $6,000. If the hotels paid the same license as the saloons, which they should do, the city would reap $7,000 annual benefit. Elizabeth, at its present license rate, gets about $13,500 a year. If the fee was the same as in Plainfield, and all the saloons paid it, the revenue would be $67,000. But, as a matter of fact, high license would cut down the saloons in Elizabeth over one half. Suppose sixty saloons remained under high license. Then instead of $13,500, Elizabeth's annual license revenue would be $30,000. In other words, the saloons would decrease nearly sixty per cent., and the revenue would increase about 120 per cent.

It is very evident that the facts are all dead against the anti-high license papers. High license speaks for itself, which can never be said of prohibition. That had to be spoken for all the time. Statistics show that every city and town in the Union that has tried high license is more than pleased with the good results.

The Latest Rinkles.

Champion skaters are too numerous and have too much newspaper talk.

A Boston physician says roller skating tends inevitably to deform and enlarge the feet.

School children can skate without any bad effects, in spite of the adverse opinion of wiseacres.

There is a town in Ohio which cannot boast of a roller rink. However it expect to get there next week.

A Pennsylvania village has fitted up the town hall as a skating rink in order to raise money to pay off its debt.

The corner-stone of the Crescent Rink at Broadway and Fourth street was laid most auspiciously on inauguration day. Good luck is sure to follow.

The Seneca Falls Reveille says that roller skating has become so popular in that village that husbands are going out to board in order to give their wives time to attend the rink.

The statement that the East Orange roller skating rink has paid a profit of $25,000 above all expenses, since it was opened September 29th, 1884, is denied by the management.

An exchange has an article on "the rise of the roller rink." This ought to confirm the theory of the young man new to the rollers that the floor flew up and hit him in the back of the neck.

In Harper's Young People of last week is a good illustration and an excellent article on roller skating. It gives the opinions of some of the best physicians in the country on the subject.

At the meeting of the New York State Homœopathic Society, Dr. Brown said he had cured a lady of nervous disease by having her practice on roller skates a few hours every evening for three months.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, the Rev. Dr. John Hall, and the Rev. Dr. Armitage, three of the most noted clergymen, and Dr. Willard Parker a most famous physician, uphold roller skating. They say it is moral and healthy.

Dr. Evans, who was ejected from an Illinois rink for breaking the rules by asking a young lady to skate with him without a previous introduction, has determined to bring suit against the proprietors for $20,000 damages.

There are said to be thirty thousand roller skating rinks in the United States. We don't see what this country needs of any more matrimonial agencies, then. Young people of both sexes fall together so easy in skating rinks, you know.

A bill has been introduced in the Minnesota legislature providing that males and females shall not be allowed to use or occupy the floor of any roller skating rink in that state at the same time. The bill also provides for licensing rinks.

The story about the girl who traded her engagement ring for a pair of roller skates is still on its travels. A new story is just starting about a Madison avenue belle who sleeps with her skates under her pillow. Now let the scissors be sharpened!

Our friend Alec of Russia has found a way out of all his difficulties. He proposes opening free roller rinks all over his country and the Nihilists have agreed to let up on him in consideration thereof. They will all become instructors at the new rink.

Bishop Mullen, of the diocese embracing Oil City, Pennsylvania, has condemned roller skating rinks, and pastors of Catholic churches have notified their flocks that sacrament will hereafter be denied to those visiting such places in the future.

"Not many days ago a leading citizen, and temperance man said of this community: 'The skating rinks have done more to close up the pool rooms and saloons than all the temperance meetings in town, save those held by Mabee and English.'"—Newton Herald.

The popularity of roller skating rinks has been proof against reflection upon their morality and warnings against danger to health and limb. But if the latest charge—that the skating enlarges the feet—shall be established, it will be good-by rinks. The girls will never stand that.

For the last few Thursday evenings (which is the usual prayer meeting night at the different churches), there has been no music in the Dover, New Jersey, rink, and none will be present on said evening, until further notice, although the rink will be kept open for those who wish to skate, and music will be furnished on all other week-days and evenings.

The wise men of Bordentown, in council assembled, have decreed that the owners of the rink must not admit school children until after school hours; that minors must not be admitted to the rink if the parents file a written protest with the manager; that no liquors must be sold in the building, nor must there be any connection between it and any saloon.

A number of the many friends that Mr. W. L. Fursman has secured in this city by his continued kindnesses and courtesies, united recently in purchasing and presenting him with an elegant medal of gold, as a slight token of their hearty appreciation of his admirable traits of character. The ceremonies of presentation were specially enjoyable, and in which the members of the After-the-Rink Club took an active part.

All will remember with most pleasing satisfaction the golden haired little lady, Miss Blanche Hayden, whose charming grace and fascinating manners won the admiration of all, as her talent and skill as a skater won their hearty approbation. By special request the management of the Casino has again secured her appearance in that rink, and to-morrow afternoon and evening all may have the pleasure of witnessing her ability.

The roller skating mania has completely exhausted the market of a certain size of boxwood. Less than eighteen months ago a ton of three-inch boxwood could be had for $38; now it is impossible to purchase a ton of suitable wood for skate wheels for $120. Rollers are made of several sizes, ranging from one and five-eights to two and one-eight inches in diameter, and only the natural growth of boxwood approximating these sizes is fit for use.

In Elizabeth, application was made to the overseer of the poor for a new set of wheels for roller skates. The applicant said his were worn out, and he really needed new ones. He didn't want to apply to the city, but he had used the old ones just as long as he possibly could, and now a new set of wheels was absolutely necessary. The overseer, seeing the urgency of the case, took it under immediate consideration and will probably refer to it in his next annual report.

Silly and degraded as were the walking matches that took place a year or two ago, they had the merit of making walking somewhat fashionable and thus induced a great many people to take healthful exercise in this way. But the roller match, opened in New York Monday morning last has no merit whatever. Roller skating needs no incentive, the most serious question being how to keep young people from indulging in too much of it, and how to keep it within the limits of purely beneficial amusement.—Elizabeth Journal.

Amid the disputes about the good or ill effects of roller skating, there seems to be a middle ground to take which is tenable and reasonable. The exercise, of itself, is not dangerous, if practiced in moderation. If immoderately taken, like out-door skating, running, ball playing, or rope jumping, (the latter, by the way, the most dangerous of all these exercises), it injures, and may under circumstances of previous derangement of head or heart, even destroy life. Such appears to be the opinion of leading physicians, and it is of course a sensible conclusion.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY, MARCH 2d.

The Council met in regular meeting.

Present—President Coriell and Messrs. Beguelin, Dumont, Gallup, Goddard, Love, Marsh, Simpson and Wadsworth—9.

Absent—Messrs. Livingston and West—2.

The following from the Overseer of the Poor, was received and filed.

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN—In obedience to the requirements of the city ordinance, I beg leave to submit a report of the operations of this department for the quarter ending Feb. 1st, 1885. The number of orders issued by the Overseer of the Poor during this quarter was two hundred and eighty-nine (289); 234 for provisions, 51 for coal and wood, 4 for clothing, (shoes).

The orders for provisions amount to	$173.75
" " Coal and wood "	85.47
Paid rent	120.00
" Board	125.00
David Hand (Poor House) 4 months	252.98
" For clothing (shoes)	5.00
" Interments	45.00
" Incidental	21.40
" Hospital ex (1)	8.71
Total amount	$836.31

The number of families receiving aid from the city, during this time was fifty-one (51). This includes supplies of provisions and coal; also rent and board. Of this number (18) received orders for provisions and coal, eight received orders for provisions and coal, and had their rent paid; also three received orders for provisions, coal and shoes; two received orders for coal and had rent paid; seven received orders for provisions only; six received orders for coal only; five had their rent paid only; nine had their board paid only; one received orders for provisions and shoes only. A large portion of this number have received aid from the city for a long time and may be considered as permanent city poor. Temporary relief has been given in a few cases during the winter months, on account of the inability to obtain employment. A very large number of the city poor are females—widows, with, in many cases, large families of small children to support, while six of this number have been deserted by their husbands, and are thus obliged to ask aid from the city, to help support their families. The number of families whose rent has been paid during this time is nineteen (19). The number whose board has been paid during this quarter is nine (9). I propose also to give a brief summary of this department, for the year ending Feb. 1, 1885 as appears from the records in my office. I have issued during the year one thousand one hundred and fifty orders for supplies, of which number nine hundred and fifty-nine (959) were for provisions, one hundred and seventy-one (171) were for coal and wood, twenty-two (22) were for clothing (shoes). During the year seventy-eight (78) families received aid from City Poor Fund, of which forty-eight (48) received supplies of provisions and coal, twenty had rent paid, and two persons had board paid. The number of deaths during the past year was nine. The several items of expenses will appear from the books, as reported quarterly to your Honorable body as follows:

	Pro.	Coal.	Rent.	Board.	Clo'ing.
May 1, 1884,	$241.50	$1.30	$79.45	$109.00	$7.50
Aug. 1, 1884,	155.00	21.22	169.50	41.50	7.25
Nov. 1, 1884,	164.75	21.51	176.00	147.50	6.25
Feb. 1, 1885,	173.75	85.47	120.00	125.00	5.00

It will be seen from the foregoing statement and from the fact that a large number of families that have received aid from the City Poor Fund, from the amount expended, that economy has been proven in giving such aid, and while the Overseer of the Poor has endeavored to deal gently and humanly with this unfortunate class of citizens, he has also sought to protect the interest of the taxpayers. The applications for aid are increasing and very pushing, so that much judgment as well as a wise discretion is required in dealing justly with this important matter. In submitting his report the undersigned hopes to meet your approbation.

Respectfully submitted,
J. OAKLEY NODYNE,
Overseer of the Poor.

NEW BUSINESS.

Mr. Marsh offered for adoption the usual ordinance in relation to the assessment and collection of taxes. Adopted on its second reading, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its final passage.

Also an ordinance, repealing the ordinance of 1874 designating the Council Chamber, and the ordinance of 1874 in relation to auctions. The same course was taken as above.

Mr. Marsh presented for adoption a resolution to notify the owner of the Council Chamber that it would not be occupied by the Council after the expiration of the present lease, on May 1st. Adopted.

A resolution to accept the offer of John Wilson to furnish the city crushed stone at $1.12½ per ton, was adopted.

A proposed ordinance for the better protection of theatres, etc., from fire, was read and referred to the Lamps Com.

By resolution, the Com. on Lamps was requested to report a style of lamp to be used hereafter throughout the city.

The Aud. Com. reported all bills correct, and warrants were ordered drawn for the same.

The Council then adjourned.

Poor Girls!

It seems that the paragraphers are ruining Vassar College. That is, one of the professors says so, according to a New York letter in the Buffalo Express. "A professor in Vassar College tells me that the managers are really alarmed by the steady falling off in pupils during the past five years. The number now is only a little more than half that of 1880. 'The cause isn't in any deteriation of the college itself,' said the professor, 'for it is the same noble school as ever. The trouble is that Vassar has become a thing to poke fun at. Half the new jokes about girls are put upon Vassar students. Their doings are ridiculed, exaggerated, falsified; and the very name of Vassar is a synonym for feminine foolishness. The consequence is that girls are beginning to dislike to go there. I wouldn't be surprised to see the doors of the college shut in five years more. The newspaper paragraphers will have done it.'"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE CASHMERE SHAWL.

BY L. L.

"I'm sure I don't know what to do," said Sara Ellington.

She had been sitting at the window for some time, staring steadfastly at the falling drops of the April rain.

"About what?" said Miss Carleton, who, a teacher in the same school, was also waiting for the shower to subside a little before she dared to venture forth into the streets. The little ones were gone, the desks and benches all deserted, the slates and books piled away, and the janitor evidently in a hurry to have the place to himself.

"Mrs. Copley has invited me to go to the Academy of Design with her, and I've nothing to wear but this old Scotch plaid shawl that is moth-eaten, and darned, and faded and everything else that it ought not to be," sighed Sara.

"Mrs. Copley? Oh, yes, I remember," said Miss Carleton, with a knowing smile. "She is Gerald Leigh's sister—the one that lives in the brown-stone house on Madison avenue. Sadie, I'm very much afraid you'll have to stay at home."

"But I don't want to stay at home," fretted Sara. "I have so few chances to go out anywhere."

"Least of all with Mr. Leigh's aristocratic sister," said Miss Carleton, laughing. "But I'll tell you what you can do, Sadie—hire a shawl."

"Hire one?"

"Why of course. I know plenty of ladies that do it. Go to Mademoiselle Felicie's on Upper Broadway; she'll charge you ten dollars for one afternoon's wear of an India shawl; but that's better than paying five hundred for it, out and out."

"I never heard of such a thing," said Sara.

"Well, you see, you haven't heard all the world," said Miss Carleton, with an air of superiority. "It's often done. I hired a lace shawl myself the day I went to the picnic, and a pretty taking I was in for fear I should tear it. But camels' hair is a different thing, you know. And you've such pretty sloping shoulders you would look perfectly charming in one of those lovely, sandal-wood-scented things."

"But—wouldn't it be acting a falsehood?"

"Oh, pshaw!" cried Miss Carleton. "Acting a falsehood, indeed! Is it any worse than hiring a carriage when you cant afford to keep one of your own?"

"I don't know," hesitated Sara.

And then she thought how rich the camels' hair shawl would look, and remembered that Gerald Leigh would probably be of the party.

"Will you go there with me?" said she, turning suddenly to Miss Carleton.

"Where?"

"To Mademoiselle Felicie's."

"I don't care. It has stopped raining, and I may as well go there as anywhere."

Mademoiselle Felicie was a smooth-voiced, voluble Frenchwoman, who could talk a customer into any mood she pleased; and when Sara Ellington went away she carried in a compact parcel under her arm the India shawl whose deep, rich colors and artistic arrangement of patterns had captivated her fancy.

"It makes me feel just like the 'daw in borrowed plumage' of my childhood's fable," said she to herself; "but it is only for one afternoon, and I do so hate to have Gerald think that I am shabby."

Mrs. Ellington shook her head and looked very grave when Sara unfolded her shawl and claimed her mother's admiration for it.

"My dear," she said, "it is very beautiful, but—it is not yours."

"Mamma!"

"It reminds me of the old story of the china pot and iron pot swimming down stream together—and do you remember what became of the china pot?"

"I don't see that that has anything to do with me, mamma."

"Don't you, my dear? Well, you are old enough, and ought to be wise enough, to decide these things for yourself," said Mrs. Ellington, quietly. "But if you would take my advice, Sadie, you would send this gay shawl back, and either remain at home or wear your own wrappings."

But Sara did not take her mother's unpalatable advice.

"How nice you look, dear," said Mrs. Copley, as her pretty little chocolate-colored coupe stopped in front of the unpretending red-brick house whose second story was rented by Sara Ellington and her mother. "And what a love of an India shawl! An heirloom, eh?"

Sara smiled and muttered some indistinct answer as she stepped into the carriage with her superbly-dressed friend. And as she did so a sudden consciousness came upon her of how little her faded hat accorded with the rich shawl, and how frayed the flounces of her worn black silk dress were.

Would not the old plaid Scotch shawl have been better, after all? But it was too late, now, to weigh these considerations; and Sara derived a sort of pleasure from the soft feeling of the camels' hair folds as they fell about her.

"Gerald will meet us at the academy," said Mrs. Copley, as they rolled along. "Gerald had another engagement, but of course he broke it when he heard that you were to be with me."

And Sara smiled and blushed and looked quite pretty enough to justify Mr. Leigh in his infatuation.

It was a brilliant spring afternoon, and the Academy of Design was crowded with the fashionable world of New York. Gerald Leigh met his sister and her friend on the threshold of the water color room, and at once gave Sara his arm.

"I could not resist the opportunity of meeting you," said he; and Sara's heart gave a happy, tumultuous throb as he spoke.

How glad she was now that she had hired the India shawl! How shabby she would have felt in the old Scotch plaid, with its darned places and the faded spot in the middle.

As she stood in front of a beautiful figure-piece, still leaning on Mr. Leigh's arm, a soft tap came on her other shoulder, and turning with a start, she saw a man in police uniform.

"You must come with me," said he. "Quiet now," as Gerald Leigh made an indignant step forward. "Least said is soonest mended, and there ain't no sense in makin' a fuss!"

"But why?" demanded Leigh, still holding tight on Sara's arm.

"That there shawl's stolen," said the man. "Mrs. Richfield on Fifth avenue lost it three weeks ago. She's here to-day and recognized it at once. She's a-waitin' outside in her carriage, and we'd best go to the police-station at once."

"I don't know Mrs. Richfield," gasped Sadie. "I never heard of her. I got this shawl from Mademoiselle Felicie on upper Broadway. Oh, Mr. Leigh," with a convulsive sob, "don't let them take me away!"

Gerald Leigh considered a moment.

"It is as the man says," said he. "We had best go with him. But, of course, I will bail you out at once. There is evidently some glaring misapprehension here."

Poor Sara Ellington nearly fainted with mortification as she was led into the police station—and all for the miserable India shawl!

Under the searching cross-examination of the man in authority there, the truth soon evolved itself. The shawl was Mrs. Richfield's, in very truth; but had been stolen from her by a maid, since dismissed—who, in her turn, had sold it to Mademoiselle Felicie for a mere trifle, that thrifty young woman considering it quite unnecessary to inquire too closely into the matter.

And so it all came out—that Sara Ellington had hired the shawl, to make a brief display of what was not her own. Mr. Leigh's look of grave surprise, Mrs. Copley's ill-concealed contempt—oh, how they stung Sara! She went home in the latter's carriage, exonerated, it is true, from blame, but bitterly mortified, and seeing her own folly as she had never before seen it.

Mr Leigh never called again, and Mrs. Copley, though very polite when they met, "dropped" her, to all intents and purposes.

And that was all that Miss Ellington gained by hiring that India shawl from Mademoiselle Felicie.

THE BAD BOY.

"I guess the neighbors will be mighty glad when you folks get off to Florida," said the groceryman to the bad boy as he came in with a linen duster on, and stamped the snow off his feet. "Such carryings on as you had in church last Sunday night. The minister was in here this morning and he says he don't know what to think of your family. He says your pa was taken with hydrophobia in church, and frothed at the mouth, and barked like a dog, and the deacons had to take him out and sit down on him. What did it mean, and what in thunder you got on a linen duster for in the middle of winter?"

"I am wearing this duster to get accustomed to it. When we get south we shall have to wear palm-leaf clothes all the time," and the bad boy wrapped the tails of the duster around his cold legs and backed up to the coal stove. "But you'd a dide if you had been in our pew Sunday night. You see I was reading in a paper about how the senators in Washington amuse themselves, and there was a story about Wade Hampton's joke on Senator Garland. Hampton eats caramels, and Garland always comes along and takes caramels off Hampton's desk, and so t'other day Hampton took a piece of brown soap and whittled it just the size of a caramel and wrapped it in a glazed paper and laid it on his desk, and Garland eat it. It tickled me, and I thought of pa in a minute. When we go to church pa gets nervous, cause he can't smoke, and he always wants to be chewing something, and as I always have some candy or something in my pocket, pa reaches in my pocket on the sly, when he is watching the minister, gets a gum drop or something, and chews all through meeting. I don't think it is right for an old man to chew in meeting, anyway. So I took a piece of soap and fixed it just as Senator Hampton did, and put it in the pocket next to pa. In the other pocket I had some sure enough caramels, cause I did not want to get the soap myself. I was chewing right along, and pa stood it until the minister gave out the sociable notices, and prayed, and when we stood up to sing pa he nudged me for candy. I was busy finding which song they was singing, cause they all look alike in the hymn book, and when they got on the last verse pa nudged me again, and I kind of winked my left eye and glanced down toward my pocket, and pa he had his hand in there quickern a wink, and he got the brown soap caramel and had it in his mouth in no time, and then the choir got to the home stretch, as pa says, and we sat down. I guess pa bit right through the soap the first round, for he snorted and said 'yah,' and I guess that was what they thought sounded as though he barked like a dog. Everybody looked at pa, so he couldn't spit out the soap, and he held on to it. An old maid that sits in front of us turned right around and looked at pa as though he was a dime museum curiosity, and she never took her eyes off of him. I think a woman ought to keep her eyes off a man long enough to let him spit out a chunk of soap. Well, you ought to have seen me look at the minister when he gave out the text. Our folks always complain 'cause I don't remember the text, so I was bound to commit it to memory if I busted. I dassent look at pa for fear I would snort right out, but I peeked out of the corner of my eye, and he turned red and white and blue, and he tried to keep from swallowing the soap suds. I thought I should cat-nip and quillwheel, right there on the floor. Pretty soon the soap suds and foam began to show on pa's lip and moustache, and he looked offul I tell you. Everybody was looking at him, and the minister stopped and looked over his spectacles, and just then pa couldn't stand it no longer, and he got up and said 'Yah' again and walked over some of my feet and got out in the aisle and he walked towards the vestibule real fast like a man in a hurry to get somewhere, and the soap was making lather enough to shave with, and his upper lip was covered, and everybody looked at him. The deacons followed him out, and the ushers got there just as he began to throw lather on the carpet, and he coughed and sputtered, and they thought he was mad for sure, and they grabbed hold of his arms, and as he struggled to get his hand in his coat-tail pocket for his handkerchief they said, 'Don't let him bite you—don't let him get hold of his revolver!' and they scuffled till pa could get the taste out of his mouth so he could speak, and then he said it was all right, he had eaten a caramel and didn't know it was loaded. Then all was quiet, and the minister went on with the sermon, and pa went to the hydrant and turned the hose on his mouth, and after awhile he came in and sat on a back seat, and after church I didn't see him. I haint seen him yet, 'cause I asked him before church if I couldn't go and stay all night with my chum, and he said I could. If you was in my place how would you explain that soap business to pa? I don't want to deceive him, and tell a lie. I guess I will tell him 'it is believed to be the work of an incendiary,' and then run. Well I must go out and get acclimated to this linen ulster, before we go to Florida," and the bad boy went out on a hop, skip and jump, while the groceryman looked at him as though he would like to murder him in cold blood.—Peck's Sun.

LIME BAKING POWDERS.

Why the "Royal" is Absolutely Pure.

Analysis shows the presence of Tartrate of Lime in several brands of Baking Powder placed upon the market:

"CLEVELAND'S" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
"HANFORD'S" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
"TIP TOP" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
"HECKER'S" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
"DE LAND'S" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
"GILLET'S" baking powder contains tartrate of lime.
All BULK baking powders contain tartrate of lime.

• The presence of this substance in the above-named Baking Powders results from the use of inferior Cream of Tartar in their manufacture. The Cream of Tartar of the market, from which they are made, contains Tartrate of Lime in amounts varying from six to twenty per cent, and hence these powders contain this impurity as a foreign substance to a corresponding extent, which is of no value, but a positive detriment in any powder in which it is found.

NO LIME IN ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated.

This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor, and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery, and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care, and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance, and chemically pure in all respects.

No lime, earth, alum, or impurity of any kind can, by inadvertence or by the use of adulterated articles or otherwise, be introduced into the "Royal," and it contains no ingredients except those certified by the most eminent chemists necessary to make a pure, wholesome, and perfect Baking Powder.

• It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only "absolutely pure" Baking Powder made.

POETRY

I WONDER.

If I this night, at set of sun,
Should find my race was nearly run,
Would I have earned the glad "Well done?"—
I wonder.

Would I look back at dear ones here?
Would I go onward without fear?
Would there be time for any tear?—
I wonder.

Would it then be so strangely sweet,
Where loved ones wait their own to greet,
That life would pass with winged feet?—
I wonder.

Would all the ceaseless trials sore
Perplex me never, never more?
Would heartaches, failures, all be o'er?—
I wonder.

He says, "Unto the weary rest,"
Unto the friendless home so blest;
And so to him I leave the rest—
No wonder.

NICKEL PLUGGED WITH LEAD.

In this time of frequent changes,
Friendship broken in a day;
Brightest dreams of brilliant future
Fading in an hour away;
When the clouds of life are darkest
And the fondest hopes are fled,
There is nothing half so constant
As a nickel plugged with lead.

Oh, how often I have pondered
How to put its worth at par;
Logic—surely a bad nickel's
Worth at least a bad cigar.
Still the goddess sits serenely,
With her pretty punctured head,
Where a year ago I placed her
With her fillet plugged with lead.

Scorned by all whom it approaches,
Thrust aside by beggars blind,
Even in the deacon's basket
Sweet repose it cannot find;
Doomed to drear and dire misfortune,
To all things rejected wed,
Since the social ostracism
Of the nickel plugged with lead.

Still, perhaps, when war is raging
It will find surcease from woe,
And, when molded in a bullet,
Seek the heart of warlike foe;
Or, perhaps, when funds are lowest,
Armed with needle, thimble, thread,
I might make a trousers button
Of the nickel plugged with lead.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SALOME'S STRATEGY.

BY A. S.

Miss Salome Wintergreen and her brother Amos were at breakfast, their fare consisting of oatmeal porridge, which Amos despised, and new milk, which always made his head ache. Both agreed with Miss Salome, and Amos meekly ate his portion and said nothing of his aversion having long ago ceased to engage in unprofitable remonstrance.

There had been a long silence, during which Amos fidgeted in his chair, looked often at his sister, and sighed at the uncompromising hardness of her thin, hatchet face, the unbending stiffness of her tall, angular figure. She had been fifty-five years in gaining both, and there was no hope of any softening relaxation of either one or the other.

Amos, short, inclined to fat, of delicate, nervous organization, ten years younger than his sister, was afraid of her; still more afraid of the effect of the communication he wished to make.

After various futile efforts, he said, at last:

"Salome, you and I are getting old!"

"Indeed!" with intense sarcasm, "is that a recent discovery?"

"No—but—it is a little lonesome here sometimes. Salome, now, ain't it?"

"I never find it lonesome. I have plenty of work to employ my time."

"Yes, you are the smartest housekeeper in the village, Salome; everybody says so. But—we—I—that is—I am going to be married!"

It was out at last, and Amos was covered with a cold perspiration from head to foot.

"Amos Wintergreen!"

Miss Salome snapped out her brother's name with such excess of indignant amazement that the poor-spirited man fairly cowered in his chair. But a moment later he plucked up sufficient courage to say:

"Other men get married, Salome!"

"Oh!" with intense sarcasm, "they do, do they?"

"Yes, Salome, and—as I said—we are not young any longer——"

"Oh!" again. "Do you remember the terms of your father's will, Amos Wintergreen?"

"But I am not talking of our father's will, Salome."

"I am. You may remember that one condition was that I was to have a home, here, in this house, for life!"

"Certainly! I never disputed that!"

"And do you suppose for one moment that I am going to have your wife here, taking control!"

"But, Salome——"

"Do you suppose"—in a higher key—"that I am going to live here, in my own house, with a sister-in-law?"

"But she will——"

"Do you suppose I will play second fiddle to any Mrs. Wintergreen?"

"Now, Salome, do be reasonable."

"Reasonable! You are a complete idiot! The idea of a man at your age falling in love!"

"I don't see any absurdity in it," gasped poor Amos, feebly standing his ground.

"You don't. But, after all, you are not so bad as she is. What any woman on the face of the earth wants to marry you for is an amazement to me! She will have her hands full, whoever she is. Do you believe any flibbertigibbit of a wife is going to take care of you in your sick spells, or slave for you as I do?"

"I am sure, Salome, I never asked you to slave for me."

"Never asked me! That's all the sense a man has! You may work your fingers to the bone, and that is all the thanks you get."

"You need not work so hard when you have somebody to help you, Salome."

"Who is she? One of those brazen-faced Green girls, I suppose. They've been angling for you for the last ten years, though you never had sense to see it!"

"No, Salome, it is not one of Farmer Green's girls. I don't think they ever thought of such a thing."

"Who is it, then?"

"You have seen her in church, Salome. She is Mrs. Wilson's cousin, Mrs. Dunbar."

"A widow! That caps the climax! But she will never come here, Amos Wintergreen."

"She has said she would, Salome! She—she is very fond of me, and I am very fond of her!"

The only answer to this timidly uttered avowal of mutual affection was such a stony glare of wrath unutterable that Amos Wintergreen fled, wondering within himself how he had ever plucked up courage to make the momentous announcement.

For from the hour of his birth Amos Wintergreen had been under the rule of terror at the hands of his strong-minded sister, Salome. As a boy he had been cuffed and slapped, had his ears twitched, and his hair pulled by the strong, nervous fingers of the elder sister. As a man he had been hectored into entire submission to her control, being feeble in health, and dependent greatly upon female nursing and cosseting.

Five and forty years these two had lived in the old farm house together, burying father and mother, and seemingly all sufficient one for the other.

Then Mrs. Dunbar, a soft-voiced, brown-eyed mite of a woman, came on a visit to her cousin, Mrs. Wilson, wife of the clergyman of one of the churches of Rockhill, and Amos Wintergreen met her. Through all his life he had known no female influence save submission to Salome, and all at once he fell in love.

Fell in! There was no deliberation about it. Before he knew what it all meant Mrs. Dunbar's soft, brown eyes filled his entire thoughts, and he was constantly seeking her.

She was so gentle, so winning, so utterly unlike Salome, that he could find no limit for his almost worshiping love, and being a man of good education and courteous manner, Mrs. Dunbar liked him.

"A pair of soft fools," Salome pronounced them, and perhaps they were so. But their love was as true and pleasant as if they were twenty years younger. In fact, they were most remarkably unworldly and youthful for their age.

And Salome, working with frightful energy at the usual routine of household duty, made up her mind that no such childish inanity as the widow Dunbar was coming to reign in her stead upon the Wintergreen farm.

"She's had one husband, and that is enough for any woman," decided Salome. "And as for Amos, I can take care of him, as I have done for forty-five years!"

Suddenly, while she swept the kitchen, a great idea loomed upon Salome's mind.

"I have it!" she cried. "Mrs. Wilson says she is as timid as a baby, afraid of the dark; afraid of her own shadow. I have it!"

She threw down the broom, though the kitchen was only half swept, and marched straight to her own room. Here she brushed her hair back from her face and twisted it into a hard knot at the back of her head, covering it with a brown silk bonnet that was a marvel of ugliness. Over a dress of brown merino she folded a shawl of vivid scarlet, and then walked out of the house. The widow Dunbar, with her little white hands, was embroidering a pair of slippers for her dear Amos and weaving day-dreams.

Her "dear departed" had been an old tyrant, who had made a white slave of his wife, terrifying her into submission to all his whims by fits of ungovernable temper, in which he smashed furniture and crockery, and more than once laid the weight of his strong arm upon her. Thinking of his big, burly figure, his savage temper, his horrible oaths, Mrs. Dunbar contrasted with these Amos Wintergreen's low voice and gentle courtesy.

"I am sure he will be kind to me," the little widow thought, and having been transferred at eighteen from the care of a drunken father to that of a brutal husband, the poor woman's greatest idea of happiness was a life with one who would be "kind to her."

She would make him such a tender, loving wife, she resolved, if only he would always speak gently to her, and reward her efforts with his slow, sweet smile. She would put all the money Mr. Dunbar had left her into the Wintergreen farm. She would——

Just at this point her meditations were broken by the entrance of a tall, thin woman, with a stern, hard face, who said:

"You are Mrs. Dunbar, I believe?"

"Yes, ma'am. Will you take a chair?"

"Thank you. I called upon urgent private business. My name is Wintergreen—Salome Wintergreen!"

"I am very glad to see you," said the widow, with cordial sweetness. "Amos has told me so much about you."

"Oh!"

"And I want you to let me love you, because you are his sister!"

"Oh! You are very fond of Amos?"

"Yes. He has told you, has he not, of our engagement?"

"That is why I am here. I have a confession to make to you. Amos ought to have told you, but he is a coward—always was one!"

"Told me what?"

"You may have heard that our father made it an express stipulation in his will that I was always to have a home on the old farm with my brother Amos?"

"Yes, Amos told me that. I was very glad, because I never had a sister. And you have lived with Amos so long you could tell me all his ways."

"H'm! I came upon another errand. I came to tell you some of my ways. Did my brother tell you why my father made that stipulation?"

"No."

"I will tell you, then."

Mrs. Dunbar fairly shivered at the glare of the big, dark eyes fixed upon her at these words.

"I will tell you," repeated Miss Salome; "it is because I am subject to fits—awful fits—and nobody can control me but Amos. If he is out of the house when they come on I break everything I can find; I get carving knives and kill the cows or cats. I pull the fire out of the stove on the floor to make the house burn. If I had one of these fits and you were in the house, I might cut you up with a carving knife or burn you up on the kitchen stove. I don't know what I might do. I am not accountable, you know, for I never remember anything I have done when I come out of the fit."

All this was uttered with a horrible emphasis and solemnity, as if Miss Salome was deeply and wholly mortified at being forced to confess to her ailment.

"Nobody knows it," she continued, watching Mrs. Dunbar's white, quivering face, "but that is the reason Amos and I live alone, and have no servant. That is why we have never married. I might have kept it from you, but my conscience would not let me. I could not have you come into our house unprepared. I'll bid you good morning, ma'am."

So she stalked away again, leaving her victim white and shivering with terror. What! Marry a man with such a sister, an inmate of his house for life? Marry a man who might leave her alone with a lunatic nearly six feet tall, armed with a carving-knife, and with a desire to burn the house down?

Miss Salome stalked home, grim but complacent. If she was any judge of the human face the danger she dreaded was averted.

In the evening, Amos, in his Sunday suit, left the house and took the road to the minister's. In less than half an hour he came back, pale and despondent.

"Salome, she's gone!" he said, sinking into a chair.

"Who?"

"Mary, my wife that was to be. She's gone away and left me a note. Read it!"

And Salome read:

"MY DEAR, DEAR AMOS—My heart is almost broken at the thought of leaving you forever, but I must go. I could not stand it; indeed, indeed, I could not, Amos! My first husband nearly scared me to death, but he never used carving-knives, or tried to set the house on fire, and I should die of fright, I am sure I should, the very first time I saw it. So I will say farewell. Don't come after me, for I shall go South and make some visits. I am very much grieved, Amos, for I love you very dearly.

Your heart broken
MARY."

"As if," said poor Amos, "I would ever raise a carving-knife to her, or try to set the house on fire."

But he never knew, though he settled down once more into bachelor bondage, how it was Salome broke off his love match and secured her own supremacy on Wintergreen Farm.

MIRIAM'S FLIRTATION.

"It is frightfully dull here," exclaimed Miriam Creswick, with her "Diana bow" of a mouth stretched in a most pretentious yawn. "Is there nothing here but crochet work, wild strawberries and tea parties?"

Miriam was the very impersonation of her Jewish name—tall and dark, with creamy complexion and eyes that seemed to melt and swim like stars gliding away in shady springs. And she wore soft, sweeping robes that fell around her in statuesque folds, and moved with the slow, royal grace of a Hebrew Queen, so that Constance Dale looked up to her with girlish admiration as the incarnation of all that was radiant in womanhood.

"But I thought you came here to rest and recruit after the winter's dissipation, Miriam," said Constance.

"So I did, but I don't mean actually to stagnate if I can help it."

Constance looked puzzled. Miss Creswick laughed.

"The dear, unsophisticated little fairy," she cried, gayly. "The sewing circle and a portfolio of embroidery patterns may be enough for you, but won't suffice for me. I must have a flirtation or two to spice the monotony."

"But I thought, Miriam, that Judge Dalton's son——"

"Stuff and nonsense!" interrupted Miriam, with good humored imperiousness. "Of course I'm to marry Percival Dalton some day—or at least so the elders say—and I've no doubt he's a very fine young man."

"Oh, Miriam, you do not mean that you have never seen him?"

"Why are you so horrified at that?" asked Miss Creswick, half turning, so as to fasten a spray of rosebuds in her midnight dark hair. "We aren't engaged, nor shall we be, probably, until it is ascertained whether or not I shall suit my lord. He's rich and he's handsome, if report be true; and that's pretty much all I care for."

"And when does he return from Europe?" asked Constance, in breathless interest.

"In September, I suppose. Come, Conny, don't you want to walk down to the Post office? I'm so tired of doing nothing."

The two girls had just emerged from the shady line upon the quiet country road, when a tall young man of the fair-haired Saxon style of face passed them carelessly doffing his hat to Constance Dale.

"Who is that, Con?" whispered Miss Creswick, turning her stately head to look after the vanishing figure.

"Mr. Egerton's nephew, Percy Wylde."

"The parson's nephew? How handsome he is! Why didn't you introduce him?"

"Shall I call him back?" asked Miss Dale, laughing.

"Nonsense. Is he a villager?"

"No; he is here for a few weeks, enjoying our fine scenery and delicious mountain air."

"Good," said Miriam, nodding her head. "We can help amuse each other."

"Miriam," cried Constance, with a face that was really shocked, "you would not flirt with him merely for a pastime?"

"To be sure I would," laughed Miriam. "Don't be a fool, Conny—men are our natural prey, just as we are theirs."

And she only made fun of poor Constance's indignant remonstrances.

"I hope he won't speak to you, that's all," said Constance.

"You're not in love with him, yourself, cara!" laughingly demanded Miriam, dryly.

And, true to her word, she did not allow twenty-four hours to elapse before she got acquainted with the parson's good looking nephew.

Apparently Mr. Wylde was quite ready for a flirtation—and to speak the truth it would have been rather difficult to avoid falling into Miss Creswick's enchantingly-spread snares. Picnics, boating parties and dreamy rambles up the mountain side, all conspired to aid the siren's plans, while Constance looked on, grieved and troubled, and sorely anxious to warn Percy Wylde against the pitfalls he was so surely nearing.

"But what can I say?" sighed poor little Constance Dale. "Miriam is so beautiful and fascinating, while I am nothing but a country girl."

So the time passed on, until the ripe, full beauty of the summertide was at its height, and Miss Creswick was packing her trunks to join her aunt at Cape May.

"Of course it has been charming here," she said, as she sat on the old farmhouse piazza in the moonlight the night before her departure; but one can't dream on in Arcadia forever."

Percy Wylde sat silent by her side, and she fancied that his face looked unwontedly pale in the moonlight.

"Then you are determined to go, Miss Creswick?"

"I must," she answered, infusing a bewitching softness into her voice. "My future fate is to be at Cape May next week."

"Your fate?"

"The man whom I suppose I am to marry," Miriam added, carelessly.

"Miss Creswick!"

"Mr. Wylde!"

"Then I am to understand that you have been deceiving me all this time?"

"Deceiving you, Mr. Wylde? Indeed, I am at a loss to comprehend——"

"Stop, Miriam," the young man interrupted, speaking in a low, measured voice, which awed the coquette more than any burst of fervid passion or overpowering rage could have done. "So you mean to tell me that you have deliberately enticed me on all these weeks, knowing that at least you should cast me off as a plaything of which you have grown weary, Miriam Creswick. I should scarcely have believed this of you."

Miriam colored scarlet, and tapped her foot indignantly.

"It was your own fault, Mr. Wylde."

"It was—and I accept the consequences of it," he answered, calmly. "I would rather be myself than you, Miss Creswick. A disappointed man may yet find some sweet drops in the cup of life, but a heartless flirt can never wholly respect herself or be respected by others."

Miriam bit her lip. It was not such fun, after all, to be lectured after this fashion by the man she had befooled so delightfully. Nor did she regret the soft sound of Constance Dale's footfall on the porch floor—a sign that her tete-a-tete was at an end.

"One would really think I had been committing a state crime!" said Miss Creswick to herself, her cheeks still flaming and her eyes sparkling in the moonlight. "Conny may entertain him now if she pleases—I'll have nothing more to say to him."

And altogether it was a decided relief when Miss Miriam Creswick and her trunks departed for Cape May.

"Has Mr. Dalton come, aunty?" was her first eager question, when she arrived at the huge, swarming hotel, and began to unpack her treasures of grenadine, crape and lustrous silk.

"This morning," Mrs. Creswick answered, with self satisfied pride. "So stylish and distingue he is, too—the handsomest man in town, I think."

Miriam smiled proudly—how long ago those moonlight evenings at the old Dale farm seemed to her now. Poor Wylde—but what else could he have expected? Who can play with edged tools without incurring the risk of cut fingers?"

"Do you suppose he'll send up his card, aunt?" she asked, "or wait for a less formal introduction?"

But Mrs. Creswick could only leave the answer to this question for fate to develop.

And it happened that Miss Creswick and Mr. Dalton met that very evening.

Miriam was standing in the doorway, a fleecy cloud of white, with roses in her hair and corsage, when suddenly the color deepened somewhat in her cheeks.

"Aunt," she whispered, "he's here."

"He, child? Whom on earth do you mean?"

"Don't you remember?—the parson's nephew, out at Edgedale, that I told you about?"

"Where?" asked Mrs. Creswick, putting her gold eye-glasses to her eyes.

"There—by the door! See, he's coming this way. Why, auntie, he's bowing to you!"

But Mrs. Creswick, without hearing her niece's last words, rushed forward, all smiles and graciousness.

"So happy to meet you, Mr. Dalton. Allow me the pleasure of presenting you to my niece, Miss Creswick."

And Miriam found herself involuntarily courtesying to—Mr. Percy Wylde.

Aunt Creswick, the only one who was entirely unconscious, smiled and simpered and smiled as only a well-seasoned dowager can.

"And when did you arrive from Europe, Mr. Dalton?" she inquired.

"I did not come directly from Europe, Mrs. Creswick," the young man answered, with a slight smile. "I have been spending the summer with a relative at Edgedale."

Mrs. Creswick stared.

"At Edgedale! Why, Miriam has been there. I wonder you didn't meet her."

"I had that pleasure," said Mr. Dalton, with a slight inclination of his head.

"Miriam!" cried Mrs. Creswick, "you never told me."

"Because she herself did not know," said Mr. Dalton, smiling. "At Edgedale I go by the name of Percy Wylde, in deference to a fancy of my uncle, who never loved my father's name or family. And if Miss Creswick told you anything about me she should have merely mentioned me as one of those 'country hearts' it was her 'pastime' to break ere she returned to town."

He bowed, and turned calmly away, while Mrs. Creswick was still in a maelstrom of perplexity.

"Miriam, I don't understand this at all," she cried.

But Miss Creswick did. She understood that her own folly had cost her a rich husband. And when Constance Dale married Mr. Dalton she was forced to be content with the very secondary position of first bridesmaid.—Chicago Herald.

LITERARY NOTES.

General R. E. Colston, late Bey on the general staff of the Egyptian army, who contributes the article on the Soudan—"The Land of the False Prophet"—to the current number of The Century Magazine, had an "open letter" in the September Century, 1884, in which he predicted that the fall of Khartoum was only a question of time, and that the only hope for Gordon's safety lay in his being captured and held for ransom.

The Eclectic for March presents an interesting array of articles, light and serious, and is well adapted to suit a variety of tastes. "From Siberia to Switzerland," by William Westall, sketches in a most interesting way the adventures of an escape from Siberia, and claims to be the actual experience of a prominent Nihilist. Principal Tulloch's study of the Spiritual Influence of Coleridge is a very suggestive paper, and Max Muller on "The Savage" will be found both instructive and entertaining. The story of "The Picture" is both unique and powerful. Other contributions of special interest are "Della Crusca and Anna Matilda" (a history of a curious literary episode), "Charles Dickens at Home," by his eldest Daughter. "Prince Bismarck's Character," "Notes on Persian Art," "How Insects Breathe," and "Go to the Ant," the latter a striking popular science paper. The usual variety of Literary Notes, Foreign Literary Notes, and Miscellany round out a very attractive number. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial subscription for 3 months, $1. Eclectic and any $4 Magazine, $8.

The March number of the Magazine of American History is filled with choice reading. It opens with a graphic account of "The Fairfaxes of Yorkshire and Virginia," from the pen of Rev. Richard Wheatley, D. D., admirably illustrated with portraits and homes. The second article, entitled "Personal Recollections of General Nathaniel Lyon," by the eminent scholar and writer, Dr. William A. Hammond, will command a wide circle of interested readers. Following this comes "The Adventure of Monsieur De Belle Isle," a true chapter in the annals of Louisiana, more curious than fiction, by Charles Dimitry; "An Old Magnolia Charter," by Oscar J. Harvey—a sketch of quaint and permanent interest; "About Richard Bellingham"—the old Massachusetts Governor who in 1641 persisted in performing his own marriage ceremony—by E. H. Goss, and the "Story of Astoria," by P. Koch, are delightfully informing contributions. Minor Topics contains several short articles of consequence. Daniel Goodwin, Jr., of Chicago, contributes a memorial sketch of Rev. William Barry; Miss Morrison writes of "Where a King once Lived;" and Capt. R. M. Potter, U. S. A., criticises, under the title of "Deaf Smith," one of the recent contributions to the Century.

HOW YOUNG JERSEYITES ARE TAUGHT.

The report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and the State Board of Education for the past year contains many important and interesting facts relative to the education of the Jersey youth. In the first place, the total amount appropriated to the support of public schools, exclusive of that raised for building and repairing purposes, $1,[illegible], against $1,807,849.[illegible] last year, being an increase of $81,487.16. There is an increase in the amount received from the State school tax of $21,[illegible], an increase in the township school tax of $11,274.[illegible], a decrease in the amount of interest from the surplus revenue of $453.18, and an increase in the amount of district and city tax raised for teachers' salaries and fuel bills of $48,926.53. The amount appropriated for building and repairing school houses was $524,843.14, being an increase over the amount raised for the same purpose last year of $37,092.33. The total amount appropriated for all school purposes was $2,413,976.10, against $2,[illegible],602.61 last year, an increase of $[illegible].49.

TAX RAISED AND TEACHERS DECREASED.

The number of male teachers employed during the year was eight hundred and thirty-seven, a decrease of fifty. The number of female teachers employed was two thousand eight hundred and fifty, an increase of one hundred and thirty-one. The total number of teachers was three thousand six hundred and eighty-seven, an increase of eighty-one. The average number of pupils in charge of each teacher calculated on the total enrollment, was fifty-nine. The average number in charge of each teacher, calculated on the average attendance, was thirty-four. The average monthly salary paid to male teachers was $51.63, an increase over last year of fifty-one cents. The average monthly salary paid to female teachers was $35.64, an increase of eighty-two cents.

The total school census of the State is 356,061, being an increase over last year of 6,819. The general attendance during the whole year in all counties was for the whole ten months, [illegible],776, against an enrollment of 216,792. Number attending between eight and ten months, 6[illegible],136; between six and eight months, 46,541; between four and six months, 3[illegible],761, and less than four months, 69,678. This gives an average attendance upon the public schools of 122,930. The number attending private schools was 48,962. Number attending no school at all was 8[illegible],200.

HOW THE YOUNG IDEA INCREASES.

There is an increase in the total enrollment over last year of four thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven; a decrease in the number attending ten months of two thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven; an increase in the number attending between eight and ten months of [illegible] thousand and four hundred and six; an increase in the number attending between six and eight months of two thousand one hundred and forty-two; a decrease in the number attending between four and six months of three hundred and thirty-eight; a decrease in the number attending less than four months of four thousand five hundred and thirty-six; an increase in average attendance of three thousand four hundred and seventeen; an increase in the number attending private schools of [illegible] hundred and fifty-five, and a decrease in the number attending no school of [illegible] thousand eight hundred and seventy-[illegible].

WHAT THE THING COSTS.

The average current expense throughout the State, based on the total school census, is $5.26 against $5.18 last year, an increase of $0.08. The highest average is in Sussex county, being $6.8[illegible], and the lowest is in Hudson, being $4.21. Based on the total enrollment in the public schools, the average for the State is $8.[illegible], against $8.53 last year, an increase of $0.10. The highest average is in [illegible] county, being $11.9[illegible], and the lowest in Ocean county, being $6.51. The average per capita expense throughout the State, calculated on the average attendance is $15.24, against $15.14 last year, an increase of $0.10. The highest average is in Union county, being $18.46, and the lowest is in Cumberland county, being $12.42.

Taking the increase and decrease of the grades of the scholars, which must be determined by the grade of the schools, there was shown to be a decrease of one hundred and seventeen first grade, an increase of one hundred and ten second grade, an increase of fifty-one third grade, an increase of sixteen fourth grade, and a decrease of two fifth grade. Fifty-three per cent. are first grade, a decrease of [illegible] per cent.; thirty-seven are second grade, an increase of six per cent.; eight per cent. are third grade, an increase of three per cent.; two per cent. are fourth grade, an increase of one per cent. The balance of the report is taken up with the returns of City and County Superintendents, which, to those interested, are well worth reading.

THE COMPTROLLER'S REPORT.

The report of Comptroller Anderson for the year ending October 31, 1884, shows that the State has no debt, except $1,591,300 of war bonds, which are being paid from the Sinking Fund as rapidly as they fall due. No State tax was levied in the year upon the property of private citizens, excepting the usual tax for the support of public schools, but the receipts have been sufficient to meet all demands and leave a balance on hand over $1,000,000 greater than at the close of the last fiscal year.

The receipts for the year were $3,[illegible],725.99, and the disbursements $[illegible].62. The present balance in bank is $[illegible],471.15. The expenses of the State government proper were $1,070,198.[illegible]. The total assessed valuation of property in the State was $554,[illegible],114.34, an increase of $6,333,045.34 over 1883. Twelve counties, including Camden, Atlantic, Gloucester and Salem, show an increased valuation. Burlington, Cape May, Cumberland and four other counties have decreased their valuation. The greatest increase is in Camden county, which rises from $19,538,749 to $21,946,003.

The principal receipts of the State fund were $737,852 from tax on railroads and $98,378.40 from tax on other corporations. The chief expenses were $197,[illegible] for charitable and reformatory institutions, $287,945.24 for courts, etc., $[illegible] for salaries of Legislature, etc., $[illegible].35 for militia, $[illegible]71.23 for printing, $60,346.68 for scientific and sanitary purposes, and $88,418.7[illegible] for educational purposes outside of the regular school and fund expenditures, which amount to about $1,500,000.

The Comptroller estimates the expenses for the coming year at $1,0[illegible], that the receipts from railroad taxes will be $950,000 and from other sources enough to more than cover ordinary expenses, rendering any State tax on individuals unnecessary.

The school fund now amounts to $[illegible]27,518.69, the income of which last year was $465,657.[illegible]. Of this $100,000 goes to the support of public schools, and the balance is added to the principal of the fund. The fund contains $5[illegible] of United States bonds, $320,000 of [illegible] bonds and stocks, $[illegible],000 of mortgages on lands, and $1,500,000 worth of leases of riparian lands.

THE INAUGURAL.

The address of Grover Cleveland upon taking the oath of office as President of the United States is richly deserving of the unity of praise it has received.

It carries conviction to every impartial mind that its author is a man who means what he says and who holds official place to be a sacred obligation.

On that grand platform stands President Cleveland, and never since the days of Washington did patriotism greet with louder and more sincere plaudits the inauguration of a Chief Magistrate.

His nomination conferred signal credit upon the Democratic party, and his election promises blessings to the whole country—North, South, East and West.

A partisan devoid of malignity, a patriot clear of selfish motives, a statesman in the true meaning of the term, a plain, practical and honest man, he swears to support the Constitution and promote the welfare of all the people, and will loyally keep that solemn pledge.

His inauguration was a glorious event in our national history, even the golden sunbeams of Heaven hailed it with joy.

Corrupt spoilsmen do not favor President Cleveland.

To his honor be it said he is not of them.

Honest and intelligent men of all parties hopefully depend upon his integrity and ability.

Their faith is justly founded.

We trust and believe that the administration of President Cleveland will mark a new departure on the road to permanent peace and prosperity.

It will say to official rascality, STOP!

It will cast out all treasury leeches.

It will recognize character and ability as office-holding essentials.

It will practice economy in public expenditures.

It will seek to protect and advance the good of all classes of people and their legitimate interests, and perpetuate the blessed supremacy of the Constitution and National Harmony.

Brightly dawns a better day.

A joint resolution has passed the Senate of this State to adjourn sine die on the 20th of this month. The people will rejoice at this.

The deep and absorbing solicitude of the average Congressman for the improvement of our rivers and harbors, is one of the puzzles of the age.

Roscoe Conkling was the happiest man in Washington on Wednesday of last week, as he quietly and complacently looked upon the inauguration of the man that beat Blaine.

Senator Stockton says that there is no truth in the statement of Washington correspondents that he is willing to accept the Russian mission. He never heard of the matter until he read it. He is not a candidate for any appointment whatever.

The Senate has put in the usual item appropriating $3,900 to repay R. B. Hayes for the Eliza-Pinkston Commission. As Hayes secured $200,000 by the steal which these men concocted and perfected, he had better pay the expense himself.

Our weather is wretched, unstable, unseasonable and unsatisfactory, but since the arrest and suspension of Gen. Hazen the Weather Bureau has been disorganized. The prognosticating ground-hog and the prophetic beaver are now in charge of the weather.

Ben Butler is now asked to make good a deficiency of $232,921 which appears in his accounts as Treasurer of the Board of Managers of the Volunteer Soldiers' Home during the years 1871-2. He has been bottled up since his late masquerade but this will uncork him.

Immediately after Col. Vilas had taken the oath of office last Saturday as Postmaster-General he turned and kissed his wife. This was a graceful way of indicating that all the mails in the United States could not divert his devotion from the one female who claims his allegiance.

General Hazen is to be tried by court-martial. When it is remembered that that gentleman is at the head of the bureau which has dished out the past month's execrable weather, people will rejoice that he is likely to have to make reparation in some manner for his shortcomings.

It was resolved by the New York Presbytery, Monday, to withdraw the Rev. Dr. Burchard from the pulpit, substituting a younger and more vigorous man. The Doctor is to be placed on a pension of $500 a year—turned out to grass, so to speak. So much for Rum, Romanism and Rebellion.

The Rahway Advocate thinks that Mr. Daniel Manning is a "blot" because he is a politician. The Advocate forgets that Chet Arthur was one of the lowest of "corner grocery" heelers in those days that preceded the date when Grant and Sherman kicked him out of the Custom House for dishonesty.

Secretary Lamar showed excellent judgment last week when he appointed Gen. John C. Black, of Denville, Ill., commissioner of pensions. Gen. Black was a gallant Federal soldier. He has the indorsement of President Cleveland and he has accepted the place. The pensioned soldiers of the country will indorse this appointment with absolute unanimity.

There is muttering thunder, if no lightning, all around the British sky. Bismarck is growling; France is inclined to be troublesome; Russia is crowding on the borders of Afghanistan; and all this in addition to the Irish trouble (which is of itself serious enough) and the Soudanese war, which has to be pushed while the conscience of England is against it.

Somebody wrote to the editor of the Chicago Tribune the other day inquiring whether Cleveland or Blaine had a plurality of the popular vote. The answer as given was "Blaine." There is no reason why Mr. Blaine's organs should go on perpetuating this falsehood, the more especially seeing that the New York Tribune has issued an Almanac in which figures are given as follows: Popular vote for Cleveland, 4,874,986; for Blaine, 4,851,981; for Butler, 175,370; for St. John, 150,369.

HIS FIRST SUNDAY IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

The President spent Sunday quietly at the White House and received several callers in the afternoon, mostly personal friends who had appointments with him. After a late dinner, the family, consisting of the President, Miss Cleveland, Mrs. Hoyt, Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Cleveland, the President's sister-in-law, gathered in the Green Room, when Mrs. Cleveland played the piano and sang sacred music.

CLEVELAND'S CABINET.

The following named gentlemen have been chosen by Mr. Cleveland as his Cabinet, and their nomination was unanimously confirmed by the Senate last Thursday:

Secretary of State—Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware.

Secretary of the Treasury—Daniel Manning, of New York.

Secretary of War—Wm. C. Endicott, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Navy—Wm. C. Whitney, of New York.

Secretary of the Interior—Lucius Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi.

Attorney-General—A. H. Garland, of Arkansas.

Postmaster-General—Wm. F. Vilas, of Wisconsin.

AN UNPARDONABLE OMISSION.

Mr. Cleveland felt keenly the lack of provision for his family party to see him take the the oath. They had simply been forgotten and left out by the Senatorial Committee, who did not forget to provide conspicuous seats for themselves. It seems hard that so unnecessary a drop of regret should have been made to embitter the supreme moment of Cleveland's life. He is said to be a tender brother and a provident uncle to the children of his missionary sister. As a family they are quite decidedly religious. An Albany lady, who said to him at General and Mrs. Farnsworth's reception the Saturday evening before he came here, "God bless you in your new field, Governor," was surprised to find his voice choked with tears in his reply. He seems a strange mixture of stolidity and feeling.—Washington letter in Philadelphia Press.

THE LEGISLATURE.

HOUSE.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

369. Mr. Harrison, appropriates $5,000 additional to the regular appropriation to the soldiers' home, $2,500 to be expended in buildings, and makes the rules for admission more liberal.

372. Mr. A. F. R. Martin, provides for the payment by the State of $20 to every public school having more than 100 scholars, and a like sum for every 100 in excess, providing a subscription has been raised of a similar amount for the establishment of school libraries, and further, the sum of $10 annually in the same ratio, all technical schools to be included.

374. Mr. North, makes it lawful for the legal voters of any town or borough, at a special meeting called for the purpose, to exempt from all local or municipal taxation the capital of any individual, firm or corporation, that may be engaged in legitimate manufacturing business, for any term not to exceed ten years.

BILLS PASSED.

H. 309, enabling townships to appropriate money for the lighting of streets; H. 283, making it unlawful for the governing bodies of counties and cities to purchase supplies, except from persons engaged as principals in the business.

The bitterest political contest that the State has ever known was begun in the Legislature Monday night. The Joint Caucus formulated a series of bills which practically strip Governor Abbett of all his appointing power. They take from his hands the appointment of Lunatic Asylum Commissioners, of Pilot Commissioners, of Members of the State Board of Education, and Judges of the district court. The district courts were included with a view of displacing Judge Allen L. McDermott, of Jersey City, who is a sturdy Democrat. In the caucus Senator Griggs, of Passaic, and Assemblyman Dickinson, of Hudson, made vigorous opposition to the acceptance of the bills by the caucus—especially that one which interfered with the appointment of the Judges. Their opposition was ineffectual.

Another bill of considerable interest in political circles was one of Mr. See's, which abolishes the office of Director-at-large. There is only one such office in the State, and he is the presiding officer of the Hudson County Board of Freeholders. The Board over which he presides is Republican, but his veto has prevented the Republicans from filling the county offices with men of their own party. Hence came the desire to wipe him out of existence. The movement against the Governor was prompted by much the same reason. He insists on filling the vacant places with Democrats. The Republicans called this partisanship as it is, and proposed to throw the appointments into joint meeting. The joint meeting, almost invariably controlled by the Republicans, will be equally partisan, but it is partisan on the right side for the joint caucus. The bills were rushed through the House and subsequently the Senate. With Mr. Schenck, whose own vote, reinforced by those of the Democratic Senators, made him President of the Senate, the Republicans have a majority of one. His refusal to vote for the bills would leave the Republicans without votes enough to pass the bills. It was understood when the Democrats went to the support of Mr. Schenck for the President's chair, that, in return for their aid, he would vote against every partisan bill that might come to the notice of the Senate. It is said now, however, that in the caucus he was one of the warmest advocates of the political bills, and that he pledged himself to aid in their passage by the Senate. Mr. Schenck refused to be interviewed upon the subject, but his party friends represented him correctly, and the passage of the bills in the Senate was a foregone conclusion. Governor Abbett will, of course, veto them. But his veto is a mere shadow. The vote that originally passes a bill can repass it, "notwithstanding the objections of the Governor." The Governor's prerogatives are not very large now. The passage of the bills will reduce him to a mere figure-head.

The passage of the bills cannot affect, for the immediate present, the Democratic control of the State Board of Education. The Board is to meet on the 19th to select a new State Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Apgar, the present incumbent, seems doomed to defeat. Assemblyman Chapman and another, who is a relative of Senator Chattle, of Monmouth, are conspicuously mentioned in connection with the place.

FREEHOLDER'S PROCEEDINGS.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 5, 1885.

Regular meeting of the board, held March 5, 1885, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Bills of J. Stanton, J. C. Jepson and H. J. Schoppe, constables, were ordered paid when approved by the court.

Freeholder Chapman moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, April 2, 1885, at 2 p. m.

JOHN L. CROWELL, Clerk.

United States Militia.

The Secretary of War has transmitted to the House of Representatives an abstract of the militia force of the United States, organized and unorganized, according to the latest returns received at the office of the Adjutant General of the army. It shows the following number of men available for military duty:

	Organized.	Unorganized.

Township Elections.

FANWOOD.

In this neighboring township two tickets were placed in the field—"straight" Democratic and "straight" Republican—and all the candidates of the latter party were elected. Mr. C. W. L. Martine the present Democratic Freeholder and Director of the Board, was on both tickets for re-election, and received the total vote cast—238. Mr. Chas. S. Millner, also a Democrat, was on both tickets, and was elected Justice of the Peace, receiving 236 votes. The following Republicans were the principal officers elected:

Norman Dunn,	Town Clerk,	49 maj.
John Robison,	Assessor,	76 maj.
Wm. Hetfield,	Collector,	53 maj.
Geo. Kyte,	Town Committee,	80 maj.

NORTH PLAINFIELD.

A number of members of both parties over the brook, desiring in some cases a change of officers, met last Friday evening and nominated a "Citizen's ticket." The result, as usual, was its defeat at the polls. Mr. John Whitlock for Road Overseer and Messrs. W. H. Ludlow, Judge, Abram King, Inspector, and Ira Riker, Clerk, all in the Second District, were the only candidates off the regular Republican ticket that was elected. It is, however, just to state that Messrs. B. A. Hegeman and John F. Wilson declined to run. The following figures "tell us the old, old story."

R. Republican; C. Citizens, and * both tickets. The money voted was $300 for legal fees, $1,500 for road repairs, $1,400 for support of poor, and $300 for salary of town committee.

In Somerset County.

In Warren Peter Newmiller was elected Town Clerk, Aaron H. Spencer, Assessor, George Terrell, Collector, Chas. J. Schaffer, Freeholder, and Patterson Waldron, Town Committee.

In Bernards the Democratic ticket is elected, with the exception of O. D. Smith (R.) for the Collector, who had a majority of 35. The majority on Freeholder, 243.

In Franklin township the Democrats elect the following officers by the majorities indicated: Assessor, John C. Staats (88); Collector, Charles Dixon (50); Freeholder, Henry B. Skillman (106); Town Committee, Thomas Cooper (168).

Branchburg elects Republican officers.

Moutgomery is Republican, except on Freeholder.

In Bridgewater the Republicans withdrew their candidates for the offices of Assessor and Collector, and Messrs. Potter and Brokaw, the nominees on the Democratic ticket, had a walk over. A. P. Sutphen, (D.) was nominated by the Republicans for Justice of the Peace, and is elected. The following are elected:

Town Clerk—George V. Vanderveer, D.

Assessor—Wm. S. Potter, D.

Collector—Richard H. Brokaw, D.

Chosen Freeholder—William Hardgrove, R.

Justice of the Peace—Arthur P. Sutphen, D.

Town Committee—Benj. F. Littell, R.

Overseer of the Poor—David S. Kitchen, D.

Franklin—H. B. Skillman, D.

Montgomery—J. S. Hougland, D.*

North Plainfield—W. E. Jones, R.*

Warren—Charles J. Schaffer, R.*

*Re-elected.

NEW-MARKET NOTES.

Mr. George Coriell has taken the residence lately occupied by Mr. J. P. Benbrook.

The Runyon property now occupied by Mr. Robert L. Pierce, has been rented by a party from Cranford.

A sugar social was held at the residence of the Rev. Burdock recently, for the benefit of the Seventh Day Baptist church, at which the First Day representatives seemed in the ascendancy.

The roads are getting into a horrible condition! When will our people wake up to the fact that the present system of laying out money on the roadways is absolutely thrown away, notwithstanding that thousands of dollars have been spent in the last ten years, we have not got a single mile of a good road bed in the township. Reform is needed and should be the cry and watchword.

BROAD BRIM.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Auction Sale of Mr. N. A. Barnett occurred on Wednesday last; it was largely attended, and the goods brought good prices.

Mrs. Letitia Miller has sold one of her dwelling houses on Central avenue to Mr. Wm. O. Morton, who expects to occupy the same on April 1st.

Mr. Edward Harbison has rented his house on Westfield Ave., to Mr. Young of Prospect street. Mr. Harbison has rented and moved into the dwelling home known as Ladds Seminary on Broad street.

Emotion, if forced, has little power except to repel, but even a glimpse of a deep, suppressed feeling haunts the memory, especially if its cause is half in mystery.

Mr. Volk who resides on the Fairbarn farm, Mountain avenue, has been annoyed several times lately with petty theives, who have stolen some of his chickens and tools; he has got a shot-gun ready, and promises to give the thieves a warm reception if it is repeated.

The special election for Chief and 2nd. Assistant Engineer of the Fire Department occurred on Wednesday evening. The total number of votes cast by the three companes were 98. None of the candidates received a majority of the votes, the result being no election. The result was as follows: S. Godshalk, for Chief, received 31 votes from Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1; 7 from Empire Engine Co. No. 2; 10 from Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1; total 48. F. R. Pennington, for Chief, received 17 votes from Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1; from Engine Company No. 2, 18; from Hook and Ladder Co. No 1, 12; total 47; for 2nd Asst. Engineer, B. H. Woodruff received 34 votes from Bucket & Engine Co. No. 1; from Hook & Ladder Co. 1, 4; from Empire Engine Company No. 2, 1; total 39; Burhans 1; Blank 1.

The annual Spring election for Township officers was held on Tuesday last. Their were two tickets Democratic Union, and Republican ticket. The candidates for Town Clerk Mr. Luther Whitaker, and that for Collector Mr. David T. Pierson, were on both tickets and received very nearly a unanimous vote. The contest was between the candidates for the office of Freeholder, Town Committee and Assessor. James T. Pierson, the present freeholder, who was on the Republican ticket, was elected by 101 majority over A. Judson Miller the Democratic candidate. Mr. Pierson received last year 138 majority. Mr. E. Embree, the Republican candidate for Town Committee received 27 majority over Charles R. Peddie an Independent Republican who was a candidate on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Peddie may well be proud of his vote he being a Mugwump. John M. C. Marsh Democratic for Assessor received 204 maj. over Mr. Wellington Morehouse the Republican. There were 427 votes cast; one double ballot, which was Democratic. The appropriations for crushed stone, $2,000, was on both tickets and received but few votes in opposition; that of $250 for Fire Department purposes had 55 scratches, and the appropriation of $500 for lighting street lamps had 62 scratches. The tickets were divided as follows: Republican 241, Democratic 164, Democratic Independent 20, Mugwump 1. A few dissatisfied Democrats, during the forenoon, got up the Democrat-Independent ticket, which received 29 votes, but was considerably scratched for the office of freeholder and town committee. The day passed off very quietly; during the evening some miscreant threw some red pepper upon the stove, which compelled the judges to stop counting for a short time, which was a very light matter under the circumstances. The Judges of Election met on Wednesday afternoon to sign the official returns.

HEADACHES
Are generally induced by Indigestion, Foul Stomach, Costiveness, Deficient Circulation, or some Derangement of the Liver and Digestive System. Sufferers will find relief by the use of
Ayer's Pills
to stimulate the stomach and produce a regular daily movement of the bowels. By their action on these organs, AYER'S PILLS divert the blood from the brain, and relieve and cure all forms of Congestive and Nervous Headache, Bilious Headache, and Sick Headache; and by keeping the bowels free, and preserving the system in a healthful condition, they insure immunity from future attacks. Try
Ayer's Pills.

THE ten plagues of a newspaper office are bores, poets, cranks, rats, cockroaches, typographical errors, exchange fiends, book canvassers, delinquent subscribers, and the man who always knows how to run the paper better than the editor does himself.

THE New Jersey Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held in New Brunswick on the 19th inst. It is thought that there will not be many changes made this year, but those that are made will probably be of an important character.

ELECTIONS for choice of Postmasters under the present administration are already being held in some sections—the one receiving the most votes being considered as standing ahead for the appointment. But the "dark-horse" has the best show for the place.

THERE is some discussion throughout the State press, as to whether this is the proper date for the appearance of the so-called "seventeen-year locusts." So far as our experience goes, these festive birds are like the "equinoctial" storms—they arrive whenever they get here.

NUMEROUS blue birds were seen about the fields in this vicinity last week. It is said that they will have to make two more trips home and back before spring arrives. We don't take any stock in this blue bird story, and prefer to pin our faith to the ground hog, whose "second appearance" will be due in a few days.

IT is suspected that in this vicinity we are to be swarmed with the seventeen-year locusts the coming Summer. They usually appear in June and tarry for a month. They were here in the years of 1800, 1817, 1834, 1851 and 1868, and we of course expect them again in 1885. Their next appearance will not be made until 1902.

THE centennial of the establishment of the Episcopal church in the State of New Jersey, will be celebrated in Christ church, New Brunswick, in the second week in May. Rev. Dr. Garrison, of Camden, will preach a historical sermon. The arrangements are in charge of a joint committee of the Diocese of New Jersey and Northern New Jersey.

AN exchange says: "When you hear a man sneering at the local papers, you can safely bet that he does not squander his wealth in assisting to make them better, and that generally the papers have done more for him than he has for them. The man who cannot see the benefit arising to a town from its newspapers, hasn't the sense of an oyster, and he is about as much value to a town as a delinquent tax list."

MR. JOHNSON LETSON, of New Brunswick, died at his residence in that city Sunday, aged 79 years. His health became impaired last Summer when the New Brunswick Bank failed. He was one of the directors of the bank, and was completely prostrated by the suicide of President Runyon. Mr. Letson was a director in several large industries and one of the best known business men in the State.

ANY person having cane chairs to be re-seated and willing to aid a worthy man in supporting a large family, can have their work well done and at a reasonable price, by leaving their name and address at the Relief Association, corner of 2d street and Madison avenue, when the chairs will be sent for.

THE fifth of Prof. John Fiske's thirteen lectures on the American Revolution will be given at Reform Hall, to-morrow evening, at 7:45 o'clock. These lectures have been both interesting and instructive, and those who miss hearing the balance have our deepest sympathy—for they don't know what they miss.

THE attractive programme that is to be rendered by the College Glee Club, at Music Hall, next Friday evening, will contain a few old vocal favorites besides many new glees, warbles and college songs. The unusual size of the club (nineteen voices) and the excellence of its training, are features of this season's concert.

IT is said that it will be eighteen months before the lens for the great telescope of the Lick Observatory can be ground. It is confidently asserted that this telescope "will bring the moon within thirty miles of the earth." What valuable discoveries will be made, or of what value the discoveries will be when made, are as yet wholly conjectural.

THE election of two members of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, to fill the vacancies to occur by the expiration of the terms of Messrs. Jones and Van Winkle, will take place next month. The former has been nominated to succeed himself, while Mr. Fred. Knowland is, so far, the only candidate mentioned for the place so long and so faithfully occupied by Commissioner Van Winkle.

ANDREW JACKSON SHAMPANORE, a veteran journalist, who some years since was publisher of the Belvidere Apollo, has bought out the Washington Review, and will publish it as a temperance paper. Mr. Nutze the proprietor will continue the ice cream business as heretofore. It won't be long before another sheet we know of, that is now kept alive on the profits of picnic ice cream, will be looking for a purchaser.

THE last State census in New Jersey was taken in 1875, and as it is required that the census shall be taken every ten years, it becomes necessary to perform the work during the present year unless the Legislature should deem in unnecessary in view of the very complete census taken in 1880 by the National Government. It is probable that the census will be taken, however. In 1875 the Assessors of the various townships did the work.

"Independent."

We are in receipt of Vol. 1, No. 1, of a paper with patent insides and outsides, headed Westfield Telegraph, and "Mr. Peckham" written in lead pencil on its corner. It is dated Westfield, N. J., and its editor is one Edward Baumgard. Its motto "Independent in all things," seemingly means with reason, independent of news at least.

Quite Likely

The regular meeting of the Fire Board was adjourned, Tuesday evening, for want of a quorum. It's time something was done about No. 3's engine, as two steamers are not enough protection—in case one should be disabled. If the Commissioners don't move pretty quickly in this matter, the North Plainfielders will be starting a Fire Department of their own, over the brook.

Sign Your Name.

Some people have no common sense, but those that have will understand that Mayor Rockfellow is not likely to be lead here and there by anonymous communications, to investigate alleged violations of the health ordinance, or any other offence against the City's morals, peace, or good order. If you have a complaint to make, sign it "like a man," send it in to the Mayor, and we'll guarantee that so far as it is in his power, the wrong will be righted.

Union County Freeholders.

The results of the township elections for freeholders in this county show Democratic gains. Clark township elects John Halliday, (Democrat) over Thompson (Republican), a Democratic gain. Fanwood re-elects C. W. L. Martine, the present Director. Cranford re-elects John Isenmann, Democrat. George W. Doty, Democrat, is returned from Union. In Linden, George W. Etheridge, Democrat, who was the candidate against Captain Newbury, was elected.

Quite a Difference.

The difference as shown by cities of New Jersey in favor of salaries to male school teachers is very great, but is undoubtedly owing to the fact that there are so few, if any, male teachers in the lower grades. The following table gives the monthly averages in the largest cities in the State:

Camden	$144 28	$39 00
Elizabeth	170 00	31 00
Hoboken	118 24	42 56
Jersey City	130 00	37 73
Morristown	186 50	40 27
Newark	157 64	32 84
New Brunswick	126 00	43 20
Orange	140 00	30 00
Passaic	125 00	38 00
Paterson	168 00	46 00
Plainfield	190 00	40 00
Trenton	117 00	42 30
Average in all cities	$119 17	$42 35

During three years the average monthly salary paid to male teachers has increased $10.56. The average yearly salary has risen from $490.27 to $591.64, an increase of $101.37. The salaries paid to female teachers show a small increase.

New Suits.

The Bicycle Club has just adopted a new suit for "dress parade" that is most refined in its tone and color, although quite elaborate in its cut and trimming. Young ladies subject to paralysis or heart disease are warned hereafter to look another way, "as we pass by."

Another Neighborhood Threatened.

The Union Club holds a regular meeting next Monday evening, when (if there is a quorum present) is to be decided whether the present quarters of the association shall be released or re-leased. The Board of Education, by the way, has its eye on that particular corner as a school location.

Coming Again.

The concert to be given at Music Hall, next Friday evening, by the Columbia College Glee Club, will probably attract a large attendance. The Club's previous appearance in this city two years ago, is still remembered greatly to its credit. Tickets and reserved seats may be obtained at the usual places.

Come Again.

The Y. M. C. A. Course of Entertainments closed, Thursday evening of last week, with one of Prof. H. H. Ragan's illuminated lectures. The subject was "Paris the Magnificent," superbly illustrated by photographs in color thrown out by powerful calcium light. The lecturer was a master of oratory, and an interesting and witty narrator of personal reminiscences. He is wanted in this city again, with the rest of his subjects.

Adjourned Sale.

The sale of the remainder of the lots belonging to the estate of Isaac L. Platt, corner Front and Richmond Sts., has been adjourned to Saturday, March 14th, at half-past four, p. m. These lots will be absolutely sold to the highest bidder without reserve, as the estate must be closed. Maps may be had of Ferdinand Fish, 149 Broadway, N. Y., or E. C. Mulford, opposite the depot, Plainfield. Improvements are contemplated on the lots already sold that will enhance the value of the remainder.

His Last Appearance Here.

A charming concert—with all that the name implies—was the result of the second appearance of Theo. Thomas and an orchestra of 44 pieces, in Music Hall, Tuesday evening. The programme was selected with the intention of pleasing most everybody—but as most everybody failed to be present, only a small gathering was so fortunate as to experience the enjoyable features of the event. Four musical entertainments in eleven days within the walls of Music Hall, however, is sure to reduce the patronage of one or more.

An Old Document.

We have before us a subscription list dated July 27th, 1825, containing a list of citizens "desirous to aid as far as in their power to the building of a Presbeterean church and classical academy in the upper end of Plainfield either in one or two separate buildings as may be thought advisable on further consultation." Of the 58 who are signers of this document, with donations from five to three hundred dollars each, but two are now living—Mr. Manning Stelle and Mr. John H. Coward. The amount subscribed on the the list—which resulted in the building of the First Presbyterian church on Front street—was $1,272.

Helped It Some.

The stage manager of Henderson's Jersey City Academy of Music visited our Music Hall, recently, with the intention of adopting any remedy that his experience might suggest to overcome the acoustic difficulties of stage and auditorium. An experiment in preventing the sound on the stage from passing away among the flies, was tested Tuesday evening, and, so far as it went, proved satisfactory. This ascent and loss of power is undoubtedly an evil, yet, although a great one especially upon the occasion of the Vocal Society's concerts, it is not so unfortunate a defect in the Hall's construction as the very audible echo in the auditorium.

Resolutions of Esteem.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Music Hall Association held Monday evening, the following preamble and resolution were passed:

WHEREAS, This Board has since its last meeting sustained a serious loss in the death of Mr. Alfred Berry, who has been identified with the Music Hall enterprise from its commencement, and who has freely given it the benefit of his energy and experience.

Resolved, That the members of this Board, in being thus deprived of the assistance of their esteemed friend and co-director, desire to put on record their high appreciation of his personal worth, and to extend to his family the assurance of their sympathy.

A copy of the above was ordered to be sent to the family of the deceased.

The Sale of Eggs.

A bill is before Congress stipulating that eggs shall be sold by weight instead of number. It is a good scheme and ought to become a law, because it is just to everybody. A great deal of imposition has always been practiced on the public in the sale of eggs. A gentleman once told us a fact within his knowledge that there once did business in Morristown a grocer who had a hole in his counter for the measurement of eggs. All that would go through the hole he would sell to his customers. Those which were too large he would lay by for his own consumption. To sell by weight would do away with much of the trickery that is practiced in the sale of eggs.—Era.

Clean Up.

Now is the time to have all sinks, cesspools, etc., thoroughly cleaned, so that the coming season may see none of the neglect which breeds disease, or which gives a foothold to pestilence coming from other countries. Those who occupy their own property should take pride in having their premises kept free from filth of all kinds, and should keep their drains and pools in as clean a condition as possible. Tenants are sometimes very careless, but oftentimes they cannot get their landlords to make the necessary repairs to the drains, etc. They should compel all such landlords to pay immediate attention to this work, for their personal safety as well as comfort. The very possibility that this country may be visited with a plague next summer should cause every one to look carefully after all places on their premises that would be betted for cleaning and being kept scrupulously clean.

Healthy Plainfield.

The annual report of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, included in that of the State Board of Health, shows 8,968 marriages in New Jersey during the year, 25,262 births and 21,716 deaths. Of the deaths 7,971 were of children under five years; while 5,298 died of zymotic diseases. The highest death rate was in Atlantic City, 32.30 per thousand, which is due to the fact that there is a large summer population which does not enter into the calculations of the living, while it furnishes a large addition to the number of deaths. The highest actual death rate is in Paterson, 28.28 per thousand; Jersey City with 25.15, and Newark third with 24.70. The lowest city rate is that of Salem, 15.43, while Plainfield is next with 16.25; Rahway third, 17.19; then Phillipsburg, 18.10; Millville, 18.54; Bridgeton, 18.69, Burlington, 18.93. The State rate is 19.90 per thousand, and the higest county rate is that of Hunterdon, 11.12.

Fire.

At about seven o'clock of Thursday evening of last week, fire broke out in a shed adjoining a barn in the rear of Messrs. Ford & Stiles of East Front street. The flames quickly spread to this barn, which was entirely consumed, and then to the stables of the City Hotel. The upper part of the latter buildings was burned out, but the efficient work of our firemen succeeded in preventing further damage and saved thousands of dollars of property in close proximity. The shed where the fire started and the adjoining barn were stored with a quantity of hay and straw belonging to Mr. D. K. Vail, and which was a total loss. The barn belonged to Miss Letson and was insured for $600. Mr. Daly, who occupied the City Hotel stables, lost about $60 worth of straw and hay, which was fully insured. Mr. Wm. Moore owned the stables and his loss of about $300 was fully covered by insurance.

Slang.

The N. Y. Times in its notice of the recent dinner of the "Language Club," thus defends slang: "President Barnard devoted his attention partly to the denunciation of slang. He was quite right in calling the word "mugwump" detestable, but "mugwump" is not slang, but Indian, which is far worse. There is, of course, a great deal of slang that is silly and offensive, but, after all, what we call slang consists simply of new metaphors. To "monkey" is at present slang, because it has not passed into general use and been recognized by writers of good English, but to "lionize" is intrinsically just as objectionable a word, and the only reason why it is not slang is that it has the recognition due to age. To clear our language of all the words that were originally slang would leave it a repulsive and unyielding skeleton, and that mercy that we show to the slang of our forefathers might be extended to the slang of to-day. Instead of anathematizing all slang let us judge each slang expression by itself, and when, like the verb "to monkey," it meets a deep want of our nature, let us accept it gladly."

Literary Note.

We had occasion some time since to speak of that remarkable book by Mr. J. C. Derby of this city, entitled "Fifty Years among Authors, Books and Publishers." It success has been extensive and well deserved, while the following letter selected from many of a like nature evidences the good opinion it has commanded from the profession it treats of.

DEAR MR. DERBY:—I seated myself to read your book on "Authors and Publishers" with grave misgivings as to the general interest you could impart to the very material relations of the publisher and his dealings with authors. I have been very agreeably disappointed, and believe it will have great interest for the general reader.

There are many readers of books, but few are familiar with the complications and cares of publishers in his dealings and associations with authors.

The volume introduces the reader to many most charming scenes and character sketches of authors of the past fifty years, which can hardly fail to interest every reader. I hope the work will repay you for the conscientious and painstaking labor you have bestowed upon it.

Very sincerely yours,
W. H. APPLETON.

Good Opera At Last.

The public, without question, have reason to feel disappointed with the result of any effort that has been made in the past to present opera in this city. They should now, however, and probably will, forget all disappointment in view of the coming of Carleton's English Opera Company, and its appearance in "Fra Diavolo" at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening. We know, from our personal experience, that this is by all odds the best operatic combination outside of New York, and if this community fail to accord it the patronage it deserves, Plainfield need never again claim an appreciation of musical talent in any degree.

Mr. Carleton, himself, is unquestionably the best singer enrolled among the representatives of light opera, and his knowledge of detail and the requirements and attributes that make a perfect presentation, especially fit him as a director. Dora Wiley, the prima donna of the troupe, acts with much charm and sings clearly, truly and with great flexibility. The other artists are all of Mr. Carleton's selection, which is a guarantee of their merit. The chorus is large, and the ladies not only able to sing (which is necessary), but good-looking as well (which is desirable).

The Crescent Rink.

Mr. Evans has been most fortunate in the securing of contractors to carry on the building of his Broadway rink. Mr. Ubdal, in spite of two feet of frost, has already almost completed the excavations for the foundation walls, and Mr. Pangborn's masons have pushed along the brick laying with creditable results. All the brick work below the surface excepting the front wall is finished, and the cellar that is to contain the furnaces and boilers for heating and other purposes, is dug and its walls are built. The contracts for the carpentering will be given out to-day, and those undertaking the work will be required to complete it by a certain date.

Some idea of the attention this great rink will command from passing trains, and other points of view, may be obtained when we state that the tower on the West corner will be 90 feet high, and a silver crescent that is to surmount the flag staff will be 135 feet above the sidewalk. A streamer about 100 feet long, will daily spread itself to the breeze from this point. The front elevation is most original in its design and outlines. The entrance is through an arch of rock-faced stone in the shape of a half-circle, eighteen feet in extent. The vestibule is larger, the ceiling higher and the interior broader than the Music Hall. The thirty-one posts that will be necessary to support the roof trusses, will be each 45 feet long, 12 inches square, and weigh 2,700 pounds apiece.

A Wonderful Invention.

We take the following from the Hartford Post. The inventor is a brother of Mr. George R. Leland of North Plainfield: Hartford is somewhat prolific of inventions for labor-saving in the "art preservative." The most nearly perfect device yet made for type-setting—the Page machine—was invented here, and it has had imitators both here and elsewhere. It has remained for a Hartford typo, Mr. H. C. Leland, to discover and apply the most wonderful and practical invention extant for the distribution of type. He has invented a simple and inexpensive device for composition, but the distributor is the machine with which this article has to do. It would be manifestly improper to describe the machine at this time, as it is not yet entirely covered by patents. A working model has been constructed, which does the work perfectly, and illustrates the possibilities of the principal when embodied in proper form under the direction of a skilled mechanic. This machine distributes type from a galley at the astonishing rapidity of a thousand ems per minute! One man can easily operate it, or it can be run by power—not more than one-eight of a horse-power per machine being required. The average type setter will distribute by hand perhaps three thousand ems per hour; this machine distributes sixty thousand, thus doing the work of twenty men! It would seem as if it were destined to almost entirely supercede hand work in all printing offices of any magnitude whatever. One important merit of the machine is that it is adapted to all sizes of type from pearl to pica, and thus equally useful in book and newspaper establishments. The distribution is into reservoirs, from which the compositor can "sort up" his case without trouble or delay. The public will know more of this wonderful invention in due time, or as soon as the inventor decides upon the manner of its introduction.

The Latest Rinkles.

Washington is to have a $40,000 rink. Our Grover will do his skating there.

It is said that the ladies who frequent the Casino are the most graceful skaters in the State.

The Elizabeth Journal of Monday helps itself to seven items from this column, and credits us with—one.

Prof. Wilson gave a very creditable exhibition of fancy bicycle riding on a Star, Wednesday evening.

It is said that the Madison Square Garden, N. Y., has been leased for five years as a roller skating rink at $50,000 a year.

The tell-tale spot on a man's pants prevents him from telling his wife that he has been occupied in learning how to skate.

Much has been said and written about the dangers of the skating rinks, but we have not heard of any coroners getting rich from their yield of corpses.

A new rink is being erected in Albany, N. Y., the floor of which is to be entirely of glass, and the rollers to be used are made of rubber. The building will cost $50,000.

The band at the Clinton rink is learning to play and skate at the same time. In the near future the performers will join the strains of their music and mingle with the skaters.

A mischievous boy yelled "mice!" in a rink in Newark, one afternoon last week, and very nearly created a panic. It is almost impossible for a girl to stand up in a chair with roller skates on—that is, on the girl.

The 150 names required to insure the giving of a fancy dress carnival at the Casino, have been secured, and we hope next week to be able to give the date and full particulars of the brilliant and select affair as promised.

For inaccuracy the Plainfield correspondent of the Rink and Roller deserves the doughnut. The Casinos may win its third game at polo with the Crescents, but it will do it with hard work and not with "ease."

A number of the most enthusiastic and best of Plainfield's young lady skaters, keep their "hand in," as it were, during the enforced lenten abstinence, by using the kitchen floor in their own residences as an impromptu rink.

Roller skating was first practiced in New York in 1861. The first patent on roller skates was granted to Mr. James L. Pitmpton, and it lasted seventeen years. Since then over forty different patents have been taken out.

Lent is to blame for a certain falling off in the attendance at the Casino; and another reason is the polite but emphatic assurance of the management to several objectionable patrons that the presence of the latter was not coveted.

Carrie Smith, of Paterson, a little miss of twelve years, who does about all that can be done on roller skates, will give exhibitions this evening and to-morrow afternoon and evening. She is very highly recommended as a fancy and trick skater.

Director Hermann's band continues to gratify the Casino's patrons with new and delightful music that seems to inspire even the rollers with activity. Prof. Hermann studys to please, and all thoroughly appreciate his efforts and the efforts of his musicians.

A New York clergyman says those persons who frequent skating rinks are "imperilling their immortal souls." According to an exchange, such persons imperil their mortal heads and various other portions of their mortal anatomy more than they do their immortal souls.

The bicyclists under the leadership of Capt. David Bunyon are perfecting themselves in a drill that is to be a part of a coming exhibition. The public are soon to be offered an opportunity of enjoying an extensive bicycle entertainment under the auspices of the Plainfield Club.

The banner march of Wednesday of last week, secured more of an attendance than many other local attractions of the past. Of the large number of graceful skaters that took part, none was more deserving of the prize than Miss Emma Whitlock, to whom it was awarded.

In this case rinking saved the young man's life. He was supposed to be gradually dying of pulmonary consumption, but while enjoying the sport in a skating rink in Columbia, Cal., recently, he coughed up a tack that had been toying with his respiratory organs for seven years.

There is no blank so blank as the blank that appears before a man when he gets up in public assembly and forgets what he was going to say—unless it is the blank that appears before an amateur in a skating rink when his legs begin to spread and he doesn't know which one to follow.

Next Tuesday evening Master Leopold will give one of his unique exhibitions of fancy riding on the bicycle and unicycle, including his blindfold tricks. Master Bertie Hendricks one of the few thousand "Princes of Rollers" will also exhibit his skill, besides the great feat of skating on stilts.

The six-days roller match at Madison Square Garden, last week, emphatically settled the superiority of small over large rollers. Those who used the smallest, rollers travelled the greatest distances, while those who used the largest ones dropped out of the race during its beginning.

Miss Blanchie Hayden who is said to be ill of pneumonia, was unable to appear as advertised last Saturday, and Mr. Frank Holden a young skater of unusual ability gave afternoon and evening exhibitions at the rink, instead. The latter far surpasses in general the little lady whose place he filled.

The concert given by Mrs. Morrosini Hulskamp in the Morristown rink last Friday evening was not very largely attended. The elite did not care to patronize a woman who had married her father's coachman, and the admission was too high for the sub-stratum of society in the county seat.—Era.

It is a fact that the prettiest girls are always the best skaters. A spectator was recently puzzling his head to discover a reason for this condition of affairs, when one of the gentlemanly aides whirled by carefully guiding a handsome young lady, and apparently totally oblivious to everybody except his companion.

Mr. Conger, whose business engagements prevented his entrance in the late contest at Madison Square Garden, announced his intention of skating against the record at the close of that race. Since then Mr. James Bailey of this city has lowered Mr. Conger's laurels but not his exaltation by beating him in a ten (?) mile contest. Another race between these professionals has since been arranged.

The sum total of the question of the propriety of rinks turns upon whether the management is proper and competent. It is not every man that succeeds as a preacher or doctor; no easier is it for every man to succeed as a rink manager. It is a business which demands men of good reputation and intelligence to make it popular and worthy of the patronage of respectable people, and only falls into disrepute when conducted by the wrong men.

Elopements, it is said, have occasionally been arranged at the rink; but the parlor is open to the same charge. The persons who are waging this warfare against rinks are upon their showing persons who never visited these institutions and do not know a roller skate from a bicycle, and forget that now and then a scandal will attach itself to a Sunday-school picnic, a church lottery or a camp meeting, and that the excitement attending religious revivals has now and then made some mad.

Some Old Chimneys.

The editor of the N. Y. World is eager to a correspondent says: The greatest tobacco-smoker of the century was probably Jacob Hiemeth, of Baden, Germany, who smoked a half-pound of pigtail daily for nearly forty years. He died in 1832 at the age of ninety-four, with a clay-pipe in his mouth. Alfred Tennyson, the poet, now seventy-five, is the greatest smoker in England. Von Moltke the great Prussian soldier, now eighty-five years of age, has been a snuff-taker for thirty-five years. Nearly all the distinguished old men that we know of use tobacco in some form. We never heard of a great man or a man of distinction who had the cigarette habit.

From a chemical examination I have made of cans of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder and Royal Baking Powder purchased by myself in open market, I arrive at the following results:

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of very pure materials, and is entirely free from Alum, Ammonia, Terra Alba, or any adulteration whatever, and I recommend it as a healthful, effective and perfectly reliable baking powder.

The Royal Baking Powder contains Ammonia, and as this drug is not wholly expelled from the dough in the baking process, and as most medical authorities agree as to the injurious effects resulting from the continued use of Ammonia, its use in food should be strongly condemned. Cleveland's Baking Powder evolves more carbonic acid gas than the Royal Baking Powder, and it is, in consequence, more economical to housekeepers.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

JACK'S LESSON.

"He positively neglects you, Nannie; I wonder you stand it."

"I love him so, Lena."

Lena Blair touched the light brown hair of her brother's betrothed very tenderly; but a shade of annoyance crossed her fine face.

"You love him far too well, little one. If you were not so willing to accept any sort of treatment from him I'm sure he'd not act as he does. Now, last night at the hop I saw your pretty eyes turning toward him wherever he was—and he wasn't very near you often. He was deep in a flirtation with Nell Glynn. Why didn't you try the same amusement? You are too patient. I am sure you never said a word to Jack about all his flirtations, did you, Nannie?"

"I couldn't say anything unpleasant to him, Lena," she said softly; "and I'm sure he loves me best always."

"Of course he does, but his conduct sometimes pains you. I know it does. I have a plan, Nannie, that will work splendidly. Sandy Anderson comes here to-morrow. You know him?"

"Oh, very well! He is an old friend, in fact."

"Well, a secret: He is—is my lover. We are betrothed."

"Lena, dear?" with a girlish delight. "I never even suspected! Let me kiss you! Does Jack know?"

"No, child, do you forget the old feud between them, since one—I forget which—gave the other a good drubbing at college? And Jack isn't to know just yet either. I told you Sandy comes to-morrow. Let me lay my plans before you."
